A Few Short Years.

A few short years—and then
What changes time hath wrought!
So many [illegible] we scarce can [illegible]
[illegible] our life, [illegible] are aught
[illegible]
The clouds that [illegible]
Across the sky,
Waves tossed upon the sea,
Shadows that pass
Before a glass,
Our fitting emblems be.

A few short years—and then
Where are the hopes that shone
When youth with flowers enwreathed the hours,
And earth had but one music tone
Of joy for us and ours?
The rainbow's hues,
The morning dews,
The blossoms of a day,
The trembling sheen
On water seen
More stable are than they.

A few short years—and then
Where is the adamant chain
That passion wrought an' madly thought
Nor time nor change could ever strain
Till life's last strife was fought?
A rope of sand,
A gossamer band;
The filmy threads at e'en
The spider weaves
Amongst the leaves
A firmer bond had been.

A few short years—and then
Where is ambition's pile,
That rose so high against the sky,
Overshadowing all around the while,
With its proud boast might vie?
A shadow's shade,
[illegible]
The [illegible] bells
The [illegible] spells
May vaunt a surer stay.

A few short years—and then
Where is the mighty grief
That wrung the heart with torture's art,
And made it feel that its relief
Time's hand could ne'er impart?
A storm that's burst,
And done its worst,
Then left the heaven more clear;
A night-mare dread,
With morning fled,
These sorrows now appear.

A few more years—and then
What of your life remains,
The smiles and tears of other years,
Of [illegible] joys, of sorrow's pains,
Ambition's hopes and fears?
A faded dream
To-day they seem,
Which memory scarce can trace—
But seals they've set
Shall Time not yet
Eternity efface! —Agnes Smith.

A Choice Young Man.

OUTLINES OF A SERMON BY WAYLAND HOYT, BROOKLYN.

Saul, a choice young man.—1 Samuel ix: 2.

About thirty-six miles north of Damascus are the ruins of Baalbec. Here was once a temple in construction [illegible] have been the [illegible] [illegible] discontented, and demanded a king. The Bible is a picture-gallery. See this picture of Samuel, disrobing himself at the demand of the people; not selfishly nor churlishly, but in a way that is grandly unselfish. Let us learn the lesson of making sacrifices in a grand way. Now, Saul comes upon the scene. What a royal man in appearance. He carried less of brain than of brawn. He had that peculiar beauty which the Hebrews call comeliness. It was while Saul was in search of his father's asses, which had strayed, that Samuel meets him and says: "Is not the desire of Israel upon thee?" Saul replied [illegible]: "Am not I a Benjamite, of the smallest of the tribes [illegible] wherefore, then, speakest [illegible]?"

Now let [illegible] at the lessons connected with the history:

1. Observe, that prayer should be submissive. I cannot think the Israelites were wrong in their wish for a king. There is a provision in the Book of Deuteronomy for a king. But mark, they were wrong in demanding a king. They had their own ideal of a royal ruler. David was living, and was a man after God's own heart. But they did not wish God's choice, but a king after their own sort. They asked for a king like the nations around about them had. They got what they asked for. No king of any of the nations was superior to Saul in mien and bravery. He was the ideal leader in battle. Everything that was physically necessary to make a king Saul had. So sometimes God listens to and allows the blinded prayers of our hearts, and they turn to curses. "Thine own wickedness shall reprove thee and thy back-slidings," etc.; "I gave thee a king in my anger," etc. God grants sometimes in the way of reproof. I have seen parents, who prayed, "O, spare my child," mourn that their boy ever lived to grow to manhood. The shadows of death receded in answer to that dictating prayer, but a darker shadow took its place. I have heard young men pray, "O Lord, give me success in this life." I have heard them declare, "That success they would have." In pain, beyond expression poignant, they afterward found out that character, made strong and shining with virtues, is better than applause, than power, than riches. O, friends, read well the lesson, that Israel demanded a king of God, and God gave Saul to them. Let us rather pray as did our great exampler in Gethsemane. Let us never forget that our blessing is wrapped up in God's will, and not in our own.

2. Let us learn that Divine Providences descend to and include what we call the trivialities of life. Could there be anything more trivial than searching for runaway asses. Yet, on this trivial circumstance swung the door through which Saul passed to his throne. Long before Mohammed's power was settled, when pursued by his enemies, at one time, he pushed back a bough that was before a cave and entered the opening. A moment after a bird lit on the bough. As the enemy came up the bird flew away. Said the enemy: "He could not have gone into that cave, or the bird would not have been on that bough," and they passed on, and Mohammed's life was saved. What a world of things was wrapped up in that seemingly trivial circumstance of the alighting of the bird on that bough! God has care over these trivial things, and what he cares for is worth praying over. Brother, you say times are hard. Tell your troubles in God's ear. Don't think them too trivial. Mothers, you have worriment in your household cares. Go to God; tell them to Him.

3. Learn that there may be a fair beginning and a very dark ending. Saul, at first, had a noble disposition. We find him, in obedience to his father, searching carefully for the asses, and, when he could not find them, how afraid he was that his father might worry because of his prolonged absence. We have seen how modest he was. He was of a small tribe, and of a small family in that tribe. Then he was magnanimous. When the people did not wish him to be king he waited for his opportunity. He attributed his first great victory to God, and would not allow the needless shedding of blood. But the drawback was, Saul had not given himself to God. There was another Saul who, when smitten down by the blinding light, cried out: "What wilt Thou have me to do?" His life was henceforth a seeming failure. He loses all things but Saul, the king, has all things—he has his crown. Saul of Tarsus, stripped of all earthly things, awaits his crown. "Henceforth," says he, "there is laid up for me a crown," etc. Saul, the king, lost his crown in death. See the difference. The one gave himself to God, the other did not.

Which choice, friends, is to be preferred? Which do you make to-night?—Metropolitan Pulpit.

John Bright wrote lately a note in which occurred this passage: [illegible] at school can be made to understand how it is just and [illegible] to be humane even to what [illegible] lower animals, it will do much to give them a higher character and tone through life. [illegible]

Georgia Correspondence.

BY REV. JAMES MITCHELL.

Why Inflict a Misnomer on Us.

[We welcome to our columns Rev. James Mitchell, of Georgia, as a correspondent. Our readers will be pleased with the following from his pen.—ED.]

Mr. Editor—There are some who persist in calling our church the Methodist Episcopal Church North.

We object to the use of this name for sundry grave reasons:

1. It is not our true name. It is unknown to our constitution as a church, to all our organic laws, to our Discipline and official books and action.

2. It is a false name, fastened on us to injure us with those who hate the North, and often places our lives and property in danger.

3. It is a disagreeable reminder of all the sorrows thrust upon us by men who aimed at the disruption of Church and country, and of that singular lawsuit, prosecuted by these men in the Supreme Court of the United States, not only to recover money, but by an order of that Court to cut an ecclesiastical organization into two equal parts, abolish the autonomy of the old organization, and create two organizations by a Master in Chancery, who with a stroke of his pen baptizes the new creations with two new official and sectional names, according to the behest of Rev. Mr. Green, John C. Calhoun, and associate attorneys, actually leaving a blank in the famous decree of Court for the word North, which was never filled up, however; for though rendered in an age of absolute slave power, that subsidized court felt that it had no power to create a church of the Living God, whatsoever else it might do. If the Church South claims a human paternity, we are sorry for it. If a man knocks you down with a bludgeon, and in future days, after you have recovered from the injury, have had time to cool the temper, and wash the blood and mud off your clothes, he comes to offer fraternal regards, would it be wise in him to bring into your presence the blood-stained bludgeon and thrust it under your nose? True delicacy would suggest that of all things it should remain at home.

4. It is not geographically true, for at the very time the Supreme Court attempted to fasten this nickname on us we held a portion of the slave territory in Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky, and Missouri, with thousands and ten thousands of bulldozed members further South, as the sequel has shown.

Furthermore, in foreign lands it is undescriptive and absurd. Our Church is now located by conferences and missions in many lands. To our foreign membership it is without meaning, for with the exception of little missions in China and Mexico our brethren of the Church South have no standard-bearers any where to tell the nations of their devotion to Christ or the cause of humanity, to proclaim to a perishing world who they are—except it be in Africa, especially on the western coast thereof. There their monuments will be as lasting as that dark land, and their ministrations to the cause of human bondage will be enshrined in the memory and civilization of nations yet unborn.

If any geographical thought should enter into the change of our ancient name, there is one appropriate change that should be made. Our official name now stands: "The Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States of America." Shorten that name by cutting off the words "in the United States of America," and then you have a name geographically true, to our whole field, the parish of the world.

Here in the South this offensive name is sometimes changed so as to disturb the nerves of brethren much over-sensitive, and we are called the "Nigger Church," "the African Methodist Church," etc. The names are equally absurd. As well might our opponents call us the Dutch Church, or the Church of John Chinaman, or the Hindoo Church, because we have these races in our fold. For instance, we have eight German conferences, at home and abroad, and we have as yet but seven unmixed colored conferences, including Liberia—so that our opponents might as well call us "the Methodist Episcopal Church Dutch" as the Negro Methodist Church or the Methodist Episcopal Church North.

It is not a true name at home, no more than in foreign lands, for we never were driven from the South fully; we always held territory within the slave line, which, thank God! has expanded into a wide field.

5. Finally, it is not charitable to persist in flaunting the actual thing in strife in our faces, when we desire friendly relations. This "suffix" is as disagreeable and offensive to us as the "prefix" "Rebel" Methodism would be to our brethren of the South, a word we now try to avoid in conversation, correspondence and pulpit ministrations.

To fasten that name upon us in the outside world would be to do a thing all the power of the Supreme Co[illegible] do, the very thing [illegible] I frankly tell my [illegible] Church South that [illegible] was seriously [illegible] Conference it [illegible] offended honor [illegible] policy and justice that still remain with hundreds of thousands of our people, to seek a review of that fatal and unwise decree of the Supreme Court, that unjustly and with circumstances of oppression attempted such a scheme. No power on earth can force a sectional name on us. We will have none of it.

Not only do we object to the sectional names pregnant with mischief, but I know from the official returns of the Church South that it desires to escape from its sectional record and name, born not of God but of man. Have they not wisely struck the section relating to the orgin of the M. E. Church South out of their Discipline? and did not their annual conferences in the year 1866-'67 cast 1,577 ministerial votes on change of their sectional name to that of "the Episcopal Methodist Church," desiring to drop the word "South?" For this wise change there stood 1,199 votes, and but 400 votes against it. Thus the change was almost accomplished; it lacked less than fifteen votes. Writers and speakers will please remember that, and not be offended with us when we reject all that will localize or sectionalize the kingdom of our Christ. Blessed be his name! His praise shall fill the nations. May he give us some humble place and part in this glorious work!

An Army Story.

THE TALE OF THE NOBLE MULE OF SUMTER.

The Hartford Times says:—"When Dahlgren's iron-clads began operations in Charleston harbor, the Tenth Army Corps made a sudden dash and drove in the thin line of pickets which the rebels had posted on the eastern end of Morris Island. When daylight came every gun which Beauregard could bring to bear upon the new work began to rain shot and shell, and from daylight till noon there were lively times in and about Charleston Bay. Shortly after noon Fort Sumter opened furiously, and it was feared that an attempt was about to be made by the enemy to advance. There were enough men there, it was thought, to hold it, but there was a deficiency of ammunition, so a mule driver volunteered to deliver the ammunition. The only road was the smooth and sandy beach along the bay, and the distance between the two points about a mile and a half. Half that distance was within easy range of Fort Sumter, and Battery Wagner's guns covered all the way to the sand hills, behind which was the Federal camp.

I am describing this incident as it appeared from the shipping in the bay, and what called attention to it was the sudden waking up of every gun on the southeast angle of Sumter. Looking to see the cause of the furious cannonading everybody was surprised to see a mule team tearing up the beach in the direction of the new work. The driver was laying the lash on, and that mule had its ears straight back and was making its legs go. Occasionally a shell would touch the beach, bound up and explode, and the mule would then hesitate and try to turn back. But the driver would lay the cowhide on with renewed vigor; then the mule would put on another spurt, until at last it became entirely demoralized by the explosion of a ten-inch shell almost under its belly. Every glass in the squadron was leveled at the spectacle. The driver got off his seat, took the animal by the head, whirled it around once or twice, and started it up the beach once more. Fort Sumter flashed and flamed, Battery Wagner belched and thundered, and still that daring driver urged his mule along, though the way was swept by at least thirty guns.

At last he reached his destination, but he could not stay there, and in a moment he was turned around, and exhorting that animal to do its level best. The mule did not need to be told to step out, for in its rear there was roar and racket, and about its ears were flying sand and scrap iron, which seemed to stimulate its fleetness. Down that hard beech flew the mule, the light cart bobbing and swaying, and the driver's arm rising and falling as he dealt out lash after lash. At last they neared the friendly shelter of the sand hills. In another minute they will be safe; but just as they near the place to turn aside, a shell came screaming from Sumter. Everybody could see the huge mass of iron as it roared through the air. It struck the beach directly in the rear of the mule, and with a bound it overtook it and exploded with terrific violence. A general exclamation is heard from Dahlgren's flagship, where the Admiral and his staff are earnestly gazing at the adventurous mule and his daring driver. Fort Sumter's ramparts are black with men, they, too, willing witnesses of Yankee pluck. Along the swell of Morris Island and covering every elevation can be seen the Union soldiers, who stand with bated breath, anxious and full of suspense, and every eye intently taking in the scene. When the shell exploded a circle of smoke hid the mule for a moment, but when the smoke cleared away Mr. Mule had his ears laid back and, with head down and legs lashing wildly out, he was making kindling wood of the cart, which had been badly demoralized by a fragment of the shell. Presently the driver was seen limping to the mule; in a second the mule is free from the cart, and, with the driver on his back and a farewell whisk of his tail, disappeared beyond the cover of the hills.

The thousands of boys in blue unite in a long and hearty hurrah; the sailors wave their hats and shout themselves hoarse, and, hark! the rebels have caught the infection and are cheering too.

Speak to those Boys.

"Do let me have the paper, Annie; you have been staring at that one page for half an hour. Just like a girl, I declare," said brother Tom, looking over her shoulder, "reading the marriages all this time. Which of your 'dear five hundred' has committed matrimony now?" And Tom whisked off the paper with masculine right of possession.

But it was not marriages which had so long engrossed Annie Tremper's attention; it was no vision of bridal festivities which filled her eyes with tears, and caused her lips to quiver with uncontrollable emotion, and made her unable to answer her brother's light question.

Yes, she had read it in clear type:

"Ernest Doty, aged 16 years and 7 months, at his father's residence, 25 —— street. Funeral Tuesday afternoon."

But could it be true? Ernest, her Sunday-school boy, who had sat in front of her week after week for the last three years! Ernest! so full of life and fun that he could not sit still, but kept the whole class in commotion, till brought to order by Annie's pleading, "do be quiet, Ernie," backed by that innate sense of chivalry which only very bad boys wholly lack. Ernest! and a vision of black curly hair, rosy cheeks, and bright eyes came before her that it seemed impossible to associate with death. Yet there it was, that announcement in the paper. Her boy was dead, the funeral would be on Tuesday, and she must be present with the rest of her class. Why didn't she go last Sunday afternoon when she missed Ernest from his accustomed place, the class being a gainer in order thereby, though, now she thought of it, the boy had been quieter of late, and had looked at her several times as though there was something on his mind that he wanted to say. Could it be? No, she hardly dared hope, and yet,— Ah! something beyond grief, beyond the natural shock of death, bowed Annie Tremper's spirit that day. Young as she still was, God had given her the responsibility of a group of immortal spirits to train for him. And she had faithfully done her work in all save one particular. Nothing could ever tempt her from her post. Sunshine and storm saw her in her place early, and with lesson well prepared, while the bright, attentive faces of her class showed the interest with which she invested her teachings, but she never could bring herself to talk personally with its members concerning their own interests in the Savior of whom she spoke. She had long felt strongly impressed with the duty of doing so, but something she could not define had held her back and sealed her lips again and again when thrown by chance alone with her boys, and now one of them had suddenly slipped away from her grasp, gone out into the great unknown, and she could not conjecture whether it was to an eternity of life or a death that knows no resurrection. It is that no young Sunday-school teacher who reads this may ever pass through the agonies of self-reproach which marked that funeral hour, as the other boys of Annie's class piled the white flowers upon the still form of their comrade that this little tale has been written.

It was with trembling feet, which almost refused to do their office, that, the day after the funeral, Annie ascended the steps of the house where her boy had lived. "O Miss Tremper, I am so glad to see you," said the stricken mother, grasping her hand. "Ernie left a message for you which he said I must be sure to deliver. He hoped you'd come before it was too late, but he wouldn't let me send for you because he said you had a good many things to do, and it was very kind in you to give up so much time to the Sunday-school. When he was first taken sick there seemed something on his mind, and once or twice he said, 'I wish I'd asked Miss Annie?' 'Asked her what?' said I. 'How to be a Christian. I've wanted to be one a great while, and I've tried, but somehow I couldn't get on, and I wanted to ask Miss Annie what was the matter, only I felt sort of bashful, and I always thought she would speak first.'"

"Why didn't you send for me," said Annie, with a great grasp.

"Well, he did not want me to, and I didn't see the use. I thought Ernie was just as good as a boy could be. But I didn't give you his message yet. That last Sunday afternoon, when we all knew he couldn't live, he said: 'Mother, I wanted to see Miss Annie again just to tell her, but you can do it. Tell her that I've found Jesus, and I'm going home to be with him. And tell her it's just as she said in the class—Jesus does it all. If somebody had made me understand that a year ago I should have been so happy, instead of trying to make myself good and to make myself into a Christian, which I could not do. Thank her for all the lessons in her class, and tell her it's all right now.'"

Yes, it was all right now, and Annie's heart gave a great throb of relief as she learned that her lamb was safe in the Shepherd's fold, and that her words had shown him the way after all. But that long wasted year, those useless struggles, that young heart yearning for expressed sympathy in its first reachings after holier things which it did not get in the quarter where it had a right to demand it, and the lost influence upon family and friends a year's walking with God, in the sweet attractive "kindness of his youth," would have exerted was all lost to Ernie, through her shrinking conventionalism concerning personal dealing with the members of her class. It was with a very humbled heart and a very resolute purpose that, when Annie next met her boys, she said:

"Boys, I am resolved, through the grace of God, never to rest, and never to let you alone, till I know that each one of you is 'safe in the arms of Jesus.'"—National S. S. Teacher.

First Methodist Newspaper.

The following account of the first Methodist newspaper is taken from Tyerman's Life of the Rev. George Whitefield, vol. 1, p. 471: "J. Lewis started the first Methodist newspaper ever published, and succeeded in securing Whitefield, Cennick, Harris and Humphreys as its principal contributors. The title was, 'The Weekly History; or, An Account of the Most Remarkable Particulars Relating to the Present Progress of the Gospel. London: Printed by J. Lewis. Price, one penny.'"

The newspaper was a small folio of four pages, and the first number appears to have been issued on April 11, 1741. In No. 4 the editor says, "The Rev. Mr. Whitefield intends to supply me with fresh matter every week." The periodical was continued weekly until November 13, 1742, when No. 84 was issued, to which the editor appended the following note: "Now that this first volume is finished, we purpose to begin the next in a more commodious manner. It will be printed in a neat pocket volume, and to be delivered (every week, as it was at the first) at the Tabernacle, and at people's houses, at the price of one penny."

Revisiting the Old Charge.

There is nothing like it—this going back of a pastor to former people after some years' absence, and after a precious revival. How it stirs grateful memories of divine grace to find those "in Christ" and in the church that were a moral distance from both when you knew them; to be warmly greeted by those whose presence vividly recalls to a pastor scenes too tender for any but a poet's pen, as

"By the couch of pain he kneels again;
Again the thin hand lies
Cold in his palm, while the last far look
Steals into the steadfast eyes;
And now the burden of hearts that break
Lies heavy upon his own—
The widow's woe and the orphan's cry
And the desolate mother's moan."

To look at your former home, first at the trees you dug around, and then at the unchanged paper on a chamber wall where a dear soul escaped its bondage; to see the boys and girls you baptized growing into Christian manliness and womanliness; to see the sanctuary cleansed, ornamented, honored; to be kindly greeted by a pastor who more than fills the place the Lord emptied when he sent you away; these are a precious, but a small part of the vacation joys of many a wearied minister as he visits again the spot where he wept and prayed, and sung and preached, and sinned, and was forgiven. The sad experience is to find one he counted a Christian gone back to the world, or one formerly respected as a moralist, now sunk in vice and degradation, and some then "almost persuaded" now farther off apparently than ever from the kingdom of heaven. Some that he left stalwart and beautiful, he finds pining in "pain's furnace heat"—only waiting. It is good once more to sing of God's goodness, to pray, and trust Him for dying grace. It is good for the living to press the hand of the dying.

"Not clear nor dark," as the Scripture saith,
The pastor's memories are;
No day that is gone was shadowless,
No night was without its star;
But mingled bitter and sweet hath been
The portion of his cup;
"The hand that in love hath smitten," he saith,
"In love hath bound us up."

Beyond Comprehension.

When Daniel Webster was in his best moral state, and when he was in the prime of his manhood, he was one day dining with some literary gentlemen in the city of Boston. The company was composed of clergymen, lawyers, physicians, statesmen, merchants, and almost all classes of literary persons. During the dinner, the conversation incidently turned upon the subject of Christianity. Mr. Webster, as the occasion was in honor of him, was expected to take a leading part in the conversation, and he frankly stated as his religious sentiments, his belief in the divinity of Christ, and his dependence upon the atonement of the Savior. A minister of very considerable literary reputation sat almost opposite him at the table, and looked at him and said: "Mr. Webster, can you comprehend how Jesus Christ could be both God and man?" Mr. Webster, with one of those looks, which no man can imitate, fixed his eye upon him, and promptly and emphatically said: "No, sir, I cannot comprehend it; and I would be ashamed to acknowledge Him as my Savior if I could comprehend it. If I could comprehend Him, He could be no greater than myself, and such is my conviction of occountability to God, such is my sense of sinfulness before Him, and such is my knowledge of my own incapacity to recover myself, that I feel I need a superhuman Savior."—Bishop Janes.

An Old Dialogue Reprinted.

"Returning from a council the other day, I overheard a discussion between my delegate, Deacon Grumbole, and Deacon Webfut, of the Baptist Church at Riverside. Of course the topic was immersion, and it was introduced by Deacon Webfut remarking that his pastor, Dr. Jordan, had baptized five persons the previous Sunday. Deacon Grumbole, who will never be outdone if he can help it, quietly replied that pastor Cyril baptized on that day nine persons.

"'Well, I hope he did it in the Scriptural method.'

"'Certainly; our pastor always does according to Scripture.'

"'Well, now, Brother Grumbole, what is your idea of the Scriptural method?'

"'Oh, I got my notion of it from the first case of baptism on record.'

"'What was that? Not Philip and the eunuch?'

"'Oh, no; it was centuries before that. I mean the Israelites when they were baptized in the Red Sea.'

"'Well, brother, that was a clear case of immersion. They were, as Paul says, all baptized in the cloud and in the sea.'

"'You are satisfied Brother Webfut, that they were really baptized?'

"'Certainly; the apostle says they were; and tells how it was done."

"'Well, then, I have just one question to ask. Did they get their feet wet?'

"'They were immersed, that is plain enough. As Paul says, they were under the cloud and passed through the sea, and were all baptized in the cloud and in the sea; if that wasn't immersion, what was it?'

"'Well, Brother Webfut, did they get their feet wet?'

"'Why, that's nothing to do with it; they had water on all sides of them, and water above them, they were completely surrounded by water.'

"'Well, Brother Webfut, as I understand, they went 'on dry ground through the midst of the sea;' and if you can immerse me on dry ground, I am very willing to be immersed. I believe in dry ground baptism, where you won't get your feet wet.'"—Congregationalist.

At the temple of Ularo, in Kyoto, Japan, is seen the largest bell in the world, hanging in a tower on the hill, and is in as perfect tone as the day it was suspended. By measurement it exceeds the great bells at Pekin, China, and at Russia, both of which are said to be cracked. Where the bell was cast, and by whom, is lost in the shades of antiquity. Chinese and Sanscrit characters cover the entire surface of the bell, but no modern Japanese priest or scholar can translate them. This bell is twenty-four feet in height and sixteen inches thick at the rim, and when the priest sound it (at 8 o'clock every evening) its majestic boom, is heard many miles down the valley. None of the bells in Japan have "clappers," but are sounded by suspended levers of wood, used like a battering-ram, and striking the bell on the outside.

General Gordon thinks that the late Georgia election will probably give the Independents eighty members of the Legislature, instead of twelve, the number they had in the last Assembly. In speaking recently of the development of the Independent movement in Georgia, Senator Gordon declared that it was the legitimate growth of the President's Southern policy, and that movements of that sort were inevitable, extending over a large portion of the South.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 3, 1878.

The Southwestern Enlarged.

Our readers will be pleased to notice that the SOUTHWESTEN is enlarged. We add a column to each page and two inches to the length, which adds four to the number of columns and with the increase in length makes an addition of about seven columns of the old length. We are determined to make the SOUTHWESTERN better in all respects this year. The cheering words from the conferences and in the many letters which come to this office help us greatly. Send in your subscription lists brethren and their money with them.

How to Get Subscribers.

Send to us for some specimen copies. We will send them free. Take one into the pulpit when you have your largest congregation and show the paper to the people, and talk to them as if you wanted them to take it. Then read something to the people from the paper that will interest them, and ask how many want the paper on the spot, and take their names and give them a specimen copy of the paper, collect the two dollars or secure a pledge as to when the money will be paid, and as fast as you get the money send the names and money to us. If there are those who want the paper and they cannot pay at once, we will send the paper to them, provided the preacher will be responsible for [illegible].

The New Year.

In entering upon a new year all should remember that they owe life and its every blessing to the goodness and love of God. Every moment during the past year He has watched over and kept all. Had He for a single instant forgotten one, that one would have died. Even when we were doing wrong God in his mercy cut us not off. We should also remember that we begin the New Year just where we closed up the old. Each day our characters are what our past lives have made them. If in the past year we have been true to duty and sought to serve God with pure hearts and fervent zeal, then we begin this New Year better than we did the last. If on the other hand we have during the past year been slothful as christians and careless in our thoughts toward God, we begin this New Year in a worse case morally than we began the old year. We are to-day what our past acts have made us. In starting upon a new year all ought therefore to examine their hearts and study their habits, as in the presence of God and in the light of his Word, and determine for themselves their true condition morally. Brother, be honest enough with yourself to do this, and then if you find the rcord wrong be man enough to go on your knees and ask God to forgive you for the past and help you to do better for the future. If you do this in sincerity God will forgive you and send his grace into your heart to aid you for the future. Having squared the record in secret with your God then see that your outward life conforms in action and word with the truth as it in Jesus. If we thus begin and live the New Year, 1878 will be the happiest and best year of our lives. God grant it.

The Mexican Border Troubles.

It is to be hoped that the Administration will take positive measures to protect the Texas border, and not leave the delicate questions involved in our relations with Mexico in the hands of Mexican and Texan border ruffians. We want no war with Mexico, and it will be a disgrace to the United States if there be a war. The clamor of interested parties who want war should be hushed by positive and righteous declarations and acts from Washington. This nation has already enough territory, ignorance and Jesuitism, to occupy for many years, her best efforts at government, civilization and moral purification. War with Mexico means the slaughter of tens of thousands of men, the desolation of as many homes, and the waste of vast sums of money, and all for what? Simply that the "greatest nation on the earth" may gain a victory over a poor, weak sister nation, whose only return as the price of indemnity could be a slice of its northern territory inhabited by an ignorant, priest-ridden mass of people. If the Administration at Washington has not character and statesmanship enough to manage this Mexican matter so as to avoid war, it will deserve only contempt from all enlightened and Christian people.

The following, from an officer in the army, we clip from the Inter-Ocean, which gives a succinct and intelligent view of the case. The fault is not all on one side:

1. That the people of Texas and a few officers of the army are possessed with a blind but all-engaging mania for a war with Mexico, and they all are doing all in their power to provoke it. Some have been so fool-hardy as to boast frequently that they will seize every chance to keep up sectional strife, and complicate matters so that the United States will be compelled to go to war with Mexico and take the border States.

2. Lawlessness on the Rio Grande is by no means confined to the Mexican population alone. The very worst elements of both nations are gathered together on the frontier on this side. The mass of them are refugees from law, and all men of the most desperate character. They think no more of the murder of a human being than of a dumb brute. They do not work, but gamble, drink, fight, hunt, steal, and are forever moving about.

3. Raids are not confined alone to our side of the river, and it would be a question to decide fully which side is the most wronged. Along the line which I am familiar with—within the last twelve months—not only have the Indians from our Tule Rosa Reservation crossed into Mexico and stolen large herds of stock, but Texans on their own hook have made several raids, killing people, and bringing back cattle and horses. Our Indians in one raid stole eighty horses from Samaniego's brother, last winter, while Samaniego was Governor of Chihuahua. [illegible] The Mexicans in all the little [illegible] Rio Grande are [illegible]

[illegible], a Louisville company, one from Cincinnati, and two from England. These companies actually have agents whose only business is to stir up strife.

6. The use of the Texas militia on our frontier is a most impolitic and fearful evil. This militia is largely made up of bad characters, and is under no military discipline whatever. They are a band of lawless adventurers and freebooters. Mexicans respect and like the United States Government, but have a deadly hatred for the Texans.

7. To annex the border States of Mexico would call for a standing army there of 50,000 men, and be a lamentable folly. The people are of different language, different customs, and adhere to the most slavish form of the Jesuit religion.

8. The only way in which war may be prevented is for the President to see that none but the most discreet officers be given command on the Rio Grande, with instructions to cultivate friendly relations. Some of the officers now here are doing all in their power to provoke war.

9. Our number of troops should be largely increased, so as to be a real guard, capable of preventing raids. From all that I have seen, I believe it would take 300,000 men to whip Mexico, and result in a five years struggle. At present our garrisons are so small, considering the vast extent of this frontier, that to a thoughtful man they seem farcical.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church.

The minutes of the General Conference of this Church, held in May, 1876, are published. The following are the statistics of the Church for 1875-6. Number of traveling preachers, 1,418; local, 3,168; exhorters, 2,546; members, 172,806; probationers, 33,525. These are found in the following annual conferences: New England Conference, 1,515; New York, 2,397; New Jersey, 1,765; Philadelphia, 7,399; Pittsburg, 2,376; Ohio, 5,778; Indiana, 3,598; Illinois, 3,930; California, 249; Baltimore Conference, 6,783; Virginia, 6,738; North Carolina, 6,509; South Carolina, 54,164; Florida, 9,862; South Georgia 19,159; North Georgia, 15,827; Alabama, 11,904; Mississippi, 6,706; Louisiana, 3,424; Texas, 7,401; West Texas, 2,468; Arkansas, 7,620; Missouri, 6,640; Kentucky, 4,895; Tennessee, 11,916—total of ministers, exhorters, members and probationers, 212,053. The denomination has 1,853 Churches, valued at $3,064,911, or $1,672 each on the average; 218 parsonages, valued at $124,800, $618 each; 2,399 Sunday Schools, 8,085 officers and teachers, 87,453 scholars. They raised last year for the support of the preachers and presiding elders $225,880, $160 each; for contingent fund $2,976; for dollar money $28,009; for Sunday Schools $17,415; Missionary money $3,782; for building churches and parsonages $169,558. This Church was organized in 1816, sixty-one years ago, by sixteen ministers, by whom Rev. Richard Allen was elected and ordained Bishop. It then had a membership of 7,937.

The Methodist Episcopal Church has in her communion about the same number of colored people. The African Church has one-fourth of its entire membership in South Carolina. In Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas the African Church has a little over 20,000 members while the Methodist Episcopal Church has more than that membership among the colored people in Mississippi alone. Each church is doing a great work in the South and may the success of each increase year by year.

The Kemper County Massacre.

The Cincinnati Gazette has been publishing accounts of the murder of the Chisholm family, which so shocked the whole nation, and which occurred in Kemper county, Miss., a few months since. Among other things is an interview with Mrs. Chisholm, who is now employed in the Treasury Department at Washington. Speaking of those who murdered her family, she said:

"They were all residents, and what may strike you as strange, all religions were represented. There were Catholics, Presbyterian elders, and most of all I noticed two Methodist class-leaders that were very active all through the matter. One of these men was a great exhorter, and had often labored with us for the good of our souls. At the last camp meeting I attended, this man got so 'happy' he shouted at a great rate, and came up to Mr. Chisholm, and took him around the neck, and begged him to go forward, and said: 'It is all you lack, Judge, to be a first rate man—all you lack is religion.' And that man helped kill my husband."

The Gazette also publishes the account of the hanging of Walter Riley, a mulatto, in Scooba, Kemper county, Miss., for [illegible] Dobbs [illegible] Chisholm had instigated the murder of Gulley. Every effort was made [illegible] Chisholm before being hung, but he protested to the last that he [illegible] because Gulley had declared that he intended to shoot him (Dobbs). This then effectually does away with the plea that Judge Chisholm had anything whatever to do with the murder of Gulley.

The hanging of Dobbs was right, but what now about the murderers of the Chisholm family and others? The deed was done in cold blood, the names and places of the murderers are well known. We predict that they will not be touched. It has been practically settled that the murder of Republicans in the South is a crime that cannot be punished.

Bishop Foster to the Preachers.

We can give no better New Year reading to our preachers than the following words of Bishop Foster, addressed to a conference class of preachers:

You must understand that, as a church we do not mean to use the phrase "called of God," as men are called to the ordinary avocations of life. That is the interpretation given to it by some of our sister churches. They say that a man who is specially adapted to be a farmer, merchant, lawyer, physician, or aught else, is called to that profession; and so, if a young man has a genius to understand religious truth, and shows a taste for it, has a fluency of speech, a pleasing manner, and is able to present truth clearly and forcibly, he has the divine call, and that theory supplies the pulpit to a very large extent. We do not believe the call is simply "an ascertained adaptation to a work," but that it is a direct deliverance in the consciousness of a young man, wrought there by the Holy Spirit, and unmistakably impressed, that the Lord God has come to you personally and laid it on your conscience by the Holy Spirit that it is your duty to devote your life wholly unto this work; and it becomes most important for you to be certain it does not run counter to your convictions, and that the declaration you are about to make is not adopted with some mental reservation or equivocation. For a young man, I think the ministry is a most attractive position, and therefore there is great danger lest the mere worldly temporal advantages should draw him there instead of the Holy Spirit.

A minister ought to be a gentleman in appearance, and ought to live a gentleman's life. It frees him from many of the inconveniences of labor—of labor with the hands, and labor in uncomfortable business. It takes him aside and gives him a select position in society, and causes men to look up to him with honor and esteem; and there is no young man but feels the attraction of these things, and there are hundreds of young men in our pulpits with no other or higher idea of the ministry than this. I cannot doubt that many find their way into the pulpit because it is a life of easy elegance; and having made their mistake, they prosecute and continue it, and mar a life which might be useful to their fellow-men and bring glory to God if spent in other work and employment, while the responsibility of the mistake rests partly on those who allowed them to enter this sacred calling. No man has a right to stand in the pulpit if he be not designated of God; and if he be, he goes there with the motive that arises from such a designation; not that he may have a life of ease, but that he may exercise the functions of a minister of Jesus Christ with a deep conscientiousness.

God does not call unholy men into the ministry, and I do not think he calls men of defective character, and I am sure he does not call one who has not a strong religious character, a deep religious experience, an earnest conscientiousness, a feeling of God's presence in his heart day by day. It is the fundamental prerequisite of this Christian calling that a man should have these qualifications. If he have an eccentric character, a malformed body, an ill-adjusted mind and affections, [illegible] I believe [illegible] quisite of evidence, that the person be a rounded and complete man. He ought not to be marred by inheritance, nor come from very bad stock. If he has bad or impoverished blood, the Conference ought to be very delicate in considering his case; the more so if he comes from conditions where his character is warped, and where dangerous possibilities have been placed before him. If a stone comes from a dark spot, it should be carefully examined to see that it is a jewel and not a counterfeit. I hold, rightly or wrongly, that the minister who stands in this pulpit, or any pulpit, by virtue of his being a minister, should possess these qualities, and show that he is one of the best of men in the town where he lives; and if he cannot keep that position worthily, when he is to be called in question by his tempers, words, acts, or want of temper, want of words or act, he should be sent back to private life.

These elements of character are obligatory upon men everywhere, because everything that can be in a man is obligatory upon him. These things are indispensable to a preacher of the gospel, and no man has a right to this office who fails in them; and when a man is habitually a subject of complaint which shows he lacks delicacy of organization and refinement of character, which lacking makes him an offense wherever he goes, he ought to be relegated to the plow, or somewhere else. The Conference has no right to send a man from pulpit to pulpit to harrow the people. We are called, first of all, to be men, taking that word in the broad, generic sense; and, secondly, we are called to be Christians; and, thirdly, we are called to be qualified to do this work, for the simple facts of our being men and Christians are not sufficient qualifications for this work. The third point is just as important as the other two.

The fact that you are called to preach is no reason that you should go to preaching now. The forgetfulness of this important distinction has resulted, in many, many cases, in the lifetime marring of a man who might have been a good minister, but who is now an abortion. The call you now have is a call to get ready to preach. No man is called to preach at once; or if there be such a case, it is a very rare case. In such a case it must be supposed that God has laid his ordination upon a man before he is full-fledged and developed, which I do not think is his ordinary plan. I believe he often calls men to preach who do not know the first rudiments of preaching, and their sermons would be a burlesque. God sees in them, however, good elements; and always, when he calls a man, he sees good elements, and likelihood of decent, holy character; he sees what will make up a man and raise him to preach the gospel, but first he has to do the necessary work of preparation for it, without which no man can succeed.

It is absurd to think that the Holy Ghost will preach through us without aid. It is not often that God makes a deliverance in a man by miracle; and therefore, I repeat it, a call to preach is not a call to go to preaching now. It is not an ignoring but rather an honoring of the Holy Spirit's agency to properly qualify ourselves for work; and then, doing our part faithfully, to trust him for his promised assistance; recognizing the great fact that he always works by means and by man's co-operation with him for the achievement of spiritual results. A man may put it off for a few years, and put himself under a course of educational training. I know God calls uneducated men to preach, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred he does so; but that does not mean that they are to preach without education, nor does it mean that education is not a necessity to preaching, or that the Church should thrust an uneducated boor into the pulpit. I do not say that the same curriculum in every instance is necessary before any young man ascends the pulpit. I have no erratic notions on that subject. I know the field is a broad one, and has a variety of wants—some men more, and some less, cultured than others; but this is a point upon which we should exercise the utmost vigilance. If a man comes up without education, we must see if there be not some way which he may be turned into the college before he is turned into the pulpit. It cannot be, ought not to be, always done. There are men who are powers for God, who have never seen the inside of a college, and we may find many nuisances in the pulpit who come from the college as well as from elsewhere. That word "nuisance" seems hard, but it is expressive, and you know its meaning.

The indifference with which the news of the defeat of Osman Pasha at Plevna was received at Constantinople, would seem to confirm the report that, in that city, there is something more feared than the Russians—that is, a famine. The exportation of grain has several times been prohibited, and afterwards permitted, until now the granaries are empty; and it is with difficulty any breadstuffs can be obtained, notwithstanding a recent decision of the Council of Ministers, exempting from duty wheat, barley and Indian corn. In the provinces the local authorities are making efforts to provide against the approaching evil, and only a short time ago two hundred car loads of wheat, destined for Constantinople, were seized at Kara-Agatch, by order of the Governor-general of Adrianople. At Salonica—the scene of the Bulgarian massacre—the authorities have prohibited the exportation of breadstuffs.

Rev. Dr. Braden, President of the Tennessee College, offered the following resolution at the late session of the Conference, and it was adopted:

"Resolved, that the Tennessee Conference recommend to the Presiding Elders to make arrangements for the preachers to attend the Central Tennessee College two or three months during the coming conference year, at such time as they may deem best."

This is a most wise recommendation, and we hope will be carried out.

QUINNEBASSET GIRLS,

by Sophie May, is a sprightly tale, depicting in a natural and pleasing manner the characteristics of life in a country town. It carries the reader entirely out of the range of the fervid and sensational literature of the day into a more simple and healthful department of fiction. Altogether the "Quinnabasset Girls" are quite as charming as girls always are—or ought to be. For sale by Eyrich; price $1.50.

"ISLES OF THE SEA"

Is the sixth and last volume of the second series of "Young America Abroad," and contains the history of the academy squadron during its voyage, "homeward bond," across the Atlantic. The title of the book, "Isles of the Sea," indicates the character of the foreign travel in which the students of the institution were engaged; and in the pursuit of knowledge they visit the Madeira Islands, the Canaries, the Azores, the Bermudas, and one vessel of the fleet extends its cruise to the Cape Verde Islands. As in its predecessors, the professor of geography and history has something to say about each of the islands visited, and the surgeon and sanitary officer continues to enlighten the young gentlemen who seek his companionship in their rambles on shore. This last volume of the Oliver Optic (William T. Adams) series fully sustains the high reputation of the preceding ones. Such stories of travel abroad, when well written, as these are, never fail to interest. Lee & Shepard, publishers. For sale at Eyrich's; price $1.50.

Christmas Festivals in New Orleans.

We publish notes on the Christmas festivals among the churches in this city, as far as reports have been received:

AMES M. E. CHURCH.

Through the leadership of C. H. Shute and the teachers of Ames Sunday School, a most delightful evening was spent. The school met in the chapel at half past six o'clock, where an hour was spent in simple amusements and singing. At half past seven all parties repaired to the main auditorium, where, after a short address by the pastor to the children, old Santa Claus, from a well-laden tree, disbursed to the school his annual gifts. Each one received something, and a right merry time they had. The reporter will sum it all up in brief by saying that Ames never had a better time. The audience of spectators quite filled the room, and everything made all wish that Christmas might come oftener than "once a year."

FIRST GERMAN CHURCH.

The First German Church, Rev. pastor, held its festival

The effect of the entertainment has been excellent in sending forth a good influence among the people in behalf of the church and its friends. Mr. H. Wellmann is the industrious and [illegible] superintendent, and he is ably assisted by D. Holdrich, J. B. Meyer, C. F. Pfeiffer and others. The singing was conducted by the church choir, which has been organized and drilled by the pastor. Misses Louisa Meyer and Amelia Erbach assisted in training the children for the literary exercises. All the committees and officers and teachers did their parts well. Two hundred and twenty-five presents were distributed.

SECOND GERMAN CHURCH.

The Second German Church, Rev. J. Kienirle, pastor, held its festival Wednesday night. Many could not get in the house so large was the attendance—and in every respect the entertainment was creditable. The house was tastily decorated, and the children acquitted themselves well. The superintendent, Bro. C. Winnenberg and Rev. B. Koob deserve special mention and credit for their work in arranging and carrying out the programme. All helped and did their duties well. Two hundred and sixty presents were distributed.

THIRD GERMAN CHURCH.

This church held its festival on Christmas eve, Rev. J. Ueber, pastor. The Superintendent, and Assistant, Bro. [illegible], had an excellent programme arranged and carried it out creditably. The music, speeches by the children, and presents were all suited to Christmas times. By special [illegible] the choir from the [illegible] Church sang several pieces and added much to the interest of the occasion.

CAMP PARAPET.

Our church at Camp Parapet, Rev. R. W. Overton, pastor, held a Christmas Festival on Christmas night. The large house was packed. Over two hundred presents were given away from ten large trees, arranged in form of a large arch. Rev. [illegible] read an essay, Rev. Celebrated their sixth anniversary, and held in connection, a Christmas festival on Thursday evening last. By invitation of the pastor, Rev. E. Wayne, we were present. International Sunday-School Convention.

The Executive Committee to whom was intrusted the calling of the Second International (Seventh National) S. S. Convention—comprising the S. S. workers of the United States and Canada—have unanimously decided upon Atlanta, Georgia, as the place of meeting, and said Convention is hereby called to meet in that city on Wednesday, April 17th, 1878, at 10 a. m., continuing its sessions till Friday Evening, April 19th, inclusive.

Questions of vital interest to the Sunday School cause throughout the world, will come before this Convention, and the Committee earnestly urge the securance by each State and Province of full delegations who will surely attend and fitly represent their constituency in this great department of Christian work.

The basis of representation will be as at Baltimore; each State and Territory [illegible] send as delegates [illegible] number of its entire congressional delegation, [illegible] Senators; and Canadian representation in the same proportion.

Where there exists State or Provincial Associations, Unions, they are entitled to appoint said delegates, but in the absence of these, application should be made to Rev. Geo. A. Peltz, Jamestown, N. Y., Chairman of Committee on Delegates.

[illegible] Middleton, 805 Broadway, New York, will have charge of the Bazaar, to whom application for space should be addressed.

An outline programme will be published soon and information concerning Railroad facilities will be given by the Chairman as early as practicable.

All duly [illegible] delegates are [illegible] a hearty welcome to the homes of the citizens of Atlanta by forwarding—not later than April 1st—notice of their appointment to W. S. Whitby, Esq., Atlanta.

Let then the servants of the Lord gather with full ranks to give glory to the name of our God for what He hath wrought; and to seek in His name and spirit, by wise counsels, to push on the mighty work.

"Let the redeemed of the Lord say so, whom He hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy, and gathered them out of the land, from the East and from the West, from the North and [illegible]."

The holiday week was a lively one, conveying the impression of a business revival in the principal thoroughfares.

Col. T. S. Hardee is preparing and will shortly issue a new topographical map of New Orleans and vicinity. It is made by the new photo-engraving process, and will be far superior to any map of the city heretofore published. Not only the streets, street railways, canals, etc., will be shown, but also the business blocks, public buildings and even private residences will be separately given. Such a work will be invaluable to our business public.

Rate to Mississippi Conference.

Mr. C. D. Lawrence, Assistant Superintendent of the Vicksburg & Meridian Railroad, writes me, December 24th, that delegates to the Mississippi Annual Conference, to be held at Oxford commencing January 9th, 1878, that pay full fare will be returned free upon [illegible] Conference certificate signed by the Secretary of the Conference.

Mr. A. G. Knapp, General Freight and Ticket Agent of the Mississippi and Tennessee Road, writes me, under date of December 22d, that all persons paying full fare to the Conference over that road, will be returned free, on presentation of certificate of Conference Secretary to that effect, provided that they return not later than the 23rd inst.

The Mobile and Ohio Railroad will sell tickets at three cents per mile each way to those attending the Conference.

Meeting of the General Committee of Church Extension.

The General Committee of Church Extension met at No. 1,020 Arch street, Philadelphia, Thursday [illegible]

The detailed statement shows a small decline in the receipts from [illegible] the General Minutes of the conferences will undoubtedly show, as heretofore, that a large number of pastoral charges have reported nothing whatever, and another large number very insignificant amounts. In but a few comparatively is anything like an adequate appreciation of our cause indicated. In 1876 there were upon the General Minutes [illegible] pastoral charges, twelve more than in 1875. Of these 1,318 reported collections of $10 and over, a decrease in this class of of 319; and 4,625 reported collections of less than $10, being 260 more than in 1875; while 3,291, an increase of 71, reported no collections.

We have every year adverted to this subject, and again invite your earnest attention to it. We are reaching a period in our history when we may resonably hope to receive larger amounts by bequest, and thoughtful men and women, who are looking where they can use money to advantage in benevolent work, are not likely to overlook our Loan Fund, but there can be no proper success in securing collections from the conferences without the hearty co-operation of the pastors in the methods prescribed by the Discipline. It is impossible to resist the conviction that there is a great fault here. In any great industrial institution, method, sytematic attention to the work to be done, is imperatively necessary. The Church, as to its benevolent work, is a great industrial institution, and the Methodist Episcopal Church prescribes an excellent system. How shall the observance of this system by all the work be secured? This question should receive your most serious attention, for its solution will insure our complete success.

"Every year you ask each conference to put into our treasury a definite sum. The amount is small. Divided among the conferences, the average is less than $2,000 each; among the pastoral charges, and it is less than $10 each; among our members, and it is less than 10 cents each. An average of half a cent a week from each of our members would more than double the amount you ask. It is certainly within easy reach, and yet for years together we have received less than half the amount you have asked the conferences to contribute. Why is this? [illegible] the amount to be asked [illegible] immediately notify all the presiding elders and Conference Boards, calling attention to the provisions of the Discipline, asking that it be distributed for collection among the several districts and pastoral charges, and that each be notified at an early period; and then we report to you, as we do now, and to the Church, the result.

"It is clear, our financial system breaks down before reaching the people. Does it break down in our hands? in the hands of the presiding elders? or in those of the pastors? Or do the people fail to respond with the cause before them? How many of our congregations have the sermons for which the Discipline makes provision? In how many are contributions solicited for this cause? We are well persuaded that if the Disciplinary plans were faithfully carried out, we would receive every year the full amount asked of the conferences severally."

The report then gave the receipts, by conferences, which will be published in the Annual, as usual, at the end of the year, when the receipts are all in.

There was a strong disposition on the part of the Committee to reduce the amount to be asked of the conferences still lower, but after a free discussion, in which the fact was brought out that in a number of cases in which the plan of the Discipline had been carried out more than the proportion heretofore asked had been obtained, and in no case had the effort been made with a contrary result, it was decided to make but little reduction, and the following list of amounts asked and authorized was adopted, in the earnest hope that a much fuller response will be made next year:

The appropriations authorized will place to the credit of the conferences severally a proportion of the collections actually taken during the year, out of which needy Churches will be aided on application as the Discipline prescribes and recommended by the Conference Boards. What the collections may fail to provide, the Board may supplement by loans from Loan Fund, but each case will be determined on its merits as the facts shown in the application may require and justify.

A sub-committee of six—two from the General Conference Districts, and two from the Board—inquired into the work and expenses of the office, and recommended no change, and the General Committee concurred unanimously.

The Board was recommended to co operate in the publication of the Church Manual, recommended by the last General Conference, provided the other benevolent societies shall concur.

The business sessions of the Committee closed on Friday, but most of the members remained over the Sabbath, preaching for a number of the pastors, who took the collections. The amounts reported were about the same as last year, Spring Garden street Church leading the van which nearly $1,200, and Arch-street following closely with nearly $1,000.

Jan. 13, 1878—ASA FAITHFUL TO HIS GOD.

SCRIPTURE—2 Chron. 14: 1-11.

Golden Text—"Lord, it is nothing with thee to help, whether with many or with them that have no power.

TOPIC—"More than conquerors through him that loved us."—Rom. 8: 37.

(Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.)

The first thing that strikes us in looking over our lesson is the assertion that Abijah "slept" with his fathers. Very often in the Old Testament is death spoken of under the beautiful term of sleep. And if he slept, that carries with it the idea of waking. The repose of sleep must some time or other be broken. It is nonsense to say that writers of the Old Testament and the people to whom they wrote knew nothing about a future life. It argues most an unfearing and delightful assurance concerning it, when they could lay their dead away and speak of them, not as those whom they had lost, but as those who were merely sleeping. They buried Abijah "in the city of David"—the degenerate descendant by the side of the kingliest of kings. But the manner of his burial counted nothing as to his awaking. Royal genealogies and monumental certificates of character do not avail as against that more perfect record that is kept on high. There, he only is royal who, through the blood of Christ, has become a son of God.

To Asa the high compliment is paid that he "did that which was good in the sight of the Lord his God." He did not act with reference to what men would say or think. He did not try to have a merely popular administration. He commanded the people to seek God. He brought before them no new deity. He commanded them to seek the Lord God of their fathers. And that phrase "of their fathers," could not have failed to bring up to the minds of that erring nation all that God had been to them in times past. In those few words was contained all that God had done for Abraham, for Isaac, for Jacob, all that he had done in the delivery of his people from bondage, the miracles he had performed for them in their desert wanderings and in the conquest of the promised land, and all his wonderful patience in the frequent rebellions against his divine rule. They were enjoined to seek him who in times past had been their greatest help. They were to "seek" the Lord. How suggestive that is of their having strayed away from him! They were to seek him with their hearts, and not merely in rites and ceremonies. "And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart." But seeking was not all that they had to do. He commanded them "to do the law and the commandment." As one of the evidences of sincerity, God demands that those seeking him shall observe his law. They must not only cease to do evil, but learn to do well. They must bring forth fruits meet for repentance. But he did not stop with merely commanding them. He removed from them the temptations to [illegible] well as from the country districts evil. From the cities of Judah, as he took away the high places and the sun, or Baal images. It is poor legislation that aims only to punish offenders when the evil itself can be removed. It is no use to fine and imprison drunkards, when the city governments license the saloons that make them. And, if the cities were only regulated, how much purer the country would be! For from the cities, as from corrupted springs, flow streams of influence that demoralize the land. Asa commenced his reign most wisely by purifying these centers of impulse.

As a wise king should, in the time of peace, Asa prepared for war. He commenced to fortify certain of his cities. What cities are here referred to, it is impossible to tell. Geba and Mispah were not fortified until afterward (16: 6) and so it cannot mean them. It would seem as if a general strengthening of all the cities of Judah were intended.

One of the things that Asa did was to reorganize his army. Judah furnished him 300,000 men who were armed with the long spear and shield. The shield was one that was so long as almost entirely to shield the whole body. These made up his heavy battalions. Little Benjamin contributed 180,000 men whose equipment consisted of a short, round shield and a bow. They were the lighter troops—effective, however, for Jacob, in prophetically delineating the characters of the twelve tribes, said of this one; "Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf; in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil." Gen. 49: 27. The number, though "round," must approximate pretty near the facts, and they show how densely the land was populated.

The invasion of Zerah demonstrated the wisdom of all his precautions. The number ascribed to him is, more even than the others, an estimate. The "thousand thousand" is nothing more than a way of saying he had a countless multitude. The battle was set in array at Mareshah, the southernmost of the cities fortified by Rehoboam on the direct route to Egypt. Thither Asa hurried to stop his foe on the frontier before he could do any great amount of damage. From his fortifying, and from his energy in meeting the enemy, one can easily see that Asa was a good general as well as a devout servant of the Lord. He set the battle in array himself before he called upon the Lord. He did all he could before he asked, for divine help. Some one said of a certain celebrated evangelist that he planned for a revival as though it all depended upon man, and then he prayed as if it all depended upon God. Such seemed to have been Asa's way of conducting a battle. And such a method is sure to succeed in either case. The faith exhibited by Asa has nothing superior to it even in the better days of David.

The battle was joined. Half a million of men against double their number. Humanly speaking, but one result could follow. Defeat was certain for the weaker force. Mathematics would prove it. But in God's calculation numbers count but little. The majority was on the side of Judah, for God was on that side. "So the Lord smote the Ethiopians before Asa and before Judah, and the Ethiopians fled." This time there was no rush of waters as in the crossing of the Red Sea, no terrifying thunder as at Mizpah, no noise of chariots and horses as at Samaria, no fire from heaven nor sudden pestilence, nor visible miracle of any kind, but, all the same, the Lord nerved the arms of those that fought and gave them the victory. And when God gives a victory, it is not apt to be a temporary one. "They could not recover themselves." No further invasion was experienced from that direction until B. C. 609, some three centuries later. Besides that, the Jews carried home "exceeding much spoil." In such a bountiful way did God reward Asa for his trust in him. And for us all he is "able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think."

National Repository,

A CHRISTIAN MAGAZINE,

Rev. D. CURRY, D.D., Editor.

Begins Jan'y, 1878. Try it one Year.

ONLY $3 A YEAR.

"The scope and character of the magazine shall be that of a first-class religious and literary monthly, of the brightest character attainable, and pervaded, whether in its general or religious articles, by a thoroughly Christian spirit."—Order of the Committee.

Under these directions, it will be devoted to General and Religious Literature, Biographies and Travels, Criticisms and Art.

A sufficient number of the best writers for the press are employed to furnish all the variety in the several departments which their scope and importance require to make them rich and instructive.

The editorial department will be a feature of the magazine. Rev. Dr. Curry, both experienced and successful as an editor, brings to his duties the purpose of giving his whole strength to the work before him.

Each number will contain one or more articles illustrated with Wood Engravings, in the best style of this art, adding beauty and value to the pages.

The twelve numbers for the year will contain 1,152 pages of reading-matter, which, published in book form, would make not less than fifteen volumes, worth $1.50 each, and will comprise a variety that will be more interesting and valuable to the general reader than can be procured in books for many times the yearly price of the magazine.

We earnestly request you to take the National Repository for 1878—to give it one year's trial, and thereby determine for yourselves whether it is worthy of a place in the Christian home.

The Donkey Cart.

[illegible] to ride in the donkey cart,
Oh dear! oh dear! oh dear!
All dressed in our Sunday clothes so smart,
Oh dear! oh dear! oh dear!
There were Jimmy, and Tommy, and Billy and I,
Packed close as [illegible] a Christmas pie;
And off we went [illegible] "hurrah! hi!"
Oh [illegible] dear! oh dear!

The stupid old donkey [illegible] would not go,
[illegible] oh dear!
[illegible] be half so slow,
Oh [illegible] oh dear! oh dear!
So just on his [illegible] we were only in fun—
[illegible] just only one!
And we [illegible] would make him [illegible]
Oh [illegible] dear! oh dear!

[illegible] fun away!
Oh dear! oh dear! oh dear!
[illegible] or entreaties could make him [illegible]
Oh! dear! oh dear! oh dear!
He ran straight into John Thompson's pond,
([illegible] donkeys of water were fond)
And it's just a mercy we were not all drowned!
Oh dear! oh dear! oh dear!

So there was an end of the donkey cart,
Oh dear! oh dear! oh dear!
And there was an end of our clothes so smart,
Oh dear! oh dear! oh dear!
And there was an end of our dinner and tea,
For sent to bed without either were we,
And 'twas just as too bad as it ever could be!
Oh dear! oh dear! oh dear!

The Little Outcast.

Nearly four hundred years ago a poor mother, with her boy, was turned out of doors to wander in the wilderness, and, for aught she knew, to die. Where could she find food and water in that barren place to keep the old wolf famine away?

But the Lord saw her great trouble and showed her a way out of it.

So they both lived, and the little boy in due time became a strong man and an archer; that is he lived by hunting.

That was a very roving sort of life, and I presume his mother lived with him, for the story says she took him a wife from the land of Egypt, and that was a long way from their old home.

But I dare say Hagar, for this was the mother's name, came to like this sort of life quite well.

Certain it is that her grand-child and all their descendants liked it. For though they became in time quite a nation, they still live the same wandering lives, with tents for their only shelter, besides the starry sky, camels carrying all their worldly goods from place to place.

The little boy's name was Ishmael, and his father's Abraham.

The strange and interesting people who descended from the little outcast we call Arabas.—Young Reaper.

The Living Water.

"And God opened her eyes, and she saw a well of water." The well was there all the time, but she did not see it. She went and filled her bottle—of course she filled it, she could do no more—and she gave the lad drink, enough for him and for her. A beautiful illustration—so many souls are weary, crying. God says, "What aileth thee?" He shows them a well—a hidden spring, coming from the mountains. Has not God shown us a well of living water, and said, "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come?" Let him take, not go on asking and asking, take freely; for nothing. Praise God for the living water with all your heart. We have had a miserable experience—a little bottle and that empty! No water, because our eyes are shut. Empty the bottle; we have had some mixtures of our own making. If any soul here is still weary, I ask you what do you think Christ meant when he said, "That my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full?" It is the word of Christ; do you believe it? If you cannot say that you don't believe it, give him your heart, like an old empty bottle. May we have nothing of our own except Christ. Every time we need to drink—to do anything or to bear anything—get the empty bottle filled, and let there be no interval. Why go about for an hour with the empty bottle? Let us go to him for the measure and kind of grace we need—repentance, love, etc. Let us come and sing of his well (Num. 21: 17), glory in the fullness of his love, and receive. Don't wait to understand. "Grace for grace."—Theodore Monod.

A Thought.

People despise each other too much. There is really some good in almost every one; something admirable in most. The stiff and solemn serious man may be a model of integrity and purity, though the gay Bohemian grins at him. The Bohemian, at whose approach the sober man shudders, may really be warm-hearted, generous and self-sacrificing, though many libations flush his face and he seldom saves enough to buy himself a coffin for which he makes himself prematurely ready. The business man whom others think a creature of dollars and cents, doubtless fought in his youth a very Apollyon of discouragement, and is secretly more tender [illegible] and charitable than he [illegible] knew.

From this self-contained and unruffled person you often hear excellent homely truths and honest sentiments. This elegant creature who seems to live to be pampered, proves himself strong and steadfast in time of need.

Even those deep in the gulf of vice may not merit as much scorn as we give them. Who has held out the helping hand? Not we who gather back our robes lest they should touch theirs. Did we not so deeply despise those of whom we disapprove, doubtless the shining example we are vain enough to fancy that we set them would do them more good.

But one thing is certain, whatever good impulses we are conscious of, exist in other bosoms. God did not make us in peculiar fashion. Others smile and rejoice, aspire and [illegible], as others do. The man who despises his fellow-man only scorns himself under different circumstances.—Ledger.

SWAYNE'S OINTMENT,

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

U. S. Marshal's office, Harrisonburg, Va.

Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease, itching piles, had consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. I deem it my duty to give you this well merited testimonial of so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit.

Very respectfully, WM. P. GROVE.

J. Q. A. Metcalf, (firm of Hanley & Metcalf,) Palmyra, Mo., writes: January 1, 1877.

I received your letter, also the ointment for itching piles. I have used the ointment for three weeks, and am now perfectly cured. I feel very thankful that I am free from that terrible pest, the "itching piles."

Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry

seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered with night sweats, burning fever, pains and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.

HOME TESTIMONY.

DR. SWAYNE—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite poorly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time [illegible] recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately [illegible] healed my lungs; in short, it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me, at the factory.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle.

NEW YORK OFFICE:

WILLIAM BALDWIN, Special Agent.

My Birthday.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

Beneath the moonlight and the snow
Lies dead my latest year;
The winter winds are wailing low
Its dirges in my ear.

I grieve not with the moaning wind
As if a loss befell;
Before me, even as behind,
God is, and all is well!

His light shines on me from above,
His low voice speaks within,—
The patience of immortal love
Outwearying mortal sin.

Not mindless of the growing years,
Of care and loss and pain,
My eyes are wet with thankful tears
For blessings which remain.

If dim the gold of life has grown,
I will not count it dross,
Nor turn from treasures still my own
To sigh for lack and loss.

The years no charm from Nature take;
As sweet her voices call,
As beautiful her mornings break,
As fair her evenings fall.

Love watches o'er my quiet ways,
Kind voices speak my name,
And lips that find it hard to praise
Are slow, at least, to blame.

How softly ebb the tides of will!
How fields, once lost or won,
Now lie behind me green and still
Beneath a level sun!

How hushed the hiss of party hate,
The clamor of the throng!
How old, harsh voices of debate
Flow into rhythmic song!

Methinks the spirit's temper grows
Too soft in this still air;
Somewhat the restful heart foregoes
Of needed watch and prayer.

The bark by tempest vainly tossed
May founder in the calm,
And he who braved the polar frost
Faint by the isles of balm.

Better than self-indulgent years
The outflung heart of youth,
Than pleasant songs in idle ears
The tumult of the truth.

Rest for the weary hands is good,
And love for hearts that pine,
But let the manly habitude
Of upright souls be mine.

Let winds that blow from heaven refresh,
Dear Lord, the languid air;
And let the weakness of the flesh
Thy strength of spirit share.

And, if the eye must fail of light,
The ear forget to hear,
Make clearer still the spirit's sight,
More fine the inward ear!

Be near me in mine hours of need
To soothe, or cheer, or warn,
And down these slopes of sunset lead
As up the hills of morn!

The [illegible] Home and the Eternal Home.

[illegible] A SERMON BY T. L. [illegible], BROOKLYN.

[illegible] confident, [illegible] we are at home [illegible] absent from the [illegible]

[illegible] home is [illegible] is [illegible] live in [illegible] of the [illegible] parted for its eternal home. Every day I see these deserted homes. The inhabitants gone forever to a higher habitation.

1. These homes are itinerating. I see few faces here which I saw fifteen years ago. Many have gone to other parts. We are always on the march. It is but a pilgrim's tent. In the Orient the piles of ashes, the tent poles marking the place where some one has tented for a night are frequently visible. One day some other pastor will come here and see the ashes and the poles of my stay. Like a shadow it fleeth. Paul, you are right. I, too, long to leave this home and go up higher.

2. Again, the frailty of this earthly tent only heightens the idea of the permanence of our home beyond. Its weakness forshadows strength. One could have said, "Paul, you are homesick; you have no home, no family, no one but Jesus." Old and gray-headed apostle, no wonder your eye was fixed above, far over the Mediterranean Sea. Here was a hero going home; a home no human hands ever built. No hand ever cut the topaz, beryl, sardonyx, or emerald. God from the eternities built that home. It is a royal residence, the city of the King. Not of cedars, but of light, was it built, and its great glory is Christ, the Son—a continuing city, an abiding home, an everlasting rest. It hath no sun, no moon; Jesus is the Light.

3. The soul home is where Christ and the people meet. Heaven is a place. I have no sympathy with that philosophy which makes Heaven a condition rather than a place. An abstraction is no home. Heaven, I believe, is a place as definite in location as London or Paris. It is a New Jerusalem—my father's home. The Patmos apostle was no dreamer. Bunyan dreamed. But that other John says, I saw, in that great Revelation. The moment I let go the literal translation, I let go my home. John beheld a great white throne and a rainbow. The sound of many waters was that heavenly chorus likened unto. The pavement of gold and crystal, where stood cherubim and seraphim, and the just made perfect, Is there no such home? When you pack your trunk and go to your home, do you not see the old elm, etc.? Is it not real? When you leave this tent you are pushed out of the world into abstract existence? It is the abode of the glorified. It may not be made of those chemical components constituting opal, jaspar, and sardonyx, but they appear to be so. Is the soul degraded by dwelling in the body? Could it be degraded by dwelling in a local heaven? Have you not kissed the frail home of clay, silent, beautiful in death? You were confident that to leave that tent was to be at home with the Lord. That hope was an anchor.

The confirmations are many. The many mansions show that elective affinities may exist there. Families may be together.—The many gates. The leaves for the healing of the nations.—The many sides.—The fruits. The denominationalism will perish, for Christ is porch and portal. Then there is the good society. Emmons desired to talk with Paul, and why not? Will we be not looking for old acquaintances? Happy will we be, if we find some one we brought there.

4. But our entrance is not yet. We are still in the body. Is your name in that Lamb's Book of Life? He must run who would obtain. Alas, if he be too late!

Let us make ready to go to that home. The slave judged his master had not gone home to Heaven because he never talked about that home. We must learn something about it. How can we learn if we do not converse about it?—Metropolitan Pulpit.

Liberia.

BY BISHOP HAVEN.

Bishop Haven, in the North American Review, gives a very instructive [illegible] suggestive paper on American Africa. The paper has been [illegible] commented upon, and its [illegible] suggestions have awakened [illegible] in this country and [illegible]. We give the following [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] of Liberia [illegible]

[illegible] in Africa. The river is very broad and handsome, as broad and handsome of the Hudson. For about forty miles, or as far up as the Connecticut, it is navigable for sloops and even larger craft. For four miles back from the river coffee is cultivated. It is sold for twenty cents a pound, gold, at Moravia, which gives it a higher valuation in new York than the Java. It is being exported now to Ceylon to replace the coffee of that island, itself among the best in the world. Three dollars, gold, a bushel are paid for it at Moravia for this purpose. It is also being planted in Southern California. The coffee-tree is usually a trim, compact, small tree, not over twenty feet high nor fifteen wide at its widest part. The annual production is already very large and steadily increasing.

The two chief coffee farms are those of Mr. Dorsey, a Liberian, and Messrs. E. S. Morris & Co., of Philadelphia, whose exposition of Liberian products at the Centennial attracted great and deserved attention. They have on their farm on the St. Paul's, which they have leased for twenty-five years, thirteen thousand coffee-trees. Thirty pounds have been taken from a tree in one season; two and a half pounds is the average. This would give for the yield of this place over thirty thousand pounds a year. Suppose neglect and blight reduced that one half, and we have fifteen thousand pounds, worth three thousand dollars, as the annual produce of a single plantation. Mr. Rix, of Clay Ashland, raises from ten to fifteen thousand pounds annually. The last vessel to New York, which arrived last June, had over eighty thousand pounds in its invoice. That portion which the shippers held was sold for twenty-five cents a pound in gold before it reached port. It is evident, therefore, that, unless some drawback occurs, this product will draw capital here, and make the Republic a not unimportant factor in the mercantile exchange of the world.

India-rubber is also becoming an article of commerce. There are many sorts of trees and plants which furnish this substance. A commission has been granted to a Brazillian trader, giving him the exclusive right of export. This will probably be broken up, as the traffic is too valuable and too much diffused to be concentrated in any single house. A Boston gentleman, engaged in this business, informed me that he alone purchased two hundred thousand pounds of African rubber during the past year. As this rubber is worth in Boston not less than forty cents a pound, or nearly a million dollars for the whole, it shows how valuable this trade may yet become. Cameron says over £45,000, or $225,000, was the value of this export in a single year at Zanzibar. It can be gotten on the market much cheaper from Liberia. Gold also is reported to exist in the mountains, and an English company has sought to make a contract with the government for the working of its mines.

ITS POLITICAL CONDITION AND ITS POPULATION.

What is the political condition of the country? The invasion of European merchantmen, and their refusal to recognize the government of the American Colonization Society, compelled the establishment of the Liberian government. When the governors of the Society complained of their course, they replied in substance: "England we know, and America we know, but who are you?" America at that time was unwilling to recognize a territory that was occupied by that class of its citizens, as it would encourage their enslaved brothers at home in the idea that they had some rights which should here be respected. There was no alternative, therefore, but for the colony to proclaim its independence. This was done in July 26, 1847, in a declaration too closely copied from our own, in which they declare that prejudice has driven them from our shores, and talk as if their independence was being declared from America, rather than from a nearer and more dangerous foe.

That such an independence was premature is evident from the history of all other colonies. In twenty-five years after its establisment it became an independent state. It was one hundred and sixty-eight years from its first settlement at Jamestown that English America became independent. Spanish America was three hundred years a dependency of that crown. South Africa is not independent yet, nor Australia. nor Canada. How preposterous, to expect that Liberia, after only twenty-five years of existence, should become a commonwealth, with power to make its flag respected, to carry on internal improvements, to make war, to issue currency, and do all other things belonging to an independent government! Sierra Leone, forty years its senior, within twelve years of its first century, is not yet a state, independent, self-reliant, and able to live among the governments of the earth. That Liberia does as well as she does is a marvel.

The government imposes a tariff, but is not always able to collect it; in that respect being not unlike other governments. It complains of the steamers for selling from their decks in the harbors, but they reply, "If you try to stop us we will leave your harbors altogether, and decline to carry your mails." As they are the only means of mail communication the Republic is compelled to submit. To be weak they find is miserable, but so is all weakness. They have equal difficulty in collecting taxes from their own citizens. President Payne, in his message last December, complains that some American Liberians oppose taxation, and acknowledges "there is nothing to force a tax-collector to make a faithful return." so that the government may lose through the peculation of its own officers,—a thing also not unknown in older and stronger countries. Despite these drawbacks the Secretary of the Treasury reports last year's receipts from taxes and duties, ending September 30, 1876, to be $113,026.34. Probably Virginia could not have shown so good an account in 1662, fifty-five years after its first outcasts were landed at its Monrovia.

The disbursements were $155,551.07. The war with the Grebso cost $60,000. But for that, the income would have covered the expenses. The President and other officials are courteous gentlemen, and probably manage the affairs of state as well as any persons of any land could under like conditions.

The population of Liberia is far smaller than it ought to be, considering the number of emigrants sent over and the money spent in colonizing. The American Colonization Society had spent, at their semi-centennial in 1866, the immense sum of $2,558,907.10. Over two million and a half of dollars had been contributed up to January 1, 1867. Since that, probably, a third of a million more has been given, making about three million dollars from this source alone. The churches have been very liberal. Special organizations for educational and other aid, bequests, legacies, gifts from individuals, some of which have been very large, and grants from States have, with the annual missionary contributions, carried the donations undoubtedly up to two millions of dollars. We may safely estimate the amount given in America to this enterprise at not less than five millions of dollars. If we include national aid, it will largely surpass this sum.

This vast amount of money has succeeded in establishing the colonies on the coast and settlements up the rivers St. Paul's Junk, St. John and Sinoe. It has erected seminary and college buildings, churches, and a congressional building, and aided in the erection of many comfortable dwellings. But it has not moved many persons from America. Only thirteen thsusand one hundred and thirty-six persons were sent out by the American Colinization Society in its first half century. Probably a thousand is as many as have been sent in the last ten years; less than fifteen thousand persons at an expense of three millions of dollars. Recaptured Africans have been returned to the number of five thousand seven hundred and twenty-two. Or not far from twenty thousand have been planted in this territory in sixty years, an average of about three hundred a year.

Even with this number there should have been to-day not less than fifty thousand American Liberians. There is no census, but the reputed number is not over twenty thousand; some put it as low as fourteen thousand. That is, there has been no increase on the original stock.

This failure to increase may be accounted for by the natural wear and tear of new settlements, by the unusual mortality of the males, who have overworked themselves in their ambition to subdue the land, a fact painfully patent, by acclimating fevers, which are always severer on new colonists than those who follow them, and chiefly, we believe, from the fact that they have had too much help. More money has been spent on Liberia, probably, than any other colony known to history. Though we expatriated them, we did not send them out empty. We loaded them with wealth. Five millions of dollars to fifteen thousand persons was a wonderful largess. No wonder they did not see the necessity of work. Every few months came a new batch of colonists. They were to be fed for six months at the Society's expense. This half supported the people who were to grant the supplies. The extinction of gratuitous emigration is essential to the prosperity of the Republic. The best thing that has happened to it was the aid of the American Colinization Society and kindred donations. The best thing that can happen to it is the cessation of that aid, or its direction to them through other channels.

NECESSITIES.

What does Liberia need? More emigrants. The native population are becoming Americanized, but so slowly as to be of little benefit to the Republic. It must have large accessions from America if it is to flourish, or even if it is to live.

Not that so many will leave as to make any perceptible change in our ratios of population. The births will surpass both deaths and emigration. The factor in our society is growing larger rather than less. Since the first emigrant reached Africa, the Afric-American population has increased over two millions. The emigrants did not number fifteen thousand. There will be as little influence of any futnre emigration on the home population as there has been in the past.

Why then encourage emigration? To help Africa, not America. That will change the whole aspect of this question. It is to assist in Americanizing Africa. America is being Africanized; Africa should be Americanized. It is to better their own fortunes that emigrants should go, just as they come here from other lands. If they cannot better their fortunes, they will not go.

How shall this larger emigration be brought about? By steam communication, regular and frequent. There is only one firm in America that has a regular line to Liberia. That firm, Yates and Porterfield, New York, sends thither two, or at the most, three vessels a year. Their vessels have no regular time of sailing, can carry but a few emigrants, and, being a long time on the voyage,—from forty to seventy days,—must charge a large amount for a ticket. Fifty emigrants at fifty dollars apiece is only twenty-five hundred dollars, a small amount to the shippers for the space they occupy, which could be filled with merchandise, and for the expense of feeding them on so long a voyage. On the other hand, steamers could make the trip in fifteen to twenty days, could carry five hundred passengers, and would make money at twenty dollars a head. The emigrants also could raise this money themselves, or their friends there could help them, or they could have a society to help them in part. The first necessity is steam communication.

Charles Lamb's Warning.

Charles Lamb tells his sad experience, as a warning to young men, in the following language: "The waters have gone over me. But out of the black depths, could I be heard, I would cry out to all those who have set a foot in the perilous flood. Could the youth, to whom the flavor of the first wine is delicious as the opening scenes of life, or the entering upon some newly discovered paradise, look into my desolation and be made to understand what a dreary thing it is, when he shall feel himself going down a precipice with open eyes and a passive will; to see his destruction, and have no power to stop it, and yet feel it all ways emanating from himself; to see all godliness emptied out of him, and yet not able to forget a time when it was otherwise; to bear about the piteous spectacle of his own ruin; could he see my fevered eye, feverish with the last night's drinking and feverishly looking for to-nights repetition of the folly; could he but feel the body of the death out of which I cry hourly with feebler outcry to be delivered, it were enough to make him dash the sparkling beverage to the earth, in all the pride of its mantling temptation."

Eternal Punishment.

John the Baptist, announcing Emmanuel, God with us, said of him: "Whose fan is in His hand and He will thoroughly purge His floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but He will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire." Ever since that day Christ the God-man—whose is the kingdom, and the threshing floor, and the garner, and the wheat, who also will reveal the chaff, and condemn it, and burn it up with unquenchable fire—has been fanning with the fan of His word His professed people, and making plain to the godly of earth and heaven the wheat, Christ's true people, and the chaff, those who own Him with the lip, but deny him with the heart.

Each age has its own testing truth, whether of doctrine, command, promise, threatening, to which the godly have assented, declaring Christ has said it, and we with all our heart receive it, while the godly in name but godless in heart have rejected it. The testing-truth, the truth of the fan of Christ to-day is the doctrine of future everlasting punishment.

No doctrine of the New Testament is more plainly taught than this. John, Christ's fore-runner, as we have already seen, declares it in the public announcement which he made of the coming Lord. Yes, he does far more, he declares that men will be divided into two classes, the wheat and the chaff, and the former Christ will make plainly manifest, and then gather them as His own into the garner, His heavenly kingdom, His Father,s house; while the other, after having been openly manifested by His fan, He will burn up with anquenchable fire.

This truth, thus prominently set forth by John as a truth to be universally accepted, Christ has again and again declared with equal explicitness. On one occasion He thrice declared, giving increased emphasis to the declaration by the three-fold repetition, that it was better to enter into life, that is into heaven, maimed, halt or blind, than to offend and be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched, where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched. Again He affirmed, that He, the Son of Man, coming in His glory with all the holy angels, and sitting on the throne of His glory, and gathering all nations before Him, will divide the righteous from the wicked, adjudging the former, as blessed of the Father, to the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world, and the latter, as accursed, to everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels. And then He ends with the declaration: "These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." Now all Christ's declarations are in accordance with these, and with them agree all the words of the Apostles. The New Testament has one uniform language; there is mercy for the repenting, believing sinner, but the wrath of God abideth on the impenitent, and the wrath of the Lamb is the portion of those whom Christ drives as accursed from His judgment-seat.

Now, when it is remembered that Christ is Emmanuel, God with us, that He has come to reveal the Father, that He speaks what He knows, and testifies of what He has seen, in a word, that when He speaks God speaks, what, we ask, are we to do but to receive His words and rest upon them as truth, which is not only unquestionable, but must not be questioned? To cavil at the words of Christ, to deprive them of their force by our philosophy, or our preconceived notions of what befits the Divine Fatherhood, or theories about our Lord's accommodating himself to Jewish opinions is just rebellion against the God of heaven who came to earth to teach us about the future and the unseen, of which they could know nothing except as He revealed it. To tamper with His words, to talk about the development of the doctrine of the future state; to do anything else than accept all His teachings, believe all His words, rejoice at his promises, and tremble at His threatenings is to be found wanting, to be driven away as chaff when we are lifted up on the fan of His word, and if we do not repent the unquenchable fire will be our portion.

It grieves us to read in the papers that certain distinguished persons have voted to allow a person, denying the doctrine of everlasting punishment, to preach the gospel as he understands it. We always thought that the duty of an ambassador of Christ was to preach the gospel which Christ commanded. And with our whole soul we adopt the language of the chief Apostle: "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.' "If any man preach any other gospel than that ye have received, let him be accursed."—Christian Intelligencer.

Big Trees of California.

With such ecstatic feelings I crossed the divide, and descended the northern slope a short distance into a settle, rather than a valley, where the Big Trees have lived and pointed their heads heavenward for centuries, the marvel of all who behold them. As the settle was covered with snow about six inches deep, I kept my seat in the saddle. The first object which excited my curiosity, was the "saloon," built upon the stump of one of the large trees, for a dancing hall. It is round, and surmounted with a tin covered dome and flagstaff. The tree lies as it fell, except that large sections have been sawed off and shipped as curiosities. The next was "Uncle Tom's Cabin," a venerable looking tree, showing some signs of decay. The fire has made havoc at the roots, making two door ways, and excavating the cabin, a room ten feet in diameter, and the same in height. A very comfortable place it might have been for Uncle Tom. Then came "Dan. Webster," on the left of the path; and the "Empire State," on the right; both large and vigorous, the latter one of the largest of the group. Then "Gen. Jackson" and "Henry Clay" side by side, just above the path. Next the "Siamese Twins," one body for fifty or seventy-five feet, then divides into two, and runs up probably two hundred and fifty feet straight as arrows; a fine sight.—Then we see the "Old Bachelor," and "Old Maid," standing several rods above, and to the right of the path, the former having its top broken off about one hundred and fifty feet up, which represents a bald head, a few branches remaining, answering for whiskers, dressed in thrifty, tidy looking bark, which seems to bespeak his excellent habits. The "Old Maid" is not so faithfully characterized. It is only a stub, some fifty feet in height, denuded of all bark, desolate and forsaken. Next we behold the "Father" of the forest, as he lies stretched upon the ground, slowly wasting back to dust, being consumed by the elements, the only appropriate destroyer. He is estimated to have been four hundred and fifty in height, and one hundred and ten feet in circumference. Great doorways or entrances have been burned into his sides, in one of which I ventured, and passed up an alley several rods, leading straight through his heart, and out at another passage made by a saw, a fine walk of nearly two hundred feet. Then we visit the "Mother" and "Son;" the "Son" springing up in the very roots of the "Mother," a model of beauty and care, showing a mother's watchfulness through all his years. Her cares seem to be pleasant, as they affect her so slightly. Still aspiring, thrifty and noble, she looks as though she might not suffer decay for hundreds of years in the future. Next another prostrate giant meets our eye, measuring ninety-eight feet in circumference, and three hundred in height. Scathed by fire, I ride into his yawning mouth, pass a distance of more than one hundred feet, turn my horse around, and triumphantly enter the natural world again. Another standing monument is near at hand, seamed and furrowed with fire. I rode into this arched doorway, and readily turned my horse and rode out, as though it were an archway of roses. Then the "Mother of the forest," a tree that had been peeled one hundred and sixteen feet, and its bark shipped over the world. This is three hundred and twenty-seven feet in height, and thirty-two in diameter. This tree is now dead, and the scaffolding still stands which was used in removing the bark. Fifty others, named after notable persons, Gen. Washington, Lincoln, etc., which are worthy of comment, but I can only remark that they are the wonder of wonders, well repaying the observer. Their bark is of a reddish cast, snug and smooth as though it had been scraped, yet lying in furrows or ridges like fluted pillars. Their foliage is similar to the pine, and their branches come out from one hundred to two hundred feet high, and are disproportionately small. We cannot comprehend the vast size of these monstrous trees by the eye; we must step around one, or see the line applied in order to gain a correct idea of their immense size. I think they were not formed for timber, but for our admiration and instruction, so that we may better judge of the vastness of the resources of the Creator, pointing us back to the time of creation, when all sprang fresh from his hand and was pronounced good; and also inspiring us to look forward to the good time coming, the "restitution of all things."

Ye Are the Light of the World.

By "world" is here meant the entire human family.

The theory of the Bible is that the world lieth in wickedness. Sin entering the world at its earliest period has continued ever since to be an active power for evil. Its darkness has shrouded the whole earth. This view is sustained by observation and reason. No man can justly deny the fact of sin in the world. No man can deny the terrible effects of sin as everywhere seen. In all departments of activity, whether public or private, whether political, commercial, social, or purely intellectual, there is an ever present, ever active and powerful something that leads men to the wrong, even although in their hearts they may condemn wrong, and in their very heart of hearts wish to be free from its power. Individual wrong doing leads to individual pollution of character; the moral susceptibilities are blunted; the judgment is perverted; conscience is tampered with; the affections are made impure and the will is enslaved, and thus the whole man is brought in bondage to sin. His whole being is enwrapped in the darkness of evil. His eyes are sealed to the light of heaven, his ears are deaf to the calls of mercy, and his soul is unmoved by the melodies of divine truth. Out from such a life can only flow moral darkness. As with the individual so with the multitude. Sin spreads its darkening influence among all peoples and in all nations.

God's truth and salvation is the light that is to drive away the darkness of sin. This is given in the Bible. The light of nature is not enough. Neither will the light of reason suffice. These have their place and work, but a superhuman presence and power can alone conquer sin. The influx of that divine light began with the promise of Christ—"The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head." It burst upon the world in its full effulgence when Christ walked among men as the divine logos. He who is the "Sun of righteousness" then unveiled his face, and the glory of heaven beamed upon our sin crushed earth.

In the absence of Christ he has made his children his representatives. The power of his salvation is revealed in them, and they are called upon to reflect its glory among men. Christ as a man showed forth in perfect unity all the christian graces. As a man he had the passions of a man, yet no angry word ever escaped his lips. He was persecuted and reviled, yet he was ever patient and kind. Centured by the learned scribes, hated by the jealous Gentiles, and dogged by the bigoted Pharisees, yet he was ever the same. As a man he mingled among men. The child of poverty, when a babe he lay in the manger, and when a man he had not where to lay his head. An obedient son, he dwelt with his reputed father in his Nazarene home; as a reformer he had to meet the jealousy and hatred of false conservatism; a servant of the people, he was a byword with earth's nobility; a man of sorrow, he was acquainted with grief; he had tears for those who grieved, comfort for those in trouble, warning for those in danger, and instruction for the ignorant. Everywhere and always among the people he was a perfect man.

The secret of his moral power as a man was his intimate and perfect union with the divine nature. He was indeed the embodiment of the human and the divine—"In him dwelt all the fullness of the Godhead bodily"—still we must not ignore his human will. Christ as a man might have sinned; but Christ in union with the divine nature was proof against the world, the flesh and the devil. As a man he was tempted in all points like as we are and that without sin. On the other hand from his lips there issued forth every christian grace—meekness, patience, long-suffering, charity, humility, hope and faith were each perfected in him. What meekness! A perfect man, yet submitting to be cursed by the mob! What patience! Able by a word to call a legion of angels to his aid [illegible] his time. What long-suffering! No word of complaint [illegible] his lips. What charity! [illegible] by the decree of a [illegible] he yet cries in his death [illegible] "Father, forgive them, they [illegible] what they do." What humility! Being in the form of God, [illegible] himself the form of a [illegible], obedient unto [illegible] the death of the cross. [illegible] Dying on the cross, [illegible] the thief, "This day [illegible] in Paradise." [illegible] Lord of [illegible] that in addition to providing salvation for all men, he might also give a perfect example of the power of that salvation.

The time came when it was expedient for him to go away. His human mission on earth was done. But his going away did not quench the light of divine truth. He who is the center of all truth and light condescended to make his children his representatives. Every true christian is a miniature Christ. He stands in place of him. Is to represent him. Is really and truly to the world now, to the extent of his influence what Christ as a man was to the world during the ten years of his ministry, "Ye are the light of the world."

The thought gains additional force when we remember that christians are the God-appointed agents by which the world is to be saved. When Paul says to the Corinthians, "Ye are laborers together with God; ye are God's husbandry; ye are God's building," he states a grand and fundamental truth in God's moral economy. Men are actually and truly associated with God, and God with men, in the work of redemption. This is not a mere sentiment; it is a fact. We sometimes hear it said that angels would feel honored to be engaged in this work. We are told in the Bible that they are deeply interested in the work, and that there is joy among them when a sinner is saved. But they are not the instruments by which the world is to be saved. No. Men can only be saved through the instrumentality of men. Human hearts can only sympathize with human hearts. It is glorious to think of the angels hovering over us, and to be conscious of higher spiritual influences. But spirits cannot sympathize with flesh. The sympathy of God flows to the human soul only through the man Christ Jesus.

If the world is saved it is to be saved through the instrumentality of christians on earth.

New Preachers' Meeting.

The regular meeting of this body last Thursday was of unusual interest. The Rev. J. C. Hartzell occupied the chair, and Rev. B. Lynch was Secretary. The pastors reported the condition of our various churches in the city. Rev. Dr. Braun of the First German said that the past year had been a pleasant and successful one in his church. The church membership is 56, and during the year there had been several conversions and eight additions. The Sunday-school attendance averaged 140 scholars and 27 teachers and officers. During the year a parsonage costing $1500 had been built, and partly paid for and the remaining debt would be canceled in two or three years by the amount heretofore paid for the pastor's house rent. The society has raised during the year nearly $2,000, itsef, and it is expected that when the present debts are paid the church will be self-sustaining, and the money now given to aid it by the Missionary Society can be used elsewhere to extend the work.

There is manifest increase in the friendly relations between our church and people, and the other German churches and people of the city. Rev. J. Kienle, pastor of the second German Church, said his church numbered 40 members and 12 probationers. Six had been received during the year and there had been eight conversions, and others were seeking. $300 had been spent on repairs to the church. The Sunday-school is one of the largest, if not the largest German Sunday-school in the city. There are 212 scholars on the roll—and the average attendance last quarter was 170 scholars and 16 officers and teachers. The debt on the church property is being gradually lessened, and the congregations have been largely increased; the church is united in spirit and purpose, and is regarded with favor in that part of the city.

The Third German Church under the pastorate of Rev. J. Ueber has has had a pleasant year. Several have united with the church, and while there has been nothing marked in the church work of the year this church has held its own.

Rev. J. M. Vance, pastor of Wesley Chapel, reported that during the year over $3,000 had been raised by the church, and that the church had been reseated and much improved internally. The Sunday-school numbers 150. There have been conversions both in the church and Sunday-school.

Rev. H. Green, pastor of First Street M. E. Church, reported fourteen conversions in a late revival. The congregations were large and the Sunday-school numbers over two hundred. At Sixth street, a branch church, the congregation was worshipping in a rented house, but already there was $150 cash in hand toward buying a lot and the [illegible] forward.

Rev. [illegible] Dale, pastor of Union Chapel, [illegible] that when he went to Union Chapel three years ago the debts on the property amounted to $8500, and that in spite of hard times and discouragement in three years the debts having been reduced $2400. The congregations are immense, and although the people are poor still by a little from so many a large work had been done. $2,000 have been raised the past year. Sixty-three have been converted. The Union Chapel Sunday-school is not as large or as successful as it should be.

Rev. F. Landor reported an increase of 24 in Algiers and that during the year $357 have been raised. He had some opposition the first three months but he had won by love.

Rev. W. P. Forest reported that at Clinton Street Church there were 110 members and 16 probationers and a good Sunday-school. There had been seven conversions, and $625 had been raised during the year. He had also in charge during past nine months Simpson Church on Valence street. During this time 64 had joined the church and 49 had been converted.

Rev. A. Ross reported Thomson Church on Poet Street as having had a successful year. Considerable improvement had been made in the church and there had been conversions.

Bro. Emperor Williams, Presiding Elder of the North New Orleans District, reported that his eighteen appointments with but few exceptions would make good reports to conference. His District includes a good portion of the city, and several of the churches had already been reported. He commended the zeal of his brethren and was happy in his work for the Lord.

In the absence of several pastors the chairman reported that Ames Church under the pastorate of Dr. McCarty was making a heroic struggle to relieve itself of debt, and he believed would succeed. Camp Parapet and Plum Street Church under Rev. R. W. Overton had closed a successful year, no debts, and expenses paid. Mount Zion under R. C. Hunt had labored under the embarrassment for a heavy debt. Pleasant Plains, Rev. S. Priestly pastor, was paying its debts and doing well. La-Harpe, Rev. A. Moore pastor, closes up a good year, and will report to conference a good increase.

The SOUTHWESTERN was heartily endorsed in resolutions published elsewhere. Mr. James Bass, an evangelist from England, was present and introduced and spoke a few words of congratulation, and stated that he was here to work for Jesus whenever there was an open door.

Rev. B. L. Lynch, Wm. Murrell, and several other brethren were present as visitors.

Mission Rooms Notes.

1. The Church should be encouraged in missionary matters, and go forward. The missionary contributions of 1877 were probably the largest ever made in any one year, counted on a gold basis. Why should not 1878 see a handsome advance on 1877?

2. There never was a time when appropriations to our foreign fields so immediately touched the actual work of evangelism. For fifteen years gold has not been so low as now. The facilities for exchange have greatly increased. The machinery is in full working order. If the present agencies and apparatus were to be established from the beginning, it could not be done at a cost of less than between one and two millions of dollars. Besides these features, after the present year the cost of working the office at New York, will be provided for out of the income of the present mission property at New York. There never was a time therefore in the history of society when so much of a dollar put into the collection for missions reached the field-work, at home and abroad, as now. A dollar to the Missionary Society for India, or anywhere else will reach the work with less cost through the Society than if sent for specific work by the specific donor. All that is given tells directly on the objects on the proportion of their needs, as judged of, by those best acquainted with all the work, after the most thorough and patient investigation.

3. There never were more encouraging reports from the field. From India Dr. Johnson sends the sacred tuft of hair shaven from the head of a Hindoo teacher, whom he had just baptized, whose disciples numbered three hundred 'houses.' He had been an intelligent and sincere inquirer for two years. Rev. E. W. Parker writes of having baptized fifty persons in a single round as Presiding Elder. Bishop Peck has just received from Japan the recommendations for admission on trial to Annual Conferences in this country, of eleven Japanese preachers. Among the Swedes in the north-west a great work is being done in the gathering of souls into the Kingdom. Thus the cheering reports from all over the fields The Presiding Elders are rallying and responding to the suggestions of the Missionary Committee.

4. Methodism connexionalism is being increased. Besides the handsome, very handsome contribution to the work on the various foreign fields, they are all taking up collections, some great, some very small—for the Parent Missionary Society; thus learning to care for the great church interests through which they are themselves aided.

New Orleans Preacher's Meeting and the Southwestern.

At the New Orleans Preacher's Meeting held Jan. 3rd, 1878, on motion of Rev. M. Dale, the following resolutions, after being fully discussed by several brethren, were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, 1. That the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is essential to our church work in this city and throughout the South.

Resolved, 2. That we rejoice in the success which has attended our paper, as indicated by the cheering reports from the Conferences, and by the fact of its enlargement for the New Year.

Resolved, 3. We approve very fully the editorial management and hereby express our high appreciation of the ability and labors of the editor, Rev. J. C. Hartzell, B. D and pray that his life and health may be long spared to bless our work with his presence and counsels.

Resolved, 4. That we advise the appointment of a special agent to solicit subscribers among our churches and friends in this city, and that if such an agent is appointed we will welcome him to all our pulpits and congregations, and will do all in our power to aid him.

Resolved, 5. That as the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is our Church paper it is the duty of every pastor, local preacher and officer of our churches to give it his first and heartiest support, in preference to all other papers.

A Good Temperance Report.

The following good Temperance report was adopted by the West Texas Conference. Revs. H. Swan and A. Brock were the committee.

Resolved, That we gratefully acknowledge the hand of God in the history of the Temperance Reform, and are specially gratified with the success of its principles in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Resolved, That we re-affirm the stirring and uncompromising resolutions of the last session of this Conference, to-wit: "1. That we will preach faithfully on the subject, warning our people against the very appearance of evil, and will, if necessary, bring to discipline and exclusion from the church, those who transgress. 2. That we strongly recommend the organization of temperance societies in our Sunday schools. 3. That we believe in the propriety of prohibitional legislation as the only effectual remedy for the evil, and hereby pledge ourselves to personal endeavor to secure such legislation, by voting solidly for such men, and such only, as are soundly temperate."

Resolved, That we bid all the workers in this great reform a hearty God-speed, assuring them that we would be behind none of them in devotion to this work, and as ministers of the Gospel, hereby pledge ourselves to support by our influence, and by our votes, those noble men who dared to lead the way in this grand effort to save our State from degradation and ruin.

The Life Boat is a new temperance paper, published at Dayton, Ohio, which has reached us. It presents a neat, tasteful appearance and its colums are filled with choice original and selected matter. We wish it abundant success. Published monthly; price 75 cents per annum. Address as above.

A Berlin man, who had always been regarded as poor and had therefore been shunned by his relatives, died recently, leaving a will by which the sum of 30,000 marks was bequeathed to his native town, in Baravia; 1,000 marks to go to each of his three brothers and the same amount to a friend with whom he had once quarrelled. It was also stipulated, as a condition, that none of these legatees should attend his funeral. The brothers consented to these terms, but the friend went to the funeral and thus forfeited his inheritance. When the package of 30,000 marks was opened, a later will was found, which gave that sum to any of the four who would disregard the stipulation and attend the funeral.

The first steam engine on this continent was brought from England in 1758.

General Religious Items.

The civil power is now supreme over the ecclesiastical in the United States of Columbia. The Roman Catholic Church has been disendowed, and must depend for its support on voluntary contributions.

A great revival of religion seems to be in progress in Australia. Dr. Somerville, the fervent Scotch evangelist, and Henry Varley are both preaching to great congregations, and with manifest success.

Whittaker's Protestant Episcopal Almanac for 1878 reports the following statistics: Bishop, 61—increase 2; ministers, 3,216—increase 45; parishes 2,900; baptisms, 46,787—increase 4,756; confirmations, 29,179—increase 2,418; communicants, 281,977—increase 13,443; contributions, $6,734,268—increase $95,331.

Mr. Stanley's discoveries on the Congo are to be improved immediately. The Baptists of England are organizing a mission to enter and occupy the territory, and have put the Rev. C. Grenfel and W. Comber, who have been laboring for some time in the Cameroons, at the head of the expedition. They are to proceed into the interior by the way of San Salvador, by which route, Mr. Stanley says, they will reach a larger population than by any other.

A foreign paper says: "Dean Stanley has invited the Rev. Dr. Stoughton, an eminent Congregationalist, to preach in the nave of Westminister Abbey, at speciol services, on St. Andrew's Day. This is the thick end of the wedge. The Dean began with Max Muller. a layman. Then came Dr. Caird, of the Scotch Kirk, one of her Majesty's chaplains. Next old Dr. Moffat, the veteran missionary, and father-in-law to Dr. Livingstone. And now, without mitigation or excuse, there comes a Puritan of the Puritans, in his simple character as a minister of Jesus Christ."

Nothing can be more wonderful than the triumphs of the Cross in Japan. The Indian Evangelical Review (Bombay) gives the following information: "Hardly ten years have elapsed since the country was entered by Protestant missionaries; less than ten since the work of preaching has been prosecuted with any degree of vigor; now twelve societies are at work there. There are forty-six ordained missionaries and one ordained native missionary. Ninety stations are occupied; and the baptized converts number over a thousand. There are sixteen medical mission stations. There are twenty mission schools with more than five hundred scholars, of whom forty are preparing for the ministry. The translation of the Bible under the auspices of four different societies is rapidly progressing, and a weekly Christian newspaper, published by the missionaries of the American Board, has a circulation of eleven hundred copies.

The amount realized by the Government upon the manufacture o liquors during 1876 was within a fraction of $66,000,000. The amount expended in drink during the same period was upwards of $700,000,000. These are startling statistics. Human arithmetic cannot compute the amount of suffering and crime purchased with this seven hundred millions dollars.

It is stated from several sources that the Turkish Government from the moment Russia began the war in earnest without protest from the Western powers became convinced that it would not be able to maintain itself in Europe, but would be obliged to withdraw into Asia and abandon Constantinople and all European Turkey to Russia.

Mr W. E. Chandler, of New Hampshire, in an open letter to the Republicans of that State, charged Senator Sherman, Governor Hayes, and others, with a bargain with Southern politicians previous to the decision of the Electoral Commission concerning the Presidency. Mr. Sherman, now United States Secretary of the Treasury, in an interview with a Herald correspondent, thus responded to a question as to the truth of the charge:

American horses are appearing in London in front of English carriages. A Kentucky horse worth $125 can be transported to Liverpool for $60, and then sold for $300. One of the recent steamers carried out twenty-four carriage horses for the London market. The voyage seems to agree with them for they gain in weight and are very frisky when they reach land. This branch of the American export trade has been greatly enlarged during the past year.

The Signal Service was one of the new ideas of the great American conflict, and it was improved and utilized during the seige of Plevna. After the completion of the circle of investment, the weakest part of the line was that held by the Roumanian troops. The Turks seem to have been well aware of the fact, but the Russians, by the disposition of their reserve forces, and by a system of telegraphic signals which they organized, were able to hurry up reinforcements in time to any threatened point.

At the foot of Mount Gargarno, Italy, a buried town has been discovered, the houses being twenty feet below the surface. A temple of Dianah was first brought to light, then a portico composed of columns without capitals, and finally a necropolis covering nearly four acres. The Italian Government has taken measures to continue the excavations on a large scale, and has already discovered a monument erected in honor of Pompey after his victory over the pirates. The town is the ancient Sipontum, of which Strabo and Livy speak, and which was destroyed by an earthquake.

Captain Raymakers, of the Belgian engineers, has started, at the expense of the King of the Belgians, for Central Africa. He will land on the Western coast, at the mouth of the Congo, and direct his course toward the center of the continent with the view of meeting the Belgian expedition under Captain Crespal, which is to proceed from the Eastern coast. The French Geograpeical Society's expedition will leave France on January 15, and land at the mouth of the Niger. From thence it will endeavor to cross to the Eastern coast. It will be composed chiefly of African tirailleurs, under command of the Count de Lemale, a lieutenant of Turcos.

"There is no truth whatever in the story. I never made any such bargain as is alleged in the letter, and I do not believe any of the others did. I voted and made a two hours' speech against the Electoral bill, and fought these very men, Randall, Gibson, etc., with whom Chandler says I made a bargain. As to my going down to Ohio to see Governor Hayes, it had solely reference to the office of Secretary of the Treasury, which he had offered to me; and as to the alleged secret writing in possession of Mr Burke, I know of none, and do not believe there exists one. As regards the reasons for removing the troops from Louisiana and South Carolina, I have given them fully already in my Mansfield, (Ohio,) speech last summer. That is all I desire to say.

The Palace of Laws.

The capitol of the United States, at Washington, is the finest edifice in the new world. It may be justly styled the palace of laws, for within its precincts the statutes of the nation are enacted and expounded. Here are framed the patent laws and kindred ordinances for the encourragement of authors and inventors.

The corner-stone of the capitol was laid by the illustrious Washington, on the 18th day of September, 1793. The building was opened for the meeting of Congress November 10th, 1800. The enlargement and new dome were completed in 1867. The edifice fronts the east, is 751 feet long, 348 feet wide, and covers three and a half acres; court-yards three and a half acres—in all seven acres. The predominant material of the exterior is white marble. The dome is of cast iron, 135½ feet in diameter, and 287½ feet high, surmounted by a statue of Liberty nineteen and a half feet high. The interior of the dome forms a remarkable circular chamber, or rotunda, ninety-six feet in diameter, 180 feet high. One thousand gas-jets, flashed by electricity, illumin the interior by night. The walls of the rotunda are adorned with historical paintings by eminent artists. The Senate chamber, House of Representatives, Supreme Court rooms, and other apartments are splendidly decorated. The halls are lined with polished marbles from every State in the Union. Frescoes, paintings and sculptures abound. The front porticoes are supported by one hundred Corinthian columns of wite marble. The cost of the capitol building was thirteen millions of dollars.—Scientific American.

Return of the Jews to Palestine.

The Interior makes the following wise, as well as witty remarks upon the literalizing of Scripture promises and prophesies: This literalizing of the sublime promises and prophesies of the triumph of the Church of Christ, down to a promise that a particular race shall go back to the now almost barren land of Palestine, ought to be consistent with itself and look at existing facts. The present population of Palestine is 300,000—all that it will support in the most starveling way. The area of Palestine is 12,000 square miles. The present number of Jews in the world is 6,000,000. If located in Palestine the population would be 500 to a square mile. But the population of China is only 303 to a square mile; of France, 172; of Hindostan 120. England, an extended city living off manufactures and commerce, has 372. If a third of the Jews were to go back to Palestine they would starve to death. Now, we call attention of the exegetes to the fact that this showing appeals directly to their bowels of compassion. Are they willing to starve a matter of five millions of Jews to death for the sake of vindicating their exegesis?

The Silver War.

The following are the documents concerning which the silver discussion is carried on. The Funding act of July 14th, 1870, says:

Act of July 14th, 1870 page 244 of the acts of the second session of the XLIst Congress: That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to issue in a sum or sums not exceeding in the aggregate $200,000,000, coupon or registered bonds of the United States, in such a form as he may prescribe, and of denominations of $50 or some multiple of that sum, redeemable in coin of the present standard value . . . and bearing interest, payable semi-annually in such coin at the rate of 5 per cent per annum. . . . Also a sum or sums not exceeding . . . $300,000,000 of like bonds, the same in all respects . . . interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. . . . Also a sum . . . not exceeding $1,000,000 of like bonds, the same in all respects . . . interest at the rate of 4¼ per cent.

The bonds issued under this act bear the following endorsement:

The United States of America are indebted to ——, of ——, or assigns, in the sum of ——dollars. This bond is issued in accordance with the provisions of an act of Congress, entitled "An act to authorize the refunding of the National debt, approved July 14th, 1870, amended by an act approved January 20th, 1871," and is redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after the first day of September, A. D., 1891, in coin or the standard value of the United States on said July 14th, 1870, with the interest in such coin from the date hereof at the rate of 4¼ per centum per annum, payable quarterly, on the first day of December, March, June and September in each year. The principal and interest are exempt from the payment of all taxes or duties of the United States, as well as from taxation in any form by or under State or municipal or local authority.

Jan. 20, 1878—THE COVENANT RENEWED.

SCRIPTURE—2 Chron. 15: 8-15.

Golden Text—"Be ye strong, therefore, and let not your hands be weak; for your work shall be rewarded."

TOPIC.—"Holy and without blemish."

(Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.)

The result of the prophet's exhortation was that Asa took hold of his work of reformation with renewed courage and vigor. This time he made thorough work of it. He took the two steps that were absolutely necessary to a revival. First he destroyed all the idols of the land, and second, he renewed the altar of the Lord. Steps like these will secure a revival at any time.

A Good Consecration (9-11).—"He gathered all Judah and Benjamin together." Evidently with reference to the covenant that followed. He was moving for a revival in which the whole nation should join. He had compelled the people to renounce their idols—now he meant that they should voluntarily pledge themselves to serve the Lord. A king can enforce the laws—but he cannot coerce a single soul to love the Lord. Hence the immense gathering for the sake of appeal and influence.

The gathering took place in the "third month"—the month Sivan, answering to our June—when the feast of Pentecost was observed, in which the Jews offered to God the first-fruits of the wheat-harvest in bread made of the newly reaped grain, and in which, also, thanks were returned to God as Lord of the harvest. The gathering, therefore, was fitly timed; for they came together to offer the fruits of their victory over Zerah. The offerings must have been very impressive. The sacrifice of seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep made a powerful appeal to the senses of the congregated people. It was a recognition of the fact that the re[illegible] was given them of God, and it was also, an acknowledgment of the fact that they wholly belonged to the Lord. It was in fact a [illegible] of themselves unto [illegible] sacrifice, as it ascended [illegible] to heaven, was meant to symbolize their own complete dedication unto God, as well as their sorrow for past sins. But though they offered so many sacrifices, it is a suggestive thought that they offered none except those that were furnished by the Lord himself. And in our own return to the Lord we do not have to [illegible] sacrifice. Already God [illegible] in the person of his [illegible] hath made him to be sin [illegible] who knew no sin."

[illegible] Covenant (12, 13).—It does [illegible] by whose agency the [illegible] was suggested. It is not [illegible], however, that it was spontaneous [illegible] the part of the people. [illegible] scarcely a doubt [illegible] the rising tide of [illegible] of the affections of the [illegible] their true God, induced [illegible] to him, [illegible] this favorable [illegible] [illegible] It [illegible] [illegible] the divine ruler. [illegible] The rejoicing [illegible] shows that they [illegible] formal [illegible] plainly meant all [illegible] Their joy in the [illegible] By their [illegible] loud voice. The [illegible] subdued, [illegible] would indi[illegible] It [illegible] and most [illegible] taken with [illegible] of [illegible] It was [illegible] wildest [illegible] people [illegible] revival as en[illegible] If God's fol[illegible] the re[illegible] to the Fath[illegible] the election of [illegible]

a Christian the way is easy enough. The great difficulty is to get the will to submit itself to God. 3. They found him. And that was the best reason of all. They had the joy that a new convert feels. No one finds the Lord without experiencing that which, in some is a new serenity, and, in others, a positive ecstacy. 4. "The Lord gave them rest round about." He not only gave them inward peace, but outward peace as well. He so ordered the hearts of men that they were not troubled with wars. And many a man has unexpectedly found that, in making peace with God, he has, at the same time, made peace with his fellow men. "When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him." Prov. 16; 7.

The last fact shows the interest that God took in this return to himself, and his quick responsiveness to their oath. He saw his repentant people afar off and hastened to meet them. By the mouth of his prophet he had promised Asa that, if his hands were not slack, his work should be rewarded, and keeps that pledge by giving him rest from the enemies round about. By this act of the people, the nation was once more pure and lovely in the eyes of God. Once more he could look upon it with tender complacency. Such as it became, by its purification from all idolatry, by the removal of all the Sodomites from the land, and by their own act of consecration, he wants his church, and every child of his, to become—"not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing."

The Void.

[illegible] there is no stronger tendency of the human heart than to have one supreme object of our affections; and the folly of having the flowers of human hope rooted in earthly evils is apparent when cruel frosts destroys them. A mother, among her interesting family, seemed to cling with devotion to her eldest child, a young lady whose amiability and intellectual gifts charmed every one. But, like a heavenly exotic, the rude [illegible] of earth called her—she faded and died. The shock was too [illegible] for the worshipping mother, and life became blank to her. In vain she tried to arouse herself to [illegible] to her promising [illegible] surround her, a settled [illegible] clouded the sunny sky [illegible] interest. How touching [illegible] is the sight when those who [illegible] we find ourselves wondering what hidden, fatal grief is cherished in the heart. One void alone causes more unhappiness than do those awful calamities from which we spring. Do not most natures become worn and wearied by regrets and disappointments more than from heavy grief and misfortune? Indeed, it requires more heroism to become resigned to part with one idol than to sacrifice necessary good. One object alone is worthy to claim our supreme love, and that is our Maker; then it is we find His ready hand supplies our needs even before we ourselves realize them.

Joy Bringers.

Some men move through life as a band of music moves down the street, flinging out pleasures on every side through the air to every one, far and near that can listen. Some men fill the air with their presence and sweetness, as orchards in October days fill the air with perfume of the ripe fruit. Some women cling to their own houses, like the honeysuckle over the door, yet, like them, sweeten all the region with the subtle fragrance of their goodness. There are trees of righteousness which are ever dropping precious fruit around them. There are lives that shine like starbeams, or charm the heart like songs sung upon a holy day.

How great a bounty and a blessing it is to hold the royal gifts of the soul, so that they shall be music to some, and fragrance to others, and life to all! It would be no unworthy thing to live for, to make the power which we have within us the breath of other men's joy; to scatter sunshine where only clouds and shadows reign; to fill the atmosphere where earth's weary toilers must stand, with a brightness which they cannot create for themselves, and which they long for, enjoy and appreciate.

Prince Milan's proclamation, which was issued at Belgrade a few days ago, recounts the Turkish atrocities and violations of faith since the treaty of peace made last February, and concludes as follows: "Let us move alongside the victorious banner of the Czar liberator, with Christian faith in God, the Protector of right, and success is sure. Given in the name of our country's welfare, Servia's independence, and her heroic people. It is God's will."

At the late New York State election the Women's Temperance Union of Utica distributed 300 gallons of coffee at the polls. Senator Conkling help to pay the expenses by giving ten dollars for the cup of coffee that he drank.

THE LESSON IN STORY.

Pansy's Lesson Book for the Boys and Girls. Square 16mo. D. Lothrop & Co., Boston. Price 10 cents.

"Pansy," (Mrs. R. G. Alden,) the author of a host of popular books for children, has perceived the need of a little book that shall approach the International Sunday School lesson from the scholar's standpoint only, that every scholar may feel it his or hers; full of sympathy with their needs, and making herself a little scholar, she has prepared "The Lesson in Story," in which every lesson is told in simple, strong language, followed by Things to notice, Things to think of, a few Questions for me, the Golden Text, a Prayer and a Blackboard picture. With this little book in hand the study of the lessons will be a continual delight, and whatever question book or other help may be used by the Teacher, the scholars will find themselves fully prepared on the lesson and ready to tell its story in their own words, and to answer any questions that may be asked.

THE PEOPLE'S PULPIT

for January contains five sermons by Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., D. D., (Church of the Holy Trinity, New York,) entitled "The Secret of Satisfaction," "Love the Mother of Strength," "Men of Mark," "Spiritual Levites," and "The Store and the State."

This publication is attaining an extended circulation, and its success seems warranted by its literary merits. Dr. Tyng's sermons are good reading, and always sound, for he preaches nothing but Christ. Doctrine with him is a matter of secondary importance, 60 pp. Price 25 cents. Wm. B. Mucklow, Publisher, 42nd St. and Madison Ave., New York City.

THE HAPPY YEAR, 1878,

D. Lothrop & Co., Boston. Leatherette binding. Price, 15 cents.

A charming little vest-pocket volume, containing a complete Calendar for each month of the year 1878, memoranda pages, with blanks for each day in the year; a Bible text for each day in the year, and readings for each month, selected by Miss M. B. Lyman; and some 6 or 10 extra pages in blank for memoranda, making in all 64 pages of Almanac, Memoranda and Daily Food combined; a dainty little manual which every one will want, and which every one will have for its usefulness and beauty. Miss Lyman's name is a sufficient guarantee of the Scripture texts and readings being carefully and wisely selected. The little book must have a large sale.

INTERNATIONAL REVIEW

For January, 1878, has the following table of contents: Thiers, by John Greenleaf Whittier; Elements of National Wealth, by David A. Well; Second Harvest at Olympia, by Ernst Curtius; First Impressions of Athens, by Edward A. Freeman; Sumner's Place, by Maj. Ben. Perley Poore; Imperial Federalism in Germany, by Baron F. Von Holtzendorff; Money, by Prof. William G. Sumner; Modern Love, by Samuel G. Osgood, D. D.; The Method of Presidential Elections, by Representative Alexander H. Stephens; Art. XIII, Philip Gilbert Hamerton; Literature of all Nations. The new volume and new year of the International Review opens brilliantly, and if the initial number may be taken as a fair indication of the work to be performed in 1878 we shall have reason to be well pleased with what is really an American enterprise, while it represents and reflects the best thoughts of nations. The current number offers contributions from America's best loved poet, Whittier; her trusted statistician, Wells; her Congressional biographer, Maj. Ben Perley Poore; England's most renowned historian, Freeman; England's highest art teacher, Hamerton; Germany's greatest philologist and Hellenist, Curtius, and her learned constitutionist, Baron F. Von Holtzendorff; the distinguished Southern Representative, Alexander H. Stephens; the well known Italian, De Gubernatis; and Herbert Tuttle, of Berlin; Casper Rene Gregory, of Leipsig; M. Nougarede, of Paris; George Barnet Smith, of London; Professor Sumner of Yale; Dr. Samuel Osgood, Dr. John Hall, Charlton T. Lewis and others of New York and elsewhere. In range of subject it is equally international and in interest universal. As the "International" invariably comcomprises literary material not accessible elsewhere $5.00 cannot be better expeoded than in a subscription to it. Copies of the January number may be found at the booksellers and newsdealers, where future numbers may be subscribed for. A. S. Barnes & Co., Publishers, 111 and 113 William street, N. Y.

Solid Accomplishments for Girls.

The proper education of young girls is one of the most important subjects which can engage the attention of reformers and philosophers. Is not too much of their time taken up in acquiring fancy accomplishments, while solid learning is neglected? Is not the old-fashioned notion, that a girl should be so trained as to enable her to perform the part of a housewife when she gets married, as sound now as it was in the days of our grandmothers?

These reflections naturally occupy us as we read the following letter:

"SIR: Feeling a little uneasy in my mind in regard to what I consider a very serious matter, I take the liberty of asking you for a little advice. I am a young man of 25 years, work at my trade, and can earn fifteen dollars a week; engaged to be married to a very nice, and, I may say, accomplished young lady. She is well educated, a good singer, fair performer on the piano, &c., but, I am sorry to say, no housekeeper. She has never cooked a meal of victuals, cannot iron a shirt, or do anything in that line. And, as I will not be able to hire a servant to do those things, which I think a poor mechanic's wife ought to be able to do. I am sorely distressed. Advise me if you can, and you will greatly oblige J. W. D."

We sympathize with our troubled correspondent, and agree with him that no woman is fit to be the wife of a mechanic on fifteen dollars a week who cannot cook his meals and iron his shirts. Though she may sing melodiously and get a good deal of music out of a piano, these accomplishments do not supply the place of domestic knowledge and experience. She is too expensive an ornament for a poor man to possess.

Her parents have brought this girl up unwisely, if they had not taken pains to fit her for the duties she was likely to be called on to perform. It was all very well to teach her to sing and to play on the piano, but her mother should have seen to it that she also learned to cook and to iron. Properly pursued, the art of cookery may occupy the finest minds, and a girl situated as we judge our correspondent's sweetheart is should be early inducted into its mysteries. A great deal of domestic unhappiness is caused by bad cookery, and a neatly laid table with appetizing viands will usually bring peace and harmony into a home.

A poor man's wife ought to know how to make his household comfortable, and she cannot do that by drumming on the piano or singing at the window, while the pot boils over on the stove, and the meat burns on the gridiron. So far from deeming the offices of a housewife beneath her, she should rejoice at the opportunity her their household labor done, for the wife finds that by working with her husband at his trade, or by keeping his books, she can make her time more valuable than by spending over pots and pans. It is cheaper to employ a servant, whose services cost less than she can earn. But in that case she contributes to the joint stock of the pair, and so proves herself a good wife and a faithful helpmate. If the wife of a poor man does not do this, or herself look after his home, she becomes a burden to him, and makes his life miserable.

We advise our correspondent to read our words to his sweetheart, and suggest to her the propriety of at once learning to cook and to iron. If she is assiduous and really anxious to qualify herself to become a good housekeeper, she can acquire the art in a much shorter time than it takes to make a first-class singer or an expert piano player. Moreover, unless she is likely to make her musical accomplishments of pecuniary profit, she will be wise if she neglects them for ironing and cookery. A girl engaged to a mechanic on fifteen dollars a week ought to know how to iron a shirt so that it shall satisfy the most critical eye, and to get a dinner which shall tempt the appetite of a husband.

Until she has acquired these solid accomplishments, we advise our friend to put off the marriage. Though she begins late, she may speedily grow proficient. When she has learned how to boil a potato and to broil a steak, she will be fit to be led to the altar; but not until then.—New York Sun

New Year's Day.

Knowledge of social observances is absolutely indispensable for all who aspire to live in society, and it is a knowledge that cannot be expected to "come by nature." A Spanish proverb tells us that "Good manners are perpetual letters recommendatory," and men of renown, in all ages, have taught more or less the value of good behavior. Indeed there are few moral teachers that have not discoursed and written upon the importance and value of politeness. Even the "beloved disciple" has left us many injunctions to gentleness of manner. Coming down to later times, we find that the great Lord Bacon deigned to write an essay upon this subject, in which he reminds us that a precious stone must be of high value to do without a setting, and that a man must be a very great one to dispense with social observances With such high authority to support us, we need not fear the criticism of those who affect to consider a code of manners as ridiculous, but offer to our readers the various rules as practiced in polite society.

From the time of the Romans it has been customary to celebrate the coming of the New Year as an occasion for rejoicing, family reunions, and offering of gifts, but in no other country, save Holland and our own, has the day been exclusively devoted by gentlemen to paying congratulatory visits to the ladies. This custom has descended to us from our Dutch ancestors, by whom it was called "the great day of cake," as cake, wine and punch were at this time lavishly distributed to all visitors. The practice of making New Year's call's was highly appreciated by the "Father of Our Country," who extolled the custom and hoped that it would always be kept up.—Ex.

Careful parents can feel entirely safe in putting the GOLDEN HOURS in the family. It is free from every objectionable feature in illustrations and reading matter, and adapted to a place in the Christmas and moral household.

A volume of 576 pages is furnished in the twelve numbers for the year, which, bound up, affords, at a small expense, an amount of reading-matter that would cost five times the subscription-price.

National Repository,
A CHRISTIAN MAGAZINE.
Rev. D. CURRY, D.D., Editor.
Begins Jan'y, 1878. Try it one Year.
ONLY $3 A YEAR.

"The scope and character of the magazine shall be that of a first-class religious and literary monthly, of the brightest character attainable, and pervaded, whether in its general or religious articles, by a thoroughly Christian spirit."—Order of the Committee.

Under these directions, it will be devoted to General and Religious Literature, Biographies and Travels, Criticisms and Art.

A sufficient number of the best writers for the press are employed to furnish all the variety in the several departments which their scope and importance require to make them rich and instructive.

The editorial department will be a feature of the magazine. Rev. Dr. Curry, both experienced and successful as an editor, brings to his duties the purpose of giving his whole strength to the work before him.

Each number will contain one or more articles illustrated with Wood Engravings, in the best style of this art, adding beauty and value to the pages.

The twelve numbers for the year will contain 1,152 pages of reading-matter, which, published in book form, would make not less than fifteen volumes, worth $1.50 each, and will comprise a variety that will be more interesting and valuable to the general reader than can be procured in books for many times the yearly price of the magazine.

We earnestly request you to take the National Repository for 1878—to give it one year's trial, and thereby determine for yourselves whether it is worthy of a place in the Christian home.

The Coming Man.

A pair of very chubby legs,
  Encased in scarlet hose;
A pair of little stubby boots,
  With rather doubtful toes;
A little kilt, a little coat,
  Cut as a mother can—
And lo! before us strides, in state,
  The future "coming man."

His eyes, perchance, will read the stars,
  And search their unknown ways;
Perchance the human heart and soul
  Will open to their gaze;
Perchance their keen and flashing glance
  Will be a nation's light—
Those eyes that now are wistful bent
  On some "big fellow's" kite.

That brow, where mighty thoughts will dwell
  In solemn, secret state,
Where fierce ambition's restless strength
  Shall war with future fate;
Where science from now hidden caves
  New treasures shall outpour—
'Tis knit now, with a troubled doubt,
  Are two, or three cents more?

Those lips that, in coming years,
  Will plead, or pray, or teach?
Whose whispered words, on lightning flash,
  From world to world may reach;
That sternly grave, may speak command
  Or, smiling, win control—
Are coaxing now for ginger bread
  With all a baby's soul?

Those hands—those little busy hands—
  So sticky, small and brown;
Those hands, whose only mission seems
  To pull all order down—
Who knows what hidden strength may lie
  Within their chubby grasp,
Though now 'tis but a taffy-stick
  In sturdy hold they clasp?

Ah, blessings on those little hands,
  Whose work is not undone!
And blessings on those little feet,
  Whose race is yet unrun!
And blessings on that little brain,
  That has not learned to plan!
Whate'er the future holds in store,
  God bless the "coming man."

"I Will Be With Thee."

The World's Granary.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 25.—The reports of the correspondence of the Department of Agriculture, received and now in course of preparation for immediate publication, show the enormous aggregate yield of 360,000,000 bushels of wheat for 1877, which is 50,000,000 bushels more than ever produced. The same official authority shows that the corn product was 1,300,000,000 bushels, with corresponding large yields of oats and potatoes. The report shows that there was never greater abundance in the land. Out of the wheat product is estimated, deducting for home consumption in food and seed, that upwards of 110,000,000 bushels of wheat can be spared for export. The largest export yet made in one year was 91,000,000 bushels, with an average of 63,000,000. The Department is also in receipt of information from wheat producing sections of Europe, from which it is ascertained that the wheat crop in Southwestern Europe, which produces the largest of the surplus, is good; in Southern Russia, amounting to 25 per cent. above the average. The crop in Northwestern Europe is poor. It is stated in communications from Southern Russia that if the war should stop shortly, there will be a large shipment, and that shippers are ready to take advantage of the first opportunity, Great Britain offering the lowest market, which will, it is stated, require about 100,000,000 bushels from the present season's yield. The American surplus will have its usual demand in English markets, with an increase subject to the contingencies of the existing struggle in Southwestern Europe being prolonged into another season. The Department is also in receipt of flattering accounts of the encouragement which the great yield of the past season is having on every class of enterprise. The average of winter wheat for this year is greater than that of last.

Two New Lincoln Stories.

One day a gentleman, speaking about Mr. Chase's political ambition, expressed surprise that the office of Chief Justice of the United States was not sufficiently high to allay the ambition of any man. "Do you know Mr. Chase well—very well?" asked Mr. Lincoln. "Yes—I think so," somewhat doubtfully replied the other. "Well,' rejoined Mr. Lincoln, "let me tell you about Mr. Chase. He is a man who, if he is happy enough to get into heaven, will certainly aspire to a seat on the throne."

At another time during a critical period of the war, two gentlemen were consulting with Mr. Lincoln on an important matter which required a prompt decision. Observing that other persons were waiting to see him, one of them remarked that his work seemed to be endless, for as soon as one matter was adjusted another arose, and that many matters must be brought before him which it would be impossible for any man to settle. "That reminds me of a man out West," said Mr. Lincoln. "He lived away out West, where he had no neighbors, and worked his farm himself. One day some friends visited him and walked out to look at the place. The host pointed out the use of this and that lot, and in one which he said he was going to plow the visitors observed an immense tree which had been cut down recently. They asked him what he was going to do with that tree. "Well," said he, "that tree has caused me considerable perplexity. I couldn't make up my mind just what to do about it. It is so green that I can't burn it; it would take ten pair of oxen to drag it off, and I have only one pair; and if I take the time necessary to dig a hole to bury it in it will make me late with my plowing. This morning, however, I solved the problem. I determined just to plow around it."

"Ma," said a thoughtful boy, "I don't think Solomon was so rich as they say he was." "Why, my dear, what could have put that into your head?" "Why the Bible says he slept with his fathers; and I think if he had been so very rich, he would have had a bed of his own."

When a faithful mother goes on a whaling expedition, she never fails to get all the blubber she wants.

SWAYNE'S OINTMENT,

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

U. S. Marshal's office. Harrisonburg. Va.

Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease, itching piles, had consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. I deem it my duty to give you this well merited testimonial of so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit.

Very respectfully,
WM. P. GROVE.

J. & A. Metcalf, (firm of Hanley & Metcalf,) Palmyra, Mo., writes:

January 1, 1877.

I received your letter, also the ointment for itching piles. I have used the ointment for three weeks, and am now perfectly cured. I feel very thankful that I am free from that terrible pest, the "itching piles."

Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry

seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered with night sweats, burning fever, pains and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.

HOME TESTIMONY.

DR. SWAYNE—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs; in short, it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me, at the factory.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speok of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

Chemist and Professor of Phrenology.
Consultations Every Day, from 8 o'Clock a.m. to 4 p.m. at
NO. 43 BOURBON STREET,

By means of his powerful tonic and invigorating medicines, which he applies himself, he has obtained the greatest success in every place he has visited along the Coast, and he can show certificates of persons restored to health who had been given up as incurable, and bed-ridden for years. By his treatment, numbers of ladies, as well as gentlemen, have recovered their health and bloom of youth.

His new system is a sure cure for Apparent Apoplexy, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Neuralgia, Hemorrhage, Faintness, Sallowness, Strangulation, Diseases of the Womb, Fevers, Sore Eyes, Pain in the Stomach, Old and Rebellious Syphallitic Diseases, Scurvy, Scrofula, and all those Chronic Diseases which, in the South strike a man powerless and by a long agony lead certainly to death.

N. B.—His treatment excludes all those medicines having for base, arsenic, mercury, or quinine, which generally cause the decay of teeth and the weakening of all the organs, leaving the system in a state of prostration by taking off all its strength and very often afflicting it with new disease.

The Science of Phrenology has alone the power to recognize the symptoms characterizing diseases and to discover all the phases of existence; acquiring this knowledge only by a thorough study, it does not startle, but astonishes, and by its accuracy gives the person consulting a certainty of cure and an insight into what he is about.

[illegible] Life of Christ [illegible] all Our Hopes.

A SERMON BY REV. [illegible] D. D., BROOKLYN.

"[illegible] ye shall live also."—

[illegible] were addressed to [illegible] by the Savior just before [illegible] on the cross. [illegible]

did it expire? When He was in the garden, in the midst of his agonies? After that He speaks the most tender words to His Disciples, and heals the ear of the suffering servant. Did it expire when His Disciples had forsaken him when He had been cruelly mocked and crucified? See His look of compassion toward Peter, and his prayer on the cross. Death did not destroy it, for, after the resurrection, how tenderly He spoke to the Marys, and Thomas, and Peter, and all. There is no evidence of the slightest decline of His affection even to the present. A heart that would bear so much, must be always warm to those whose salvation He seeks. We are authorized to feel assured that He greatly delights in doing all in His power for those who trust Him.

2. He lives in His ability to help to the utmost. After His resurrection He declared that all power in heaven and earth was given Him. The apostle declares (Eph. i: 20-22) that all principality and power and might, in this world and the world to come are put under His feet. In Colossians we are told that He is the head of all principality and power. This is that humble man in humble garb; He who was insulted, spit upon, but never answered a word. Here was Omnipotence wrapped in mortal weakness, divinity clothed with flesh. Now, this Omnipotent one can give all the help we need. He gives comfort and succor amid all manner of temptations. Christ has triumphed over the powers of darkness. Those who believe have not one foe He has not triumphed over. As our intercessor He stands at the right hand of the Father. Because I live, says this Omnipotent friend, ye shall live also.

3. He lives in a special manner with the believer. "I am the bread of life," declares Christ. With the bread we eat we are placed in a most vital relation. The same truth is conveyed by the figure, "I am the vine, ye are the branches." Paul speaks of believers as the body of Christ, He the head. As there is the closest relation between the limbs, the trunk and the head, so is there between Christ and believers. There are many allusions in the Bible to this peculiar, most vital, relation between Christ and His people. It is of no concern how this relation exists, but the fact of its existence. How this throws light upon the saying, "Because I live, ye shall live also." Thou art the bread, how can we perish? Thou art the vine, how can the branches die? In this we see the grandeur of a life in Christ.

4. Christ lives to destroy all power that is opposed to man's redemption. For this work He came into the world. His mission had been declared by prophets for ages. His advent was announced by angels. He most solemnly declares that those who believe in Him shall never die; My sheep "shall never perish," neither shall any pluck them out of my hand." Before heaven and before hell, He has placed His hand to the work of man's salvation. He has bound Himself by most solemn promises that He will bring man to glory; that He will fill heaven with joy, and hell with dismay. What imagination can adequately conceive of the glory of the redeemed when they shall triumph in Christ? This was the joy that was set before Him. His heart is set upon the accomplishment of this work, that you or [illegible] the least that trusts in Him, should not perish.

[illegible] This shows the blessedness of being a true disciple of Christ. A merchant has a ship at sea. There are many storms, but, as a wise man, he placed a good insurance upon the ship. The evil tidings, [illegible] do not trouble him. O, [illegible] blessedness in the assurance that our guarantee to life immortal is as perfect as that of [illegible] Himself. But are we conscious of being His? This examine [illegible]. Be solicitous of nothing [illegible]. Be sure as the sinking [illegible] that we have hold of Christ's [illegible]

[illegible] But what of those who have [illegible] of Christ? There is no [illegible] continued existence [illegible] Why, O why, will [illegible] proffered life? [illegible]

Employment for Coloerd People.

A question frequently raised by those fully appreciating the great need of intelligent men and women among the colored people is, whether there are sufficient openings for young colored men and women of higher education to warrant them in spending the time and money necessary to take a regular collegiate or professional course? There are many places in the South and West in which a colored doctor could soon build up for himself a lucrative practice.

The people, however, have been so repeatedly imposed upon by ignorant pretenders, that unless he comes well qualified he will fail to gain their confidence.

There are numerous towns in the South in which a colored lawyer might graduallv win a paying practice that would eventually become extensive and highly remunerative. The colored people are occasionally buying lands. Some have already lost them through defective titles.

Should one of their own sons establish his reputation as a thoroughly reliable lawyer for giving legal advice, or ferreting out insecure land titles, would they not naturally bring their business to him? The young man whose bosom heaves with legal aspirations, however, hardly needs to be reminded that he will find himself surrounded by experienced and skillful lawyers, all trying to secure the same cases he is expecting to get; nor will he be long in finding out that the colored people, like all sensible people, will take the business they want successfully performed, to the best lawyers Therefore, in order to gain their confidence and their practice, he must prove himself one of the best.

The people are advancing in general intelligence, hence teachers who several years ago were thought to know it all, are even now passed by for those better qualified; and in a few years to come still better qualifications will be demanded. It seems but yesterday since nearly every city school in the Union, North or South, though for colored children, was closed against colored teachers. Now the schools in Washington, Louisville, Memphis, St. Louis and other cities have been opened to them, and in a short time the schools of still other cities, Nashville included, will be open to them.

But those who desire situations in schools from which they are now excluded should understand that color can not compensate for lack of information, and hence, when they knock at the door of these schools they should back their application by undeniable scholarship.

The more observing of the colored people occasionally complain that the minister does not preach as well as he formerly did, and that the children do not like to attend Sabbath School as well as they used to. What the reasons for these changes are they, perhaps, will not attempt to inform you. But they are simply these, the people have picked up here and there scraps of information, and, therefore, entertain a higher idea of what constitutes good preaching than they did ten years ago, whereas the minister's preaching ability has not kept pace with the advancement of his audience. The Sabbath School teachers have not kept up with the intellectual demands of the children.

Any fair-minded person who will give due weight to these considerations can hardly fail to conclude that if any particular portion of the American people stand in especial need of representative men and women of the highest order of mental culture and moral courage, it is the colored people. The day of superstition and exalted nonsense is rapidly passing away, the age of advanced knowledge and liberal views is upon us, eloquently persuading us to adopt for our motto "Ignorance is the curse of God; knowledge is the wings on which we fly to Heaven."—Fisk Expositor.

Church Gambling.

If festivals are necessary, let them be held in such a way that no questionable method shall stain the money left behind. Turn not the altar's broad top into a box for dice rattling. Let the Church stimulate the State, and not put itself where the State shall chase it with a stout stick. It is high time that all church gambling should cease.—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

The only way to make a friend is to be one.

Southern Cities Coming to the Front.

That the war did not wholly prostrate the South is evidenced by the wonderful increase of her population, trade and wealth during the past ten years. Adversity taught the South to rely on herself for many articles for which she had always been dependent on other sections of the country, and she is now beginning to reap the fruits of a valuable experience which will soon make her the most independent region in the world.

All through the South manufactories are springing up which not only supply home demands but are competing with the mills of the East.

As marts of commerce, emporiums of trade and centers of manufacture the cities of the South are rapidly marching to the front.

Richmond, Virginia, now has a population of over 76,000. Located at the head of tide water where five railroads and the Kanawha canal form a junction, the enterprising citizens of this beautiful city are extensively engaged in commerce and manufactures.

Memphis, Tennessee, contains 70,000 people, and has become the fourth largest cotton depot in America. In point of cotton sales it ranks second. It is the chief business center between St. Louis and New Orleans.

Savannah, Georgia, has a population of 30,000, and is driving a brisk trade, foreign and domestic. It is the second largest cotton port in the South, and carries on a large business in lumber and naval stores. Atlanta, the State Capital stands at the junction of five important railroads. Its population is about 50,000. Augusta, with a population of over 21,000, stands at the head of navigation where five important railroads connect. It has one large cotton factory and five flour mills.

Selma, Alabama, is rapidly becoming a great center of trade in cotton, lumber, iron and coal. It is the terminus of eight railroads. Mobile has a population of over [illegible]5,000, and as a cotton market almost rivals New Orleans. Manufactures are assuming an important feature.

Texas is increasing in population at an unprecedented rate, Galveston contains 40,000 people. As a port of entry, with the best harbor on the Gulf, this enterprising city is going on finely. Dallas now numbers more than 16,000, and is the center of a great wheat and cotton growing region, where the people are fully alive to the importance of manufactures.

Indeed the South is pushing forward in all directions. No longer a mere agricultural region, she is beginning to rival the North and East in manufactures. Capitalists are constantly attracted to her cities and thriving towns where rich returns follow close upon liberal investments.—Western Grocer.

The Clock of Clocks.

A PENNSYLVANIAN OUTDOES THE WORK OF HABRECHT, OF STRASBURG.

In Mengel's building is now on exhibition in all probability the most wonderful clock in the world. It was built by Stephen D. Engle, a watchmaker, at Hazleton. He is about forty-five years of age, and was about twenty years in perfecting the clock. Mr Reid paid Engle $5,000 for it. Engle never saw the Strasburg clock. In fact, he has not traveled more than two hundred miles from home at any time. This clock stands eleven feet high. At its base it is about four feet wide, and at the top about two. It is about three feet deep at the base, gradually less towards the top. Its colors are brown and gold. The Strasburg clock is thirty feet high, yet its mechanism is not so intricate, nor has it as many figures as the Hazleton clock. The Strasburg clock's figures are about three feet high and the American clock's about nine inches. Three minutes before the hour a pipe organ inside the clock plays an anthem. It has five tunes. Bells are then rung, and when the hour is struck double doors in an alcove open and a figure of Jesus appears. Double doors to the left then open, and the apostles appear slowly, one by one, in procession. As they appear and pass Jesus they turn towards him. Jesus bows, the apostle turns again and proceeds through the double doors in an alcove to the right. As Peter approaches Satan looks out of a window above and tempts him. Five times the devil appears, and when Peter passes, denying Christ, the cock flaps its wings and crows. When Judas appears Satan comes down from his window and follows Judas out into the procession and then goes back up to his place to watch Judas, appearing on both sides. As the procession has passed, Judas and the three Marys disappear, and the doors are closed. The scene can be repeated seven times in an hour if necessary, and the natural motion of the clock produces it four times per hour, whereas the Strasburg procession is made but once a day, at 12 o'clock. Below the place is the main dial, about thirteen inches in diameter. To its right is a figure of Time with an hour-glass. Above this is a window, at which appear figures representing youth, manhood and old age. To the left of the dial is a skeleton representing Death. When the hour hand approaches the first quarter Time reverses his hour-glass and strikes one on a bell with his scythe, when another bell inside responds; then Childhood appears instantly. When the hour hand approaches the second quarter, or half hour, there are heard the strokes of two bells. Then Youth appears, and the organ plays a hymn. After this Time strikes two and reverses his hour-glass, when two bells respond inside. One minute after this a chime of bells is heard; when a folding-door opens in the upper porch, and one at the right of the court, when the Savior comes out. Then the apostles appear in procession. The clock also tells of the moon's changes, the tides, the seasons, days, and day of the month and year and the signs of the zodiac; and on top a soldier is constantly on guard, walking back and forward. As the hours advance, Manhood, Old Age and Death take part in the panorama. —Reading Eagle.

A Little Girl's Influence.

Did you ever see the inside of a drunkard's home, with everything going to wreck and ruin? If you have you know how old Hunter's looked; not that he was very old, but he was so shabby and used up, the boys called him "old Hunter."

He was very ugly when in liquor, abusing his wife and children shamefully. They often hid when they heard him coming; and the time has been when his poor wife has been turned out into a snow bank. He had one little girl, however, the youngest, who seemed to fare better at his hands than the rest of the family. To her he was always kind. In his worst moments he appeared to know and spare Luly.

One day she crept into his lap, and looking up into his face, she said:

"Father, I love 'ou." Luly could not speak all her words plain, though she was old enough to. "Father, I love 'ou," she repeated; "I love 'ou."

"Do you, Luly?" said her father in a subdued tone.

"Father, I want you to be a good man, because I love 'ou. You will be a good man, father, won't you? God wants you to be a good man.

Tears rushed to the father's eyes, and he hugged his little girl to his bosom. Then he set her down and hurried out of the house. He had a job of work that day, and went to his work. Yet he saw and heard nothing for the rest of the day but Luly and her pleading words. He be a good man! He wished he could. He did not then know that when other means had failed to bring him back to his duty and to himself, God sent his little girl to lead him.

Old Hunter was pricked up in his conscience, for there was a little left; and it kept pricking, until at length he went to a temperance man.

"Sir," said he, "I want to sign the pledge, and turn over a new leaf."

"God be praised!" said the temperance man; "it's the best news I've heard for a long time. But you must know that taking the pledge is not enough—it's only a beginning; you must get help from on high to keep it. Now, you take your family and come around to our church, and we'll rally around you, and help you on."

So one steps leads to another. Old Hunter is now a reformed man, sober and industrious. He is Mr. Hunter now, and goes to Sunday School with his children every Sabbath.

Men are like words, when not properly placed they lose their value.

Seeking a Situation.

When seeking a situation do not propose to take an advanced post. Ask for a chance to work, beginning at the bottom. You may be considered qualified for something better, yet be placed at the foot to test your temper and fidelity—to ascertain if you will be "faithful over a few things," as a qualification to become "a ruler over many things." If you sweep, make fires, dust, do anything and everything promptly and cheerfully, you will be advanced so fast as you are seen to have mastered your allotted position. Grumbling at your lot, and asking to be put forward, will disgust your superiors, who are perhaps planning to obtain some one to put in your place that you may be put forward. Men like to manage their own business—dislike to have boys make suggestions as to their own occupation or pay. Plants are not put into large pots until, by healthy growing, they seem to have filled the small ones. If a puny plant were to tease the gardener for a large pot, or open air planting, he would wisely say, "Fill the place you occupy first and thus show your adaptation to a larger one;" or, in disgust, he would jerk out the feeble starveling and put a vigorous successor in its place. Many a boy has lost his situation because he whined for a post of duty beyond his capacity to fill. He who, in store or shop, begins at the bottom and learns how to do everything, and is competent to every duty, has his position and ultimate success in his own keeping; and he will be sought after by many, if it is known he is at liberty to accept of a new engagement. We have seen a faithful boy take a selfish man's place in a shop or store, having, of course, increased responsibilities, a more elevated position, and better pay than before.—Choice of Pursuits.

Gen. Grant in Tears.

When Mrs. Sartoris, radiant with happiness, had gone from home and kindred to cross the ocean and find new ties with strangers, her wedding robe and vail were the last articles to be put away in one of those zinc packing boxes that were used to preserve her silks from the effects of a sea voyage. An attache of the White House took a porter up stairs to bring down this last packing-box—it was in Nellie's room. He knocked. Receiving no answer he entered. Mrs. Grant confronted him, and by sign motioned him not to permit the porter to enter, and laid her finger upon her mouth to invoke silence. The man glanced about the apartment to divine the cause of imposed quiet. Upon his daughter's bed, his face buried in her pillow, convulsed with suppressed emotions, lay prone and prostrate the grief-stricken father, who had gone through all the ceremonies of the marriage day with dry eyes and an unmoved countenance, but parent love for a favorite child had conquered the "belted sphinx" only in the privacy of his daughter's chamber.

Be Agreeable at Meals.

Every one can do something to add to the social life at the table. If one cannot talk he can listen, or ask questions, and draw out others who can talk. Good listeners are as necessary as good talkers. Never argue at the table; but tell pleasant stories, relate or read anecdotes and look out for the good of all. Sometimes a single anecdote from a paper starts a conversation that lasts during the meal-time.

A family table ought to be bright and cheerful, a sort of domestic alter, where every one casts down his or her offering, great or small, of pleasantness and peace; where, for at least a brief space in the day, all annoyances are laid aside, all stormy tempers hushed, all quarrels healed; every one being glad and content to sit down at the same board and eat the same bread and salt, making it, whether it were a rich repast or a dinner of herbs, equally a joyful, almost sacramental meal.—Dr. Holbrook.

"Say well is good, but do well is better;
Do well seems the spirit, say well is the letter;
Say well is goodly, and helps to please;
But do well is godly, and gives the world ease;
Say well to silence sometimes is bound,
But do well is free on every ground.
Say well has friends—some here, some there,
But do well is welcome everywhere.
By say well many to God's Word cleave;
But for lack of do well it often leave.
If say well and do well were bound in one frame,
Then all were done, all were one, and gotten were gain."

Fine Prayers.

I believe God abhors fine prayers. If a person asks charity of you in elegant sentences, he is not likely to get it. Finery in dress or language is out of place in beggars. I heard a man in the street one day begging aloud by means of a very fine oration. He used grand language in very pompous style, and I dare say he thought he was sure of getting piles of coppers by his borrowed speech; but I, for one, gave him nothing, but felt inclined to laugh at his bombast. Is it not likely that many great prayers are as useless? Many prayer-meeting prayers are a great deal too fine. Keep your figures and metaphors and parabolic expressions for your fellow-creatures, use them to those who want to be instructed, but do not parade them before God. When we pray, the simpler our prayers the better; the plainest, humblest language which expresses our meaning is the best.—Spurgeon.

Where They Get the Brimstone.

Bishop Beckwith, of Georgia, was interviewed on the question of eternal punishment, and he answered by telling a story: The Bishop said that in Virginia, many years ago, a youth was under the care of one of the old negro "mammies." She used to pictnre to him many vivid and terrible things that were to be encountered in the bad place. By these descriptions of the torments of hell she sought to make him abhor evil and seek to escape its penalties. One day, after hearing the place spoken of from the pulpit, the little fellow said to his old nurse: "Mammy, you say the wicked folks go to the bad place?" "Yas, honey, dey all goes down dar, sho'! Dem dat don't lub and sarve de Lord mus' all go dar!" "And you say it is all fire and brimstone down there?" "Dat's so, honey; de brimstone ar' jess burnin' all de time—all de time—an' neber gits done burnin' yer up furebber?" "Well, mammy, where do they get all the brimstone from to keep the fire up?" "Take keer, honey, don't let dat fool yer 'bout de fi'ah! Yer kerries the brimstone wid yer, an' dar's 'nuff in the heart ob de sinner ter keep him in a blaze furebber—dat's so!"

Why They Went to War.

A certain king sent to another king; saying,

"Send me a blue pig with a black tail, or else—"

The other replied:

"I have not got one; and if I had—"

On this weighty cause they went to war. After they had exhausted their armies and treasure, and had laid waste their kingdoms, they began to wish to make peace, but before this could be done it was necessary that the insulting language which had led to the trouble should be explained.

What could you mean" asked the second king of the first, "by saying, 'Send me a blue pig wiih a black tail, or else—?'"

"Why," said the other, "I meant a blue pig with a black tail, or else some other color. But what could you mean by saying, 'I have not got one, and if I had—?'"

"Why, of course, if I had I should have sent it."

The explanation was satisfactory, and peace was made at once.

The story of the two kings ought to serve as a lesson for us all. Most quarrels are quite as foolish as the war of the blue pig with a black tail.

For disbelieving most of the floating scandal;

For refusing to kick a fallen man;

For being kind to the distressed;

For being patient toward everybody;

For doing good to all men;

For walking uprightly before God;

For lending to the Lord;

There were eighty-nine failures reported in New York city during the month of December, together with eleven assignments, of which the assets and liabilities could not be obtained. A bloody fight took place some days ago, on the south side of Red river, in the Panhandle of Texas, between hunting parties of Cheyenne, Pawnee and Arapahoe Indians. Thirty Cheyennes and twelve Pawnees are said to have been killed. The loss of the Arapahoes is not stated. The cause of the fight was the trespass of Pawneess on the hunting ground of the Cheyennes.

The annexation of the Transvaal Republic by the British Government last year has brought with it serious trouble in the South African possessions of that power. In annexing Transvaal and its 150,000 natives and Dutch, another Kaffir war has been imposed on England. The Kaffirs claim a portion of the annexed territory, and judging from the former wars of England with these people it will require a large army to subdue them, and their subjection will be followed, undoubtedly, by another large annexation of South African territory.

The last report of the Southern Claims Commission shows that 1,659 cases were reported, involving claims for $5,761,106 27, of which 714 were allowed in whole or in part, and 945 were disallowed wholly. Rev. Graham Bell has been appointed the special agent of the SOUTHWESTERN for the city of New Orleans. He is authorized to take subscriptions and make collections.

Rev. Stephen Priestly, of Pleasant Plains Church, New Orleans, writes that he was quite successful in a festival held December 24th. The house was full and a good supper was served free to all who had 25 cents admission. Mr. Joseph Dutch and Mr. R. W. Brown and daughter were especially active in making the entertainment a success. The proceeds were over $93. Brother Priestly returns to Pleasant Plains a second year and is cordially received by all his people.

The Louisiana Conference.

We publish elsewhere the statistics and appointments of the Louisiana Conference. The session was a very pleasant one. Bishop Harris met the Conference for the first time, and by a rising unanimous vote the Conference expressed its high appreciation of his services. His perfect familiarity with every detail of conference business, as well as with every disciplinary provision on all subjects discussed, his splendid qualities as a presiding officer, together with his good humor, which never fails, make him a most excellent president of an annual Conference. He will always receive a most hearty welcome whenever he returns to Louisiana, and we but speak the sentiment of the Conference when we say—may he come soon and often. Bishop Harris specially explained the disciplinary provisions for the support of Bishops, Presiding Elders and pastors, and called the attention of the Conference to the fact that appropriations to Presiding Elders should not be made direct. The plan now followed in the South was adopted before the annual Conferences were fully organized, but should be discontinued and the regular disciplinary plan followed, by which all missionary appropriations should be made to the stations and circuits. We shall refer to this matter again. The Presiding Elders and Preachers united heartily in the determination to carry out the Discipline in every respect. This year direct appropriations will be made to the Districts for the last time, and District Steward meetings will be held in every District and apportionments made to each charge, to raise the additional amounts necessary to support the Presiding Elders.

The anniversaries were occasions of much interest. On Wednesday night the subject of Church Extension was discussed. Dr. McCarty, who had attended the anniversaries of the Society in Philadelphia last fall presided, and gave an interesting account of the great work done by that Society. Louisiana receives from two to three thousand dollars every year from this Society to help build churches. Rev. J. M. Vance made a speech which was highly spoken of. On Thursday night Dr. McCarty preached the Missionary sermon. On Friday night Prof. J. S. Bean spoke on the subject of Education, especially urging the claims of New Orleans University, of which he has charge. We spoke on the Publishing interests of the Church, and presented the claims of the SOUTHWESTERN to the citizens of Baton Rouge present, and over thirty subscribed to the paper. All the benevolent societies of the Church were remembered in addresses and good reports.

We had no General Conference officer with us from abroad. Dr. Ford, our Sunday School Agent for the South expected to have been with us, but a letter from him explained that sickness in his family detained him. There was an increase in nearly all the benevolent collections, making a total increase of about $200. Through the efficiency of Brothers Madden and Priestley the entire statistical tables were all furnished in duplicates by Saturday morning, and the moneys all collected and placed to the proper societies.

The preaching services were largely attended. On Saturday night Rev. Marcus Dale preached a sermon that will long be remembered because of its power. Sabbath morning, after a good Love Feast, Bishop Harris preached a sermon full of instruction, which greatly blessed and inspired the Conference. Sunday afternoon Dr. Braun, of the First German Church of this city, preached on "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world." He was a little embarrassed in his use of the English language, but his effort was very creditable to him, and a blessing to them who listened. After the morning sermon the class of deacons was ordained, except one who could not [illegible], and who was ordained on Monday in this city. Of [illegible] passed to the list of effective [illegible] all had been ordained [illegible] except Rev. J. J. Kienle, pastor of the Second German Church [illegible]. By special request his [illegible] took place in the First [illegible] Church, in the presence of [illegible] congregation of our German [illegible]

[illegible] nine were received in[illegible] on trial. Prominent [illegible] was Hon. Pierre [illegible] in the [illegible] servedly to the christian ministry. We noted during the Conference with pleasure how many young men of good attainments and earnest piety were making their presence and power felt among us. This feature of the Louisiana Conference we regard as most hopeful. Among the old men Scott Chinn, Anthony Ross, Robert Hodge, and others are invaluable as counsellors. Presiding Elders, Williams, Gould and Davage are worthy leaders. Especially does Brother Williams stand a noble leader among his brethren.

The people of Baton Rouge entertained the Conference well, and pastor Hayward and his people were heartily thanked for their generosity. There were no fraternal greetings from any of the other pastors or people of the city.

Nearly fifty preachers went up from New Orleans to Baton Rouge and returned on the steamer Robert E. Lee. Capt. Campbell and his assistant Capt. McVeigh, and the steward of the boat, Mr. Henry Carnahan, did every thing that could be done to make the trip pleasant. And they succeeded. All our preachers were given excellent accommodations and the fare was reduced one-half. The Conference passed a resolution of thanks to Capt. Campbell. We advise the travelling public to patronize his steamer if they want elegant rooms, good fare and to be handsomely treated in every respect.

The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE was never so strongly endorsed by the Louisiana Conference as at this session. Bishop Harris, in his address to the Conference, took special pains to impress upon the minds of the brethren the fact that the SOUTHWESTERN and its interests were a part of the Church, and it was as much the duty of our ministers to sustain the paper and work for its circulation as it was to care for any other interest of the Church. The Conference directed that every one receiving an appointment should hold at least one public meeting in every congregation, when the people should be publicly urged to subscribe for the paper. At these meetings names were to be taken as fast as the money could be collected and forwarded. It was also made the duty of every Presiding Elder to ask at his first quarterly meeting whether such a meeting had been held and if it had not it was made his duty to hold such a meeting with the pastor during the Quarterly Meeting services. This action was taken with enthusiasm and was followed by nearly all the preachers coming forward and subscribing and paying for the paper in advance for 1878.

Brothers of the Louisiana Conference: we stand face to face with the responsibilities of another year's work in the Master's vineyard. Let us be determined that 1878 shall be more fully given to God than any former year of our lives. Let us hold nothing in reserve, but with full purpose of heart let us go forth to labor with all our powers for the salvation of souls.

Family Instruction.

A recent introduction to Bishop Harris led to a very interesting conversation on the subject of catechetical instruction. The Bishop said that he was the son of Presbyterian parents, who had faithfully taught him the Westminster catechism after the fashion of former days. It was then the practice to assemble all the family, old and young, together on each Sabbath afternoon, and each one had to recite the catechism and listen to explanations of its truths. This was the unvarying but not tedious exercise on the Lord's day. The result of such a course was the thorough grounding of the child in christian truths, in clear, precise and definite forms and his thorough acquaintance with the doctrines of the Gospel. The Bishop's connection with the Methodist Church grew out of his conversion at a Methodist Camp Meeting and the fact that there was no Presbyterian Church where he then lived, but his early training in the Westminister catechism had left its impress upon him in all after life. This statement of the Bishop forcibly reminded us of early scenes, to which we ourselves had been witness, and whose subsequent results for good we have fully known. The inquiry of the Bishop whether this good old Presbyterian way was still kept up, and his expression of a fear that they were not, were very suggestive. It is true that the Westminster catechism is more generally taught than formerly, but there is too much reason to believe that it is turned over to the Sunday School which, "at least," it is taught very [illegible] God's own institution. The family is God's University. Parents are to train up their own children in the knowledge of Divine Truth. Sunday School teachers may help them but should not, must not take their place. Sabbath School instruction need not be, but, to a large extent, is extremely superficial. The child carries away with him few clear and definite ideas of truth. There is very little depth and force to his religious education. How can it be otherwise when so many of the teachers themselves are young and inexperienced, and have so little depth and force in their own religious knowledge and convictions? Christian parents should not suppose that they can escape their responsibility for the instruction of their own children by sending their children to Sabbath School. What better use can they make of the Sabbath afternoon or evening than gathering their sons and daughters around them, thoroughly instruct them in the catechism of their own church and make them quite familiar with the facts and principles of God's Word. In after years their children will thank God and bless them for the precious privileges of faithful parental training. The rich fruit of such training will be to such parents a crown of glory and a joy forever! W.

The Cumberland Presbxterian states that one fifth of that Church is to be found north of the Ohio river and east of the Mississippi; two-fifths are south of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi, and two-fifths west of the Mississippi. At the quarterly meeting of all the Evangelical ministers of Philadelphia, held on Monday, Dec. 31, the following resolution was adopted by a rising vote: "That we put on record, as the sense of this body, that the old orthodox docrine of the future endless punishment of the finally impenitent, is firmly held by all Evangelical Churches of this day, within our limits."

The Universalist Register, for 1878, gives the following as the latest statistics of the denomination in the United States; 1 general convention; 35,395 members; 765 church edifices; 722 ministers; and church property worth, above all indebtedness, $6.978,110. Its income is derived entirely from voluntary contributions. Mr. Moody and Mr. Whittle have been elected "elders."

The Catholic Telegraph gives the nationality of Bishops, priests and laity of its Church as follows: In the United States, of the ten archbishops four are Irish, and of the thirty-six living bishops twenty-nine are of the same nationality, while of the 5,200 priests in the United States no less than 3,000 belong to the Irish race. The same proportion is manifested in the laity, who are officially returned at 6,500,000 (This includes the whole population, young and old,) and of these 4,000,000 have been supplied by Ireland.

A singular circumstance occurred in the office of a steel company in Bridgeport, Conn., a short time ago. The authorized agents of the Russian and Turkish governments met there, each for the purpose of contracting for bayonets to be used by the two belligerent parties among the mountains of Turkey. With a look of mutual surprise the two gentlemen spoke to each other very affably, and discussed to some extent their common business. A single test satisfied both that they could get the goods they wanted, and they ordered, the one 300,000 and the other 600,000 bayonets, with which to impale their fellow-men. The steel company was the neutral on this occasion.

The City.

Mr. Philip Phillips, one of the sweetest singers of home and sacred songs before the public, not excepting the famous Sankey, will sing in this city next month, commencing his concerts at Ames Church on the 25th proximo.

King Rex has issued his proclamation, making known that Mardi Gras, the fifth day of March, will be duly observed this year. All lines of transportation are ordered to promulgate a reduced tariff of fares, all loyal subjects are absolved from other service for the occasion and directed to report to the proper department, and all public buildings and places of business are ordered closed for the day.

The insurance companies, the firemen, the public generally, are to be congratulated on the remarkably good showing this city makes in the matter of conflagrations for the past year.

The report of Chief O'Connor shows that there were only 112 fires in New Orleans during 1876, with a total loss of $196,845, or about one fifth of 1 per cent. of the assessed valuation of the city. The total annual fire losses of the Union are from $60,000,000 to $80,000,000, or over twice as high, proportionately as the loss here. If we take into consideration the fact that city property is much more liable to loss by fire than country property, that a large majority of this loss falls consequently on the large cities, we will undoubtedly see that New Orleans is the safest city in the Union, as far as conflagrations are concerned, and that a house here runs only one-tenth the risk of being burnt as in St. Louis or Chicago.

This showing is all the more encouraging from the fact that New Orleans is essentially a wooden city, and subject to dangerously high winds and breezes. Our escape from losses by fire, such as visit all our sister cities, is due solely to the manner in which conflagrations are managed by our energetic fire department, and to the fact that our houses are surrounded with more garden and yard than the cramped dwellings of other cities enjoy.—Democrat.

Mayor Pilsbury's veto of the ordinance awarding the printing patronage of the city to the Democrat newspaper, is nothing more than what might have been expected of an official who knows and respects the injunctions of the law. He disapproves the action of the Council because the Democrat was not the lowest and best bidder—having been in fact the highest—and because it had, some days previous to the award, publicly and formally revoked its bid and withdrawn from the contest. The mayor very properly argues that the Council in giving the printing to the Democrat either disobeys the law by giving it to the highest instead of the lowest bidder, or ignores all the forms and provisions of the law, its very existence, by giving it to some one who is no bidder at all. If this precedent be admissible it will become practicable to give out all other contracts without reference to the statute, but solely with reference to the party standing or personal influence of the bidder. The street cleaning could be given to some favorite at ten times the present rates, and the smallpox hospital to another favorite with the privilege of charging $250 each, for patients. Under such a system it would not take long to reduce the city to a condition of irretrievable insolvency, and Mayor Pilsbury did well to issue his protest against it. As has already been shown, however, the Council concluded to over-ride his veto, and strange to say this was done with but a single dissenting voice—that of Mr. McCaffrey. On what principle of public duty or respect for official obligations Messrs. Brown, Denis, Rengstorff, Diamond, Edwards and Cavanac proceeded in this remarkable action, we are unable even to conjecture. The affair will take its place among those thrilling conundrums which the reform government is now engaged in presenting to an astonished, not to say bewildered people.—Times.

New Orleans University.

Prof. J. S. Bean, president New Orleans University, reports the arrival of several new students from the country, and the continued increase of city patronage. This is the time to expect a full school. There never was a time when the University offered better advantages for the genuine student. Now is the time for our pastors as they go to their new fields of labor to manifest their interest in the welfare of their charges by directing the attention of the people to their own school. There is no better school in the country for our people. There is no better school in the country for any people. Let our young people come in early and secure the best rooms.

The Louisville Courier-Journal, which is published in a State where whisky ought to be good, if anywhere, confirms the statement that probably nine hundred and ninety-nine gallons out of every thousand that are sold as brandy are made from a vile compound of whisky swill, distilled spirits, and chemical abominations, and adds: "And as it is also equally true of whisky, what in the name of goodness are we to do for something to drink? If looks as if we were to be driven to the pump in spite of us. If the world at large knew what villainous stuffs brandy and whisky and wines are made of, the present crop of drunkards would be about the last, or at any rate all future crops would be small. Nearly or quite all the liquors that are retailed are undoubtedly a slow but sure poison, and to drink them habitually is simply a roundabout way of committing suicide, and unless you guard yourself carefully the way is not so roundabout either."

Let no one descend so low as to consider money to be the chief good.

Jan. 27, 1878.—JEHOSAPHAT'S PROSPERITY.

SCRIPTURE.—2 Chron. 17:1-10.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"And they taught in Judah, and had the book of the law of the Lord with them, and went about throughout all the cities of Judah, and taught the people."—9

TOPIC.—"The Lord Established the Kingdom."—5.

(Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.)

Strengthening Himself (1, 2).—Jehosaphat was thirty-five years old when he began to reign. His first act indicates him to have been a man of energy, prudence and sagacity. He "strengthened himself against Israel."

Strengthened by the Lord (3-6).—The secret of the prosperity of Jehosaphat did not rest entirely in his own prudence, though that contributed to it. It is expressed in the words: "And the Lord was with Jehosaphat." It is necessary for the farmer to plow his land and sow the seed, and to till the soil after the seed is sown. But every farmer knows that unless the Lord supplements his labors, never a shoot will break through the ground. Just so, too, in spiritual matters. Paul may plant and Apollos water, but God giveth the increase.

Strengthening the people (17:10).—Mr. Moody says that the true way to overcome a desire for theaters, dances, and the like is to give something better in their place. Such was the sensible plan adopted by Jehosaphat with reference to the evils of his time. He could remove the idols, and by unsparing vigilance, he could keep them from being replaced, but by no such police [illegible] could he obtain more than a [illegible] victory. Removing them from the high places did not remove them from the hearts of the people. [illegible] was not eradicated [illegible], it was only a question [illegible] when they would again appear upon the high places. To obliterate them from the hearts of his [illegible] took the very wisest [illegible] could have been taken. [illegible] that they were [illegible] about God. He [illegible] of itinerant instruc[illegible] was to see [illegible] concerning [illegible] their duty to [illegible] in the very great [illegible]. It is one [illegible] for coming into a [illegible] that the eyes of [illegible] being delight[illegible]. It may be [illegible] that they [illegible] selected on [illegible] position, and [illegible] who had no [illegible] be [illegible] and who [illegible] the instructions [illegible] made more homogeneous, more devoted to their king, and more devoted to each other. It had a good effect, not only on his own people, but, also, on the nations round about. "And the fear of the Lord fell upon all the kingdoms of the lands that were round about Judah so that they made no war against Jehosaphat." The Philistines and the Arabians brought him "presents" as a tribute instead of waging war against him. "And Jehosaphat waxed great exceedingly." He built palaces and cities of stone in Judah. His army numbered more than a million of men. Under him, the kingdom of Judah alone very nearly rivalled the joint prosperity of the two kingdoms under Solomon. To the southern kingdom he was another David. He experienced to the full the saying: "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." 1 Tim. 4:8. There is one thing that is very clearly demonstrated by the unexampled good fortune that came to Judah under his rule, and that is, that the nation that wishes to be prosperous must obey and be intelligently educated in the law of the Lord. God is a greater factor in the fortunes of nations than politicians and rulers seem to suppose. Queen Victoria went not a whit beyond the truth when, in reply to the ambassador of an African sovereign, who sent to know the secret of England's greatness, she extended to him a beautifully bound copy of the Bible, and exclaimed: "Tell the prince that this is the secret of England's greatness." May that continue to be the reason of her prosperity, and, also, of ours; for "blessed is that nation whose God is the Lord."

A Working Temperance Church.

That Christian church will be the most Christian-like which does the most to "seek and to save the lost." Among all the great moral reforms, none has a stronger claim on Christian ministers than the enterprise for saving society from the crime and curse of drunkenness. And intemperance never will be checked, the liquor traffic never will be prohibited, the drinking usages of social life will never be overthrown, until members of Christ's church feel that they are also members of Christ's great temperance society. If the church does not save the world, then the world will sink the church. The bottle is the deadliest foe to Christ in our churches and our communities. A friend of Christ must be an enemy of the bottle. More souls are ruined by the intoxicating cup than by any single vice or error on the globe. Every professed Christian who gives his example to the drinking usages is a partner in the tremendous havoc which the evil customs produce. "It is good not to drink wine whereby my brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak." On this immutable rock of self-denial stands the temperance reform. There the divine founders of Christianity placed it. With Christianity it is linked; with Christianity it will stand or perish.—T. L. Cuyler.

A Sharp Rebuke.

A clergyman was annoyed by people talking and giggling. He paused looked at the disturbers and said, "I am always afraid to reprove those who misbehave, for this reason. Some years since, as I was preaching, a young man who sat before me was constantly laughing, talking and making uncouth grimaces. I paused and administered a severe rebuke, after the close of the service a gentleman said to me: "Sir, you have made a great mistake; that young man is an idiot." Since then I have always been afraid to reprove those who misbehave themselves in chapel, lest I should repeat that mistake and reprove another idiot. During the rest of the service there was good order.

The Central Christian Advocate, St. Louis, says truly: "Newspapers of the better classes are the the cheapest benefit and luxury of the age. One makes no other expenditure that produces so large a return of corresponding value. Each copy of a newspaper represents labor that has cost hundreds of dollars. Each subscriber or reader receives the full product of the editorial and composing rooms as certainly as if it were his own, and had been prepared for him alone. He does not receive an iota less, nor is his possession of less value because others share with him. And he enjoys this for the inconsiderable sum of five cents a week. Nothing else that can be purchased for the price furnishes so much and so permanent enjoyment. The bound volume does not compare with it for cheapness, nor offer so great a variety of information. It is cheaper than the cheapest school, for every member of the family that can read is served and instructed. The only greater wonder is that any family can consent to deprive itself of all these advantages.

The Methodist Recorder, of Pittsburg, says: "A few of the ministers of the conference left their mark in Fairmount. It was the black mark of Tobacco on the new and costly carpet just laid in the church. It is a shame to make such record as some of the idol-worshippers did make, and it is humiliating to even mention it to rebuke the habit. But we are more than ever persuaded that the religious rite observed among the pagan Japanese of washing the mouths of the worshippers would have been an improvement on certain types of Methodist Protestantism yonder at Fairmount.

A mean Covington, Kentucky, grocer was nicely sold at Christmas. He purchased from a dollar store a table castor, which he marked with a tag inscribed "$14," and gave it to a Methodist preacher, whose church his family attended, The reverend getleman next day brought the castor back to the grocery man and said to him: "I am too poor in this world's goods to afford to display so valuable a castor on my table, and if you have no objection I should like to return it and take $14 worth of groceries for my family in its stead." The merchant could do nothing but acquiesce.—Baltimore American-

A CHRISTIAN MAGAZINE,

Rev. D. CURRY, D.D., Editor.

Begins Jan'y, 1878. Try it one Year.

ONLY $3 A YEAR.

"The scope and character of the magazine shall be that of a first-class religious and literary monthly, of the brightest character attainable, and pervaded, whether in its general or religious articles, by a thoroughly Christian spirit."—Order of the Committee.

Under these directions, it will be devoted to General and Religious Literature, Biographies and Travels, Criticisms and Art.

A sufficient number of the best writers for the press are employed to furnish all the variety in the several departments which their scope and importance require to make them rich and instructive.

The editorial department will be a feature of the magazine. Rev. Dr. Curry, both experienced and successful as an editor, brings to his duties the purpose of giving his whole strength to the work before him.

Each number will contain one or more articles illustrated with Wood Engravings, in the best style of this art, adding beauty and value to the pages.

The twelve numbers for the year will contain 1,152 pages of reading-matter, which, published in book form, would make not less than fifteen volumes, worth $1.50 each, and will comprise a variety that will be more interesting and valuable to the general reader than can be procured in books for many times the yearly price of the magazine.

We earnestly request you to take the National Repository for 1878—to give it one year's trial, and thereby determine for yourselves whether it is worthy of a place in the Christian home.

Will the New Year Come To-Night Mamma?

Will the New Year come to-night, Mamma?
I'm tired of waiting so,
My stocking's hung by the chimney side
Full three long days ago;
I ran to peep within the door
By morning's early light;
'Tis empty still—O say, Mamma,
Will the New Year come to-night?

Will the New Year come to-night, Mamma?
The snow is on the hill,
And the ice must be two inches thick,
Upon the meadow rill.
I heard you tell Papa, last night,
His son must have a sled;
I didn't mean to hear, Mamma,
And a pair of skates, you said.

I prayed for just those things, Mamma,
Oh! I shall be full of glee,
And the orphan boys in the village school,
Will all be envying me;
I'll give them toys, and lend them books,
And make their New Year glad,
For God, you say, takes back His gifts,
When little folks are bad.

And won't you let me go, Mamma,
Upon the New Year's day,
And carry something nice and warm
To poor old widow Gray?
I'll leave the basket at the door,
Within the garden gate,
Will the New Year come to-night, Mamma?
It seems so long to wait.

* * * * * * *

The New Year comes to-night, Mamma,
I saw it in my sleep;
My stocking hung so full, I thought—
Mamma, what makes you weep?
But it only brought a little shroud—
A shroud—and nothing more—
And an open coffin, made for me,
Was standing on the floor!

It seemed so very strange, indeed,
To find such gifts, instead
Of all the toys I loved so much—
[illegible]
And while I wondered what it meant,
[illegible] with tearful joy,
[illegible] the New Year first,
[illegible] my boy!"

It is not all a dream, Mamma,
I know it must be true;
But have I been so bad a boy,
[illegible] from you?
I don't know what Papa will do,
[illegible] laid to rest,
[illegible] no Willie's head,
[illegible] upon your breast.

The New Year comes to-night, Mamma—
[illegible] cold hand on my cheek,
[illegible] a little more—
[illegible] to speak!
[illegible] my stocking now,
[illegible]
[illegible] sun is up,
[illegible] sound asleep.

[illegible] the skates, Mamma,
[illegible] the sled,
[illegible] both to Blake,
[illegible]
[illegible] books away,
[illegible] too,
[illegible] I forgive
[illegible] do.

[illegible] Mamma, I'd like
[illegible]
[illegible] drunkard's boy,
[illegible]
[illegible] won't forget,
[illegible] day,
[illegible] nice,
[illegible]

[illegible] to-night, Mamma,
[illegible]

[illegible] I'd sleep so sweet
[illegible]

[illegible] good-night, Mamma,
[illegible]
[illegible] to-night, Mamma,
[illegible] with me.

[illegible] Your Key!"

[illegible] girl stood chatting a [illegible] words with her [illegible] leaving home for a [illegible] her father kissed [illegible] "Be careful, [illegible] and then [illegible] mother, with [illegible] a fond "God bless [illegible] do; but [illegible] words, given [illegible] were, [illegible] behind, [illegible] to change cars. As the elder tenderly shook hands with her new-found friend, she said, "We may not see each other again, but I do rejoice at having met you this once; your pleasant sociability will not be forgotten in the coming years."

Soon after their departure three young boys entered, cadets, I judged by their dress. They occupied a seat together, laughing and talking as merry as three bobolinks. One of them, named Fred, and his big satchel, had a big seat to themselves. As new comers enter the car, several gentlemen (?), each occupying a seat to himself, watch a troubled, rather a forlorn-looking stranger, who, seemingly unused to traveling, presses her way onward to find a seat. They look at her, as helpless and confused, she totters along both hands loaded. Her eyes having an appealing, timid look, as they glance first from one side to the other. As she reaches Fred's seat he shows that he has a big, full heart, by jumping up, and saying with a graceful little bow, "Please take my seat madam." He vanished into another car, but his "golden key" had unlocked more hearts than one. The old lady in the quaint old style dress arranged her bundles about her, and soon the helpless look faded out of her face, and a thankful, satisfied expression took its place, the change was so quickly made that it was like a picture thrown from a stereopticon—before one is entirely gone the other grows in beauty before us. A half-hour later the little fellow returned for a glass of water, and as he passed her she looked at him fondly and the aged lips parted. Did they say, "God bless you, child?" I think they did, but I was not near enough to hear.

And why not be kind and helpful in a railroad car? Does any one who says, "Don't study human nature in a railraad car," suppose that the "recording angel" stands, even for one moment, with pen suspended, because forsooth we are traveling, and consequently expected to only think of number one?

Did you ever pause and contemplate that particular and peculiar phrase of human nature developed by the anxious school boy when released from study and discipline—when "school is out," and he is on his way home? Ordinary humanity, when released from the toils of the day, is prone to seek rest and relaxation. The boy scorns all such effeminate ideas. He is composed of but three parts—legs, arms and yell, and the yell is the biggest part of him. His legs have been kept in irksome, compulsory quietude all day, and must now be exercised. His voice has been seething and swelling in him for hours, and now must have vent. As soon as he is clear of the school-house steps he stops and deliberately yells a yell that is ear-splitting, but which has no more object, meaning or direction than the mid-night vociferation of a mule; and yet it appears at a full run, with his arms flying about like the scintillations of a pin-wheel. He is no respector of persons, and is utterly indifferent as to whether he runs down a smaller boy, spins an aged citizen three times around, or mashes a girl's hat over her eyes in his headlong career. "Mercy on us; If that boy were only mine, I'd—" but just then her own boy flies past, falls over a dry-goods box, bounces up, kicks at another boy, and is chased across the street and around the corner before she can get the "You Robert" with which she intends to annihilate him, out of her astonished throat. There is but one thing that has the slightest soothing effect on the boy when he is on the way home from school. He can see the "old man" farther than Prof. Hall can see a haystack with a telescope, and the moment that parent dawns upon his vision he becomes as proper as a model letter-writer, and the neatly modulated voice with which he wheedles the author of his being out of five cents on the spot is a lesson for future ambitious savings bank and passenger railway presidents. U. S. Marshal's office, Harrisonburg, Va.

Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease, itching piles, had consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. I deem it my duty to give you this well merited testimonial of so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit. Very respectfully, Wm. P. Grove.

J. Q. A. Metcalf, (firm of Hanley & Metcalf,) Palmyra, Mo., writes:

A Remarkable Cure.

HOME TESTIMONY.

Dr. Swayne—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs; in short, it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me, at the factory. Edward H. Hamson, Engineer of Geo. Sweeney's Pottery, Ridge road, below Wallace, Phila.

Over twenty years have elapsed, and Mr. Hamson still remains a hearty man to this day—September 20, 1876.

Retrospection.

He was better to me than all my hopes,
  He was better than all my fears;
He made a road of my broken works,
  And a rainbow of my tears.
The billows that guarded my sea-girt path,
  But carried my Lord on their crest;
When I dwell on the days of my wilderness march,
  I can lean on his love for the rest.

He emptied my hands of my treasured store,
  And his covenant love revealed;
There was not a wound in my aching heart
  But the balm of his breath had healed.
Oh! tender and true was the chast'ning sore,
  In wisdom that taught and tried;
Till the soul that He sought was trusting in Him,
  And nothing on earth beside.

He guided by paths that I could not see,
  By ways that I have not known,
The crooked was straight, and the rough made plain,
  As I followed the Lord alone.
I praise Him still for the pleasant palms,
  And the water-springs by the way;
For the glowing pillars of flame by night,
  And the sheltering clouds by day.

There is light for me on the trackless wild,
  As the wonders of old I trace:
When the God of the whole earth went before,
  To search me a resting place.
Has He changed for me? Nay! He changes not;
  He will bring me by some new way,
Through fire and flood and each crafty foe,
  As safely as yesterday.

And if to the warfare He calls me forth,
  He buckles my armor on;
He greets me with smiles and a word of cheer,
  For battles his sword hath won;
He [illegible] my brow as I droop and faint,
  [illegible] my hand to toil;
[illegible] as He washes my feet
  From the trace of each earthly soil.

  [illegible] than all my fears.

[illegible] Wisdom of Rightly Preparing for Death.

[illegible] OF A SERMON BY REV. [illegible] IVES BUDDINGTON, D. D., BROOKLYN.

[illegible] us to number our days, that [illegible] apply our hearts unto wisdom.—Psa. xc: 12.

[illegible] days is to form [illegible] as to the duration [illegible] life—neither to underestimate [illegible] to overestimate. Wis[illegible] endowment of mind [illegible] us to anticipate [illegible] life. The wise man is [illegible] the events which [illegible] It is not given to [illegible] all things that are [illegible] but some of the chief [illegible]. This nine[illegible] was written by Moses. [illegible] was that God [illegible] to intimate the [illegible] life that we [illegible] for its termina[illegible] time of writing this [illegible] was an old man. He [illegible] one after [illegible] his broth[illegible] the leaders and [illegible] of the peo[illegible] since [illegible] but two, on[illegible] and Joshua, of [illegible] of Moses, [illegible] of the cer[illegible] would have [illegible] properly num[illegible] alone can teach [illegible]

[illegible] of Moses to [illegible] of this con[illegible] of it [illegible] is the [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] ves[sel who rushed below and knocked in the casks of wine and waited, amid the revels of wildest dissipation, for the approach of death. All know how crime and excess abounded when the plague reigned in Athens. So in the prisons at Paris, during the Reign of Terror, filled at night to be emptied in the morning by the guillotine, riot held sway. To them, death just at hand was an eternal sleep. A great emergency brings out what is deepest in man. The approach of death brings uppermost, without any cover of hypocrisy, the strongest, the controlling motives of our natures.

Let us consider how you can so number your days as to be wisely prepared for the ending of them.

1. By considering the uncertainty of life. No one can tell when death will come. It cannot be safely guarded against. This uncertainty should impress upon you the importance of preparing now to meet it.

2. By considering the shortness of life. The human language was exhausted by the ancients to express life's brevity. Life is spoken of as the mountain flood that comes suddenly and is gone; as the grass in desert lands that springs up after the shower and then quickly withers; as the tale that is told to while away the hours of the travelers crossing the wilderness, and then forgotten when the journey is past; a declining shadow; a swift post, now coming, here, gone; water spilt on the ground; a weaver's shuttle, etc.

Oh, my beloved brethren, believe these words which have come down to us from thousands of years ago, gathering additional testimony all the way! Oh, learn this lesson of wisdom! Dr. Franklin said the longer he lived, the more rapidly time seemed to pass away, until like the filing of ranks of soldiers before him the years from the sixtieth to seventieth, from seventieth to eightieth of his life passed. Ask God that you may consider His eternity. Some one has said that the light which sped from this earth when it was chaos and the light which has sped from it since, in its different stages, is speeding on in the universe for evermore, carrying with it the picture of each event of development that has transpired on earth. Think of an Omnipotent eye that can grasp all this endless stream of speeding light, carrying these separate pictures; that eye will have the whole history of the world forever before it. God has the Omnipotence of vision. Endeavor to grasp this, as it will help you to grasp the omnipotence of His duration. This eternity that He is to live you are to live; you have been created immortal.

Above all, ask God to teach you to number your days, that you will believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. Put your hand in Christ's hand. There is life in the touch. We are affected by coming into contact with others. Let but faith bring your hand to touch Christ's and an immortal life will course through your veins. The touch of an affectionate faith can bring the dead to life. In the first instance it is an act, it may be but a feeble act; but act after act will bring your soul into a constant, living contact with Christ.

Do you now hesitate? Then have you come to the forking of the roads of your eternal destiny. Put forth this act of faith while I am now speaking to you. Put forth act after act until it becomes a habit, and your union with Christ will be perfect. What can be more important than this act of trust? I urge you to it to-night. I beseech you in the name of Christ. I beseech you in view of eternity. I urge you to follow Him who made duty the law of His life, who marched to death to rescue you from death, and who has triumphed over death and is seated at the right hand of the power of God making daily intercession for you.

Then Jesus is ready to lift you up to-night to Himself. Will you not stretch out a hand and grasp His outstretched hand, and feel the pulse of eternal life throbbing in your heart?

[illegible] this be your experience! [illegible] Pulpit.

[illegible] now at the end of [illegible] days are [illegible]

African Explorations.

We take from Harper's Weekly, of the 19th inst., the following report of Mr. Stanley's lecture at Cape Town, shortly after his arrival from his explorations:

Mr. Stanley began his address by speaking of the white natives whom he had found dwelling in the elevated regions between lakes Victoria and Albert, around the summit of Mount Gambaragura, and who evidently belonged to a distinct race from those who inhabit the plains and lake shores. He had also discovered a people who constructed large under-ground dwellings, in each of which as many as 300 persons were found living. In the effort to solve the problem of the outlet of Lake Tanganyika he met many chiefs, who declared that the white men had caused the country to be submerged with water, and who resolutely refused to permit him to proceed on his journey to Nyangwe. At the latter place the natives had succeeded in persuading Dr. Livingston to desist from his attempted journey down the Lualaba, and prevented Cameron from traveling northward along the route that Stanley had determined to follow. They pictured the inhabitants of the unexplored region as the largest and smallest men in the world. Gorillas, they said, filled the mighty woods day and night with the thunders of their terrible cries. According to the statements of the natives, "the Congo dashed itself against mountains until no larger than a brook; the dense and interminable forests were filled with a profound and eternal gloom, through which the sun was never visible; horrible snakes of enormous size hung from the trees, and were invisible in the the darkness; ants and other insects bit the traveller's flesh with a fiery venom like scalding hot water; leopards and other beasts of prey swarmed in the forests, and made the darkness hideous by their dismal howlings and indescribable screams; droves of wild elephants crashed through the forest; genii haunted the darkness; dwarfs, thirty inches in height, that showered flights of poisoned arrows like quills at all intruders, and that the natives ate at one bite, were thick as ants; they would kill everybody."

After a considerable delay, however, Stanley succeeded in hiring an Arab chief, with a force of 160 men, to assist him in cutting his way through the cannibal lands. Once under way, the journey was attended with little beyond the usual difficulties of African travel, and after a time the party found themselves in the presence of the anthropophagi, who confronted them in strong force. "Here," says the lecturer, "they began by asking who gave us permission to go there. We said we did not know we wanted anybody's permission. They said, 'Yes, it must be had on their river.' We said to them, 'You keep on your own side of the river. You do not claim more than half of it we suppose. We will cling so closely to the opposite of the river and the other bank that if you attack us you must attack the people ple on the other side of the river.' We started. They asked, 'Where are you going?' 'Down the river to our own country.' 'We never heard of anything being there.—Where do you come from?' 'From the other sea.' 'From the other sea? There is none. Do you come from up there?'—pointing to the clouds. 'No.' 'How is it we never saw or heard of anybody like you before?' 'I suppose it was owing to your own ignorance.' 'Well, you must turn back. We can't allow you to go on.' 'I am very sorry, but I must go on. If you will allow us we are quite willing to pay you for leave to pass. Look!' and we showed them some fine gaudy clothes, and cowries, and beads, and polished brass wire. No, they would not have any at all. 'Go back,' they said. But the river was not going back, and all the time we were talking we went along with the current, and while other natives were coming down, until we got into another country. The people of that place came out in their canoes. This was on the frontier of the cannibal lands. They maintained similar conversation with us. They said, 'You pass us to day without fighting, but wait till to-morrow. That king does not allow anybody to go down, and if he refuses, there is nobody who can stand before him.' 'Well,' we said, 'if we must be killed, why, we shall be killed; but we shall go on.' Next day we went on as before. The king came out to meet us with fourteen canoes. They looked ridiculously small to come against our canoes. We passed two of them. We fired and cut the water all around the canoe, and he did not see the balls pass through the water. This frightened him, and he retired without our having to fire a shot at him."

Arrived at the equator, Stanley began to feel that he was at last in the presence of serious difficulties. Here it is that the true strength of the cannibals lies. "First," says the speaker, "we had six cataracts to contend with. Next we tried the left bank, but to go on was simply impossible. Down below us were the cataracts. We could not row back, on account of the stream being so swift, and, besides that, we should have had to fight again with these people. There was only one way—to show our manliness and die. So I sent four canoes on up the river, and they landed half their crews. Half had orders to go behind into the forest, and while we attacked the enemy in the front, they opened in the rear. This was done only just in time, for the cataracts were roaring close by us. Having gained a footing, we got down toward them, and made a palisade or camp. In the night we threw out scouts, and cut a road, and laid down sticks and rollers. Then we built a camp at the extreme end of this track, and at early dawn we drew our canoes over these sticks or rollers to the next stage. We had a second camp, where we rested. Next night we went on the same way, and so on. We cut a road by night, and at sun. rise we began to draw the canoes into the second camp. That we did for twenty-six days, night and day relieving each other, my companion looking after the parties by night, and I taking charge of the relief by day. In these twenty-six days we had gone thirteen geographical miles and passed six cataracts. Then the river began to turn northwest, and goes on so to two degrees latitude north. Then it turns with a mighty sweep toward the west, and goes on in a course forming a zigzag line. Then at longitude twenty-three degrees it turns down to the southwest; the river by this time was from two to ten miles wide. When we had reached longitude sixteen degrees the lower series of cataracts began, sixty-two in number. We had already had thirty-two fights before we reached these cataracts, and were five months going from cataract to cataract, sometimes hauling our canoes up mountain steeps 2000 feet high, assisted, of course, by friendly natives."

It was not until after having completed a journey of 6900 miles, in the course of which he lost three white men and 250 natives, that Stanley finally arrived at the point where Captain Luckey abandoned the exploration of the Congo River from the west coast in 1816. From this point it was the intention of the explorer to push across to Boma. They were but three days out, however, when despair settled down upon them; starvation was staring them in the face, and the situation was desperate. Three of the strongest of the party were then sent forward, and the rest went on as best they could until within thirty miles of Boma. Stanley had concluded that many of his people could not hold out much longer, when suddenly the cry was raised, "Oh, master, here are lots of men coming, lots of clothes and lots of food." And indeed it was so. The men had reached Boma, and without delay a relief party was sent with fish and rice and everything that was required. His men furiously rushed at the fish, and did not want to cook it. There was for him a small parcel of dainties, and beer, wine, and Champagne. The pots were placed on the fire, the rice was cooked, and the lives of the people were saved. Mr. Stanley described how the rags of his men—venerable relics of that great march through Africa—were replaced with clothes, how a joyous party came out to receive him from Momba, how splendidly he was received by the Portuguese, how he reached St. Paul de Loanda, and from there went on by the Industry to the Cape.

Mrs. Thompson, a wealthy lady of New York, has purchased Carpenter's picture of Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation, and will present it to Congress. It is understood that Mr. Garfield will make the presentation on Lincoln's birthday, the 12th of February, and Alex H. Stephens will make the speech of acceptance.

Speech Bottled Up.

When the veracious Munchausen described the trumpeter's music as freezing on an excessively cold day, and thawing out during mild weather, in audible sounds, the tale found a fixed place in literature because of its apparent utter absurdity. Yet if the newly invented phonograph does what is expected of it, music and speech itself may be boxed up and set aside for indefinite periods, and when needed be again produced in sounds similar to the original ones. The telephone has shown us how sound can be transmitted; the phonogaaph is to show us how sound may be preserved. The former has pointed the way for the invention of the latter, and as a mere matter of probability, judged from its mechanism, the phonograph would seem more likely to do its work than the telephone did when the idea of transmitting sound was first broached. In the telephone sound-waves must be translated into electrical pulsations, and these translated back into sound-waves; and nothing short of the actual experiments would have proved that electricity could perform this office. In the phonograph the whole procedure is simply mechanical; electricity is not employed.

An invention that promises to speak for itself; to give to our ears sounds when weeks, months or years may have elapsed since their utterance; that may even restore to us the voice of the dead, is of sufficient importance to justify a brief explanation of its character. The sound that is received in the phonograph vibrates a small disk which carries a steel point at its center. The vibrating movements of this point, are impressed upon a sheet of tin foil by an ingenious contrivance. A cylinder is provided, whose axle is a screw; hence when the cylinder revolves it also moves in the direction of its length. The cylinder is grooved spirally; its grooves correspond to the screw threads of its axle. Around this grooved cylinder, tin foil is wrapped. The cylinder is then revolved while the steel point of the disk touches the foil-covered surface, and the vibrations of the disk are impressed upon the foil. Here, then, we have a record of the speech or song which has caused the disk to vibrate. To reproduce this sound, it is only necessary to reproduce those vibrations. This may be done by again turning the cylinder, so that the foil may press against the point of the disk. Whatever has been impressed on the foil will thus occasion in the disk corresponding vibrations. The sounds thus reproduced are said to be distinctly recognizable, both as to tone and words. Of course the cylinder must revolve at the same rate when giving as when receiving speech or music; if that point is kept in view the peculiarities of voice which constitute its quality may also be reproduced.

As this whole contrivance is purely mechanical means will doubtless be found for intensifying the sounds, but already they are said to be recognizable to an audience of ten or twelve persons. Perhaps it may also be made capable of recording and preserving any sounds uttered within hearing distance. A testator, sound in wind, may read his last will and testament at such a machine, and then have it carefully boxed up and put aside. Then when the expectant heirs are gathered around, the cylinder can be started, and from it in the very accents of the deceased, will come the solemn words, "In the name of God, amen!" A relay of successive cylinders might be provided for an opera or a debate in Congress, and the whole sound may be reproduced by means of telephones at localities miles away, or perhaps be stored up for reference and use hereafter. The telephone can only be used where there is communication by wire; the phonograph can be sent by messenger, and would insure a secrecy that the telephone or a written message cannot provide, since if the cylinder be turned at a wrong rate, nothing but nonsense can be uttered. It the tones of deliverey can be sufficiently increased Congressmen may save themselves much trouble. They may deliver their speeches to the machine, and lay it aside till the opportunity comes for delivery; when the auspicious moment arrives, the machine can set up in front of the speaker, and being started, will address the House without risk of interruption or calls to order. With relays of machines, a member who had the floor could thus talk against time, if needful, indefinitely, while personally he was enjoying a cigar in the corridor or drinking iced tea in the restaurant.—New York Tribune.

How to Cure Gossip.

Adopt this rule: Let all who come to you with stories about mutual acquaintances know that you intend, as soon as your duties allow, to wait upon the parties spoken of disparagingly and repeat just what was said, and who said it. Still better, take out your memorandum-book and ask the party to allow you to copy the words, so that you can make no mistake.

You will have to do this probably not more than three times. It will fly among your acquaintances on the wings of the gossips, and persons who come to talk against other persons in your presence will begin to feel as if they were testifying under oath.

But, you ask, "Will it not be mean to go off and detail conversations?" Not at all when the interlocutor understands that he must not talk against an absent person in your presence without expecting you to convey the words to the absent person, and the name of the speaker. Moreover, what right has any man or woman to approach you and bind you to secrecy, and then poison your mind against another? If there be any difference in your obligations, are you not bound more to the man who is absent than the man who is present? If you can thus help to kill gossip it will not matter if you lose a friend or two; such friends as these, who talk against others to you, are the very persons to talk against you to them.

Try our rule. We know it to be good. We use it. It is known in the church of which we are pastor, so that if any one speaks to us disparagingly of an absent member, we hold it our duty to go to that absent member immediately and report the conversation and the names; or, still better, to make the party disparaging face the party disparaged. We have almost none of this to do. Amid the many annoyances which necessarily come to the pastor of a large church, and still larger congregation, we think that we are as free from the annoyance of gossips as it is possible for a man to be who lives among his fellow-men.

Try our rule, try it faithfully, with meekness and charity, and if it does not work well let us know. —REV. DR. DEEMS, in Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for February.

Infidels do not Pray.

In the year 1827 a young man, then studying for the ministry, was requested to preach in a town in this State. The meeting was held in the evening, in a private house. Knowing that two or three deists were present, some remarks were made upon the authenticity of God's word. The president of an infidel club arose and interrupted the speaker, who mildly said to him, "Sit down, and after meeting I will talk with you." When the services closed there was hardly time for conversation, and an appointment was made that the parties should meet at the house of a friend on the following morning. At the appointed hour the president with several infidel books under his arms, and a large handkerchief full of pamplets and papers, made his appearance, in company with two members of his club. No sooner were the parties seated, and a large table covered with his religious dissecting knife, then the infidel began, with much warmth, to pour forth his contempt for the Bible.

Stop, sir, stop," said the student; "let us commence right, and then we shall end well. Do you believe there is a God, who made all things? a God, who has a mind?"

"I do."

"Do you believe he created you, feeds, clothes, and watches over you and yours, without any reward?"

"Certainly I do."

"Well, sir, that we commence right, please lead in prayer. Ask the God in whom you believe to direct us as to the rejection of that Bible, if it is false, and if it is true to receive it. We do not want to be deceived?"

The man hesitated, and said: "I never pray; I do not believe in prayer."

"Never pray, sir! do you not believe in prayer when God has done so much for you? never thank him for his goodness? Have you a father?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you never thank him? If you had a child whom you had always blest, would he not thank you when you bestowed upon him some little trinket?"

"I suppose he would."

"Well, sir, compare right. Just pray; pray and thank God."

"I can't pray."

The student then turned to his infidel companions and asked them to pray, and they both declined. With indescribable feelings he knelt, and with great freedom poured out his whole heart to God. As he finished they all arose from their seats. The president passed his fingers through his hair, and as he gathered up his books, said:

"I think we will talk no more. It will do no good."

The student waited on them to the door, and in a short time heard that the club had disbanded.—Louisville (Ky) Journal.

Hymns.

How much we owe to hymns! How often in many a Christian's experience has some well known hymn, read or remembered, brought cheer and comfort to the perplexed and doubting heart, or given a nobler impulse to thought and feeling. Who does not observe the deeper emphasis with which a clergyman reads his favorite hymns when they form part of the public worship. And if we glance at the former occupants of the pews about us we may often seen the satisfied look, half smiling, half solemn, with which some aged saint listens to dear familiar strains she has known and loved for so many years.

We all have (or ought to have) our favorite hymns; but if we are to get the full benefit of these we should store them in our memories. When books are not at hand, or when light does not avail for reading, through hours of weary watching or sleepless unrest, then may we draw from this treasure-house the hymns which shall beguile our sad thoughts or brighten our suffering moments. For hymns have this power as many a one who reads these lines can testify. One thing very noticeable about hymns, as our own observation goes to prove, is the unanimity which believers show in their selections of favorites. The hymns in our various orthodox collections would number many hundreds if brought together, yet the proportion of those which would be chosen as precious, well-known favorites by the members of every Church, might easily be counted by tens instead of hundreds. And what an interesting collection that would be, stamped thus with the approval and preference of so many of God's people!

Let us, then, make place in our memories for hymns which shall cheer and elevate and strengthen us in hours of need, or lend a warmer glow to faith and love. Not only this, but let us teach our children to find in hymns a golden treasure.—Intelligencer.

The Office of Sorrow.

There is something about deep sorrow that tends to wake up the child-feeling in all of us. A man of giant intellect becomes like a child when a great grief smites him, or when a grave opens at his fireside. I have seen a stout sailor—who laughed at the tempest—come home when he was sick, and let his old mother nurse him as if he were a baby. He was willing to lean on the arms that never failed him. So a Christian in the time of trouble is brought to this child-feeling. He wants to lean somewhere, to talk to somebody, to have somebody love him and hold him up.

One great purpose in all affliction is to bring us down to everlasting arms. What new strength and peace it gives us to feel them underneath us! We know that far as we may have sunk, we cannot go any farther. Faith is just clinging to those arms, and nothing more.—Rev. Dr. Cuyler.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The colored people of Florida have given considerable attention to the subject of improving their condition by emigrating from the country. An organization of 5,000 has been effected, and the Rev. Mr. Sturks has been sent by them to investigate the advantages of Hayti and San Domingo. He has obtained a great deal of information, but has been undecided as to what was best for the colored men to do. He had an interview with the President to-day, and laid the situation before him. The President embodied his views in a brief letter to Mr. Sturks, of which the following is a copy:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Jan. 14, 1878.

The Rev. Mr. Sturks.

Dear Sir: I have given some consideration to your question as to the emigration of colored people from Florida to San Domingo. I am not well informed as to the advantages offered by San Domingo to immigrants, but my impression is that your people should not be hasty in deciding to leave this country. The mere difference in climate is a very serious objection to removal. The first generation in all such removals suffer greatly. It is my opinion, also, that the evils which now affect you are likely steadily, and, I hope, rapidly, to diminish. My advice is therefore against the proposed emigration. Very truly yours.

Consecration of the Money Power.

We have frequently said a good deal about missions. We have had our annual Board Meeting, and made great appropriations for 1878. We have urged, and still propose to urge, every possible advance where there seems to be any reasonable ground for success. Our two Missionary Secretaries are active at the conferences and in the individual churches, and we are constantly chronicling great advances. We need to give largely, and use every effort to make this year one of noble benefactions; else, at the next annual meeting, where appropriations will need to be made again, there will have to be withdrawal rather than aggression. This must not be. It is the giving of the Church which decides the number of men we shall send abroad and the points we shall occupy. This is not done by the authorities, but by the private members of the Church; and from a pretty careful examination of our missionary history during the last half century, we are convinced that the Church has always responded to the demands made upon her. And what she has done in the past she will do in the future.

Our country is at peace, though our finances are not in a normal condition. But there must be consecration of our means, the sacrifice of the great money power of the country to the work of spreading and deepening Christianity in the heart of the race. God is chastising the whole nation for its penuriousness. Men must learn that God rules in the financial world as He does everywhere.

It is not often that we are able to endorse the doctrinal views of Dr. Bushnell, but we frequently meet with some stirring utterances of his that partake less of his theological peculiarities than of his broad sympathy with human wants and the power of the gospel to meet every demand of the soul. We commend the following earnest plea for the placing of the money power of the country at the service of the cause of Christ, taken from his latest volume of sermons, to the attention of all who have it in their capacity to profit by the advice: "The Christianizing of the money power of the world depends for its principal hope on the trading class in society. Talent has been Christianized already on a large scale. The political power of states and kingdoms has been long assumed to be, and now at last really is, as far as it becomes their accepted office, to maintain personal security and liberty. Architecture, arts, constitutions, schools and learning, have been largely Christianized. But the money power, which is one of the most operative and grandest of all, is only beginning to be, though with promising tokens of a finally complete reduction to Christ and his kingdom. In our late civil war the money power, for the first time, so far as appears, since the world began, laid itself fairly on the altar, and gave itself in heartily pledged devotion, to the public welfare. It even took up, we may say, the nation's heavy and huge bulk and bore it through on its Atlas-like shoulders. Everything we have for public good was the maxim even of money, and there was never before a fiscal campaign to match the sublimity and true majesty of the spectacle. It was the money power standing sponsor for the nation in its terrible baptism of blood.

"Now, what we wait for, and are looking hopefully to see, is a like consecration of the vast money power of the world to the work and cause and kingdom of Jesus Christ. For that day, when it comes, is the morning, so to speak, of the new creation. The tidal wave in the money power can as little be resisted when God brings it on as the tides of the sea; and like these, also, it will flow across the world in a day. And for such a result we are to look chiefly to the merchant class of disciples. Trade expanding into commerce, and commerce rising into communism, are to be the outlines of the story. When the merchant seeking goodly pearls—all the merchant men—find the precious one they seek, and sell their all to buy it, they will make it theirs."

A man must not only desire to be right—he must be right. You may [illegible] "I wish to send this ball so [illegible] kill the lion crouching yonder, ready to spring upon me. My [illegible] are all right, and I hope [illegible] will direct the ball." [illegible] will not. You must do [illegible] if you do not, you are a dead [illegible]

Bishop Harris in New Orleans.

Bishop Harris returned to New Orleans from holding the Louisiana Conference at Baton Rouge on the 14th inst. On the evening of the day he arrived he met our German congregations in a union meeting held in the first German Church, corner of Franklin and Josephine. The house was filled, and the Bishop gave an interesting account of our church work in Germany and Switzerland. He made special mention of the conversion and labors of Dr. Nast, the father of German Methodism in America, and of Dr. Jacoby who was converted under the labors of Dr. Nast, and became the founder and organizer of our mission work in Germany and Switzerland. After the address Rev. J. J. Kienle was ordained Elder, having been elected to that order at the conference at Baton Rouge. The Bishop was very much pleased with the substantial evidences of the growing strength of our German work in New Orleans. In the ordination services he spoke in the German language in the more important parts, greatly to the delight and edification of the audience.

On Tuesday evening, the 15th inst., Bishop Harris gave an address on his Episcopal tour around the world in Ames Church. The large auditorium was well filled, an audience of fully six hundred being present. A large number of prominent gentlemen and ladies of this city were among the auditors. Among the prominent persons visiting the city and who were present was Judge Gilfillan, Chief Justice of Minnesota. The Bishop gave a hasty sketch of his travels, starting from New York City and going westward to San Francisco, thence going to Yokohama in Japan, thence to Shaghai in China and on westward stopping in various countries visiting missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and presiding over their annual meetings and conferences, he finally arrived at New York from Liverpool, landing within two hundred feet of the spot from whence he started. The Bishop dwelt at length on our missions in Japan and China. At a former time we published an extended abstract of the Bishop's address on our foreign missions. We heard but one sentiment expressed concerning the address. All were instructed and felt when he had finished that the Gospel of Jesus Christ was indeed saving men in all nations, and the elevating power of Christianity must now be recognized by all peoples.

After the lecture the audience was invited to partake of refreshments which the ladies and friends of the church under the leadership principally of Mrs Hartzell and Mrs. C. P. Shute had generously provided. Fully half the audience tarried, and it is very creditable to the ladies in charge to say that all who tarried secured a good supply from the well ladened tables. For two or three hours the time was given to social intercourse, many of the friends and members of other churches uniting, and enjoying the pleasure of forming the acquaintance of the Bishop. The fact that the pastor of Ames Church, Dr. McCarty, had been reappointed for a second year and was present with his estimable wife added to the pleasure of the occasion. Under the leadership of Dr. C. B. White, the evening was enlivened with some most excellent music.

Bishop Harris left for the Mississippi Conference on Wednesday evening, January 15th.

Systematizing Mental Labor.

As a marvelous instance of what one may achieve by doing systematically and thoroughly whatever he undertakes, we cannot do better than consider the life of Alexander von Humboldt. There was no part of the world he had not visited, and he had been nowhere without acquiring the most exact knowledge of the whole country, its geology, its animal life, its botany, its physical characteristics, as well as the language, habits, customs, laws, religion, and history of its people. He led this life till he was ninety years of age, and even then no fact, in any part of the world, that had any bearing on scientific truth, escaped his notice. His mind was a museum, where all the knowledge that he had brought into the world, was placed in order, carefully guarded, and always ready for use. We are not wrong in attributing the learning and prodigious memory of this great man to his habit of systematizing his mental labor, and to his power of self concentration; and to his belief in the wisdom of God.

A Well Watered Garden.

The prophet Jeremiah is mostly the prophet of evil to Israel because of their national apostasy. His lamentations over their dreadful spiritual condition and his terrible denunciations of the judgments of God against them constitute the far greater part of his writings. But amid all, this occasionally there flashes a bright and beautiful light out of the dense darkness. A sweet flower springs up and blooms in the dreary waste. Precious promises in the place of awful threatenings, cheering prospects instead of dark forbodings loom up to gladden and encourage. The thirty-first chapter of the book of Jeremiah is a gem of this kind, sweetest music sounding from discordant tones, the gentle calm after the roar of the tempest. "They shall come and sing on the height of Zion . . . . and their soul shall be as a well watered garden." The prophet looks forward to the time when the Lord will visit his people again. Then their mourning should be turned into joy; the dried and withered condition of the nation would be turned into the green, rich and beautiful state of prosperity; the Lord's goodness will come upon them as refreshing showers upon parched and thirsty land. The soul as a well watered garden! How suggestive the figure! How different is a garden when the plants and flowers droop their heads and are withering away from the same garden after the showers have fallen upon it! The flowers lift their drooping heads and smile with beauty and fragrance! The plants look up with gladness. A delightful freshness spreads around; man, animal, and bird should rejoice together in the change. With freshness comes beauty, in stem and leaf and flower and beauty of form and color. The eye is charmed, the taste refined, and pleasure fills the soul.

The well watered garden is a fruitful garden. It is not freshness and beauty only, nor flower and blossom that are wanted, but fruit even more. The gardner looks for it and is disappointed without it.

O professing Christian what is the condition of thy soul? Is it "a well watered garden?" or is it dry as the summer's dust?" Like a well watered garden is thy soul, full of freshness, beauty and fruitfulness? If not, pray for refreshing showers of grace. Pray for the outpouring of the Spirit. When a revival of religion takes place the Church is a well watered garden! The beauty and fragrance of its piety shine forth anew. Even the world rejoices in the sight though it partakes not of its spirit.

Robbing God.

On last Sabbath evening Rev. Dr. McCarty delivered a discourse at Ames M. E. Church in which he brought out with much force the doctrine of giving. His text was "Man shall not live by bread alone but by evey word which proceedeth out of the mouth of God." The speaker dwelt with much earnestness upon the financial demoralization of the times. The thought that men have been insanely rushing after money until God and conscience have been lost sight of has a terrible illustration in the fact that men who stood high in popular favor a few years ago are now wearing the stripped garments of the prison convict. Financial unsoundness exists so universally that the question is raised who or what is safe? The cause of Christ in the meantime goes begging—churches are burdened with debt all over the country, until christianity itself is almost threatened with extinction. Have rich men done their whole duty in this matter? He quoted the text "Will a man rob God? And answered it by affirming that not giving as we should is robbery. God owns all of our time but claims our seventh for his own worship. He owns the cattle on a thousand hills but claims a tenth back. "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed men." In what way—"In tithes and offerings?"

If the nation will not learn by the severe scourging through which it has passed then severer judgments will come upon it. Let every one pause and consider.

When we tell sinners that there is nothing to do on their part but to believe Jesus, they say, "That is too easy a way of being saved!" But to whom was it easy? Not to the Father, for he had to part with His well.beloved Son. Not to the Savior, for he had to drink the bitter cup of suffering to its dregs. It is made an easy way to the sinner; but not to his sins, for it comes to destroy them.—Robert Boyd.

The First Baptist Church of Baltimore, the "Old Mother Church," now in its 91st year, has completed a beautiful and commodious new house of worship, 78 by 98 feet, costing $65,000. It was dedicated free of debt on Sabbath, January 6, the 27th anniversary of Rev. Dr. William's pastorate.

Rev. Dr. William Newton, of Philadelphia, who has long been a leading "low Church" man, has withdrawn from the Episcopal ministry, and with about three-score of his former parishoners, has organized a Reformed Episcopal Church.

Canon Reardon, to whom Queen Victoria has just sent a congratulatory message on the completion of his one hundreth year, was ordained in 1801, and has held his present living at North Stoneham, Southampton, since 1811. The living is worth about $4,000.

At the Emory M. E. Church in Baltimore (Rev. L. Hartsock, pastor), a wonderful revival is in progress under the labors of Thomas Harrison, the young revivalist. Over 300 have professed faith in Christ since the commencement of the meetings two months since, and the work still goes on with unabated interest. The meetings are crowded, and hundreds fail to gain admission to the church.

There is considerable complaint of a religious intolerance in Greece. A year or so ago the Government attempted to prevent the sale of Bibles, but could not prevent the sale of American Bibles, in consequence of a clause in the treaty with the United States, guaranteeing the free sale of articles manufactured in either country in the other. The authorities have closed a boys' school, opened by the missionaries of the Southern Presbyterian Church, because of their refusal to teach the Greek Catechism. More recently they have broken up the girls' school at Athens, which was supported by the Woman's Missionary Union, of New York, by insisting that a picture of the Virgin Mary should be hung in the schoolroom, and that a Greek priest should be permitted to teach the Greek religion.

Whittaker's London Almanac, presents the following estimate of the nnmbers adhering to the several forms of religious faith held by the English speaking peoples all over the world: Episcopalians, 17,500,000; Methodists, 13,500,000; Roman Catholics, 13,250,000; Presbyterians, 10,000,000; Baptists, 8,000,000; Congregationalists, 7,000,000; Unitarians, 1,000,000; minor religious sects, 3,000,000; unclassified, 7,000,000. This makes a total of 80,250,000. According to the same authority, there are registered in England and Wales 150 (in round numbers) religious sects, and 19,486, places of meeting for religions worship. The State Church has 2 archbishops, 28 bishops, 30 deans and 23,000 clergymen of every class. The number of benefices is 13,000; the annual revenue of the Church is estimated at £8,000,000. The State Church population of England is put at 12,500,000.

A Charleston (S. C.) paper speaks of a sale of farm lands in that vicinity, only two miles from the Northeast railroad and Webdin River, and of excellent soil. Six hundred and twenty acres were sold for $205, eight hundred acres for $220, one hundred acres for $38, all half cash and the rest in one year.

Neal Dow contributes this temperance information from Portland, Maine. We have not an open rum-shop—none except a few low dens, where liquor is sold with the utmost secrecy and caution, and on a very small scale. We have now twenty-four rum-sellers in jail, some for over a year. Maine saves by the law at least $20,000,000 a year, which otherwise would be spent and lost by the liquar traffic. Both parties in Maine indorse prohibition and the enforcement of the law.

Progress of Fish Culture.

There are now twenty-seven States whose Commissioners of Fisheries receive, hatch and distribute the eggs of fishes furnished by the United States Fish Commission. About 4,000,000 eggs of California Salmon were thus distributed in October. Congress has appropriated $5,000 toward preparing ponds near the Washington Monument for breeeding the carp, a European species, being regarded as desirable for introduction here. The Wisconsin Fish Commissioners report a large amount of work, having hatched and distributed 1,736,000 lake trout, 6,295,000 white fish, and smaller amounts of brook trout and California Salmon. The question whether our lakes will prove fitted for California salmon will soon be determined. The hatching has been successful with about 90 per cent. of the eggs. The Fish Commissioners of Maine report an unusually large quantity of salmon, principally due to the efforts at Fish culture, in most of the rivers of the State. Several ponds have been stocked with black bass, as an antidote to pickerel. In the Matawamkeag River, 80,000 shad fry have been placed.—N. Y. Tribune.

Lot's Mistake.

A part of the great richness of the Bible consists in presenting to our view the mistakes of good and pious men along down the ages of our race, which may serve as beacon-lights to us, to help us to better, truer lives than theirs; for perhaps "these things happened unto them for our ensamples," in part at least. Among the prominent cases of this class we find Lot.

He and his uncle Abram dwelt together in the land of Moreb until they became so rich that they could no longer dwell together in peace—a thing not uncommon for rich men.

Abram, wishing to avoid strife, went to Lot with these words: "Let there be no strife, I pray thee between my herdmen and thy herdmen; for we be brethren." And to confirm his good intentions and ardent desire for peace, he made a most gracious offer to his neighbor by giving him the first choice of country for a new home, telling him, "If thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left." Now, instead of Lot reciprocating this courtesy by allowing Abram to choose first, which in fact he ought to have done, according to age, he, covetous-like, seizes this opportunity to "drive a good bargain."

He saddles up his beast and rides the country over, no doubt to find the best spot for his new home. Finally he "pitched his tent toward Sodom." Now then his rambling is over, his anxiety is ended, his choice is made. Soon, no doubt, he was in his new home. But where did he worship the next Sabbath? "For the men of Sodom were wicked, and sinners before the Lord exceedingly." Ah, now his mistake begins to appear, for while he enjoyed the good of his new home he must endure the wickedness of his new neighbors. "For that righteous man dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing, vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds:"

But his mistake does not end with that. In a few years he was stripped of his goods, because his neighbors got him involved in war—the first war perhaps that ever cursed this world.

Finally his mistake assumes the proportions of a grand blunder, for he is compelled to leave Sodom, and with all his property and even his family, save his wife and two daughters, and before reaching Moab, the place of safety, his wife also perished.

There he was, in his old days, homeless and almost friendless, because of his one mistake; for had he cast his eyes toward Canaan instead of Sodom all these calamities might have been spared him.

Lot's mistake has often been repeated. Does A. want a business partner, he asks, Is B. good at money-getting? not, Is he honest and pious? So he is accepted in preference to C. who is a Christian. But in a few years bankruptcy is the result of the mistake. He "pitched his tent toward Sodom." Does a lady receive a proposal for marriage, her first question is, "Is he rich?" or if she forget it her parents do not. If he is rich the question is soon settled. But when a few years have passed her self-congratulation gives way to disappointment, and she goes through life wretched and broken-hearted because of her husband's intemperance, licentiousness, or profligacy. She "pitched her tent toward Sodom."—Religious Telescope.

The Dial-Plate.

Gotthold, on the first morning of a new year, wishing to know the time of day, looked up to the dial of the church-spire, where hands, moved by the mechanism within, indicated the hours upon a broad line of gilded numbers. Led into devout reflection, he observed to those around him: "I highly approve of marking the hours with letters of gold; it may well admonish us of the value of time, which is indeed too precious to be purchased even with the chief of metals; and of this truth many and all of us need to be reminded. Chrysaurus, a man of rank and fortune, had lived an ungodly life; when his end drew near, he beheld a troop of dreadful demons standing around his bed, and waiting for his soul, and exclaimed with a voice of anguish, Oh, for time! Only till tomorrow! Spare me till tomorrow! But his entreaties were vain. For him time was past, and the respite terminated. Ah! how much he would have given for even a few hours in which to repent! And yet how seldom we reflect upon the value of time, and how prodigally we spend it! How large the portion of it which we sleep, play, talk, eat, drink, riot away, and, in short unprofitably waste; and how long we deem the fragments devoted to spiritual exercises, such as converse with God, the study of his Word, devout contemplation, and the search of conscience! The hand upon the dial moves incessantly round, and passing hour after hour, will point at last to that at which you and I shall die; and it will be said of us, He has departed this life. We shall then have done with time, have entered upon eternity, and shall stand before the Judge. Let us therefore diligently improve every, hour and permit none to pass without yielding us some advantage for the world to come. Let every stroke of the clock remind us that another portion of time is gone, and that we shall have to give an account of it to God. "As we have opportunity, let us do good."

My God! seal these words upon my heart, and help me to employ the year which is now commencing in a way I may never repent of in eternity.—Gotthold's Emblems.

Yonder sun is but darkness to the luster of my Father's house; I shall myself be as glorious as the sun. This whole earth is but my Father's foot stool. This thunder is nothing to His dreadful voice. These winds are nothing to the breath of His mouth. If the "sending rain, and making the sun to rise on the just and on the unjust," be so wonderful, how much more wonderful and glorious will the Sun be which must shine on none but saints and sinners?—Baxter.

The Influence of Christ.

In his work on Nature and the Supernatural, Dr. Bushnell closes an admirable chapter on the Character of Christ, with the following fine passage:

"But before we drop a theme like this, let us note more distinctly the significance of this glorious advent, and have our congratulations in it. This one perfect character has come into our world, and lived in it; filling all the worlds of action, all the terms of duty and love, with His own divine manners, works and charities. All the conditions of our life are raised thus, by the meaning he has shown to be in them, and the grace He has put upon them. The world itself is changed, and is no more the same since Jesus left it. The air is charged with heavenly odors, and a kind of celestial consciousness, a sense of other worlds, is wafted on us in its breath. Let the dark ages come, let society roll backward and churches perish in whole regions of the earth, let infidelity deny, and, what is worse, let the spurious piety dishonor the truth; still there is a something here that was not, and a something that has immortality in it. Still our confidence remains unshaken that Christ and His all-quickening life are in the world, as fixed elements, and will be to the end of time; for Christianity is not so much the advent of a better doctrine as of a perfect character; and how can a perfect character, once entered into life and history, be separated and finally expelled. It was easier to untwist all the beams of light in the sky, separating and expunging one of the colors, than to get the character of Jesus, which is the real gospel, out of the world. Look ye hither, meantime, all ye blinded and fallen of mankind, a better nature is among you, a pure heart, out of some pure world, is come into your prison, and walks it with you. Do you require to show who He is, and definitely to expound His person? We may not be able. Enough to know that sin has never touched his hallowed nature, and that He is a friend. In Him dawns a hope—purity has not come into our world except to purify. Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world! Light breaks in, peace settles on the air, lo! the prison-walls are giving away—rise, let us go."

The Laocoon.

The Latin poet, Virgil, has drawn a vivid picture of one of the scenes which hastened the fall of ancient Troy. The noble Trojan priest, Laocoon, denounced the infatuation of his countrymen, when they determined to receive the monstrous wooden horse, stuffed with Greek troops and princes, into the city. He tried every means to arouse his countrymen to a sense of their peril, and at last hurled his spear against the hollow fraud. But lest his passion might be effective, the hostile gods that helped the Greeks sent two snakes over the sea from Tenedos, with crests dropping blood and quivering tongues that licked their hissing mouths. They made their way in the city at once to Laocoon and his sons, wound themselves in frightful festoons around their limbs, bound them in a group of agony which sculpture has made immortal, crushed and choked them, and reared their crests and tongues over the brow of the patriotic priest, whose chaplet was black with their poison and red with his own death. Thus the Church of Troy was silenced; the serpents nestled safe under the buckler of the goddess in the sanctuary; the wooden horse was admitted, and that night Troy was in flames.—Starr King.

The American Baptist tells the following good story, which we commend to our young readers:

"Where did you first meet with your bride?" I asked a young friend of mine, who had invited me to his wedding. His answer was:

"Some time ago I was one of a large dinner party of ladies and gentlemen, at which a young lady was noticed not to drink any wine. Our host observed it, and said:

"'A glass of wine with you, miss?'

"'Excuse me, sir,' said she.

"'What excuse? Do you belong to the Murphies? What! have we a teetotaler here? Ha! ha! a teetotaler! Why, do you never drink wine?'

"'Never, sir.'

"'Why not?'

"'From principle, sir.'

"Nothing more was said. Her decision of character deeply impressed me. I sought an introduction to her, satisfied that one of such principles would make me a good companion. I joined the Murphies myself, and now she has just become my wife. That's why I married her."

Feb. 3, 1878.—JEHOSHAPHAT REPROVED.

SCRIPTURE.—2 Chron. 19 : 1-9.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"There is no iniquity with the Lord our God, nor respect of person, nor taking of gifts."—7.

TOPIC.—"Thus shall ye do, in the fear of the Lord, faithfully, and with a perfect heart."

(Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.)

The King Reproved (1-3).—There are, and have been, no faultless men. The most perfect of the characters of Scripture had their lapses into shame and sin and their painful recovery therefrom. Abraham, though he was the "friend of God," sadly disappoints us twice in showing more faith in lying than in the power of the Lord to deliver him. The anger of the Lord was kindled against Moses because of his great want of faith when he would have sent him to deal with Pharaoh. David, a man after the Lord's own heart, sinned as only we would expect a man without any conscience to sin. We look in vain through the Bible for perfect characters. It is too honest a book to cover up the sins of its most exalted personages. We read it under the satisfactory impression that we are perusing a book as uncompromising in statement as will be the judgment records of eternity. There is only one perfect life in all its pages. Christ alone exhibits no imperfections. And, inasmuch as in regard to all other characters it has been even stringently honest and outspoken, there is all the more reason why we unhesitatingly should accept its statements with relation to him.

Jehoshaphat, like the others, showed his human frailty. Like them he sinned. His sin consisted in contracting a marriage-alliance with the ungodly house of Ahab. In doing this, he committed the grave mistake of his life. Though every mistake is not a sin, every sin is a mistake. The consequences of it pursue one as unrelentlessly as unleashed bloodhound. There is no telling when one of them may overtake and grip one by the throat. "Shouldest thou help the ungodly, and love them that hate the Lord?" It is only a certain kind of help, and a certain kind of love that is here reprobated. The Scriptures nowhere condemn, and, indeed, everywhere commend those who help even the ungodly, when they are in trouble and need help. The good [illegible] did not stop to enquire whether the man whom he [illegible] was a good man or a bad one. God himself sendeth rain on the just and the unjust, and is kind to the evil and to the unthankful. But helping them in distress is a very different thing from aiding them to be more prosperous and, so, strengthen them in their evil-doing. It is praiseworthy to love them, also, no matter what their circumstances are—to love them with an affection that ardently desires their well-being, but that is a different thing from loving them with that affection that [illegible] with its object and [illegible] down to its level. The love [illegible] has for sinners is, and [illegible] a very different feeling [illegible] that one has for saints. [illegible] is accompanied with a [illegible], the former [illegible] at the thought of [illegible] as the sentiment [illegible] the guilty is not incon[illegible] [illegible] God in this [illegible] against those [illegible]. As a class we [illegible] their doings, [illegible] we are to love [illegible] if it be possible. [illegible] is not to [illegible] hatred of them [illegible] is love for [illegible] to carry one [illegible] to help them [illegible] [illegible] are good [illegible] tied in fra- [illegible] He will in- [illegible] that we do that is right, and it is not overshadowed, or blotted out, by that which we do that is wrong. We do little enough that is good, but all that we do accomplish is always placed to our credit. And it was high commendation for Jehoshaphat when the prophet could say that he had taken the groves out of the land, and had prepared his heart to seek the Lord. He had done what few kings before him had done, and what few people now do, he had warred for the Lord both without and within—had prepared the land to seek the Lord as well as his own heart.

The People Reclaimed (4).—After this rebuke, he set himself to work more seduously than ever to establish the kingdom in the hand of the Lord. That fact shows the excellency of his spirit. He tried to make up for his error abroad by greater effort at home.

The Judiciary Reformed (5-9).—In the next act, we have additional evidence that Jehoshaphat was not a man of piety merely, but was a man of breadth and of statesmanship as well. He saw that if he would have an upright people, he must have an upright judiciary. It is poor encouragement for men to be honest when knavery receives a premium at the hands of justice. If the law will not protect honesty, then all men will be apt to become scamps. The fountain of justice must be pure. The courts in Judah must have been quite corrupt. Aside from the significance of the charge given by Jehoshaphat to the newly appointed judges, that they must take no bribes, idol worship and its abominations were calculated to destroy all integrity in every department of state. It was an old-fashioned court. Our courts of to-day are not made up after its pattern. Perhaps it is better that they should not be. But one thing is certain; that is that it would indicate a better time if, in the great commission that is issued to every judge, we should find these directions: "Take heed what ye do; for ye judge not for man, but for the Lord, who is with you in judgment. Wherefore, now, let the fear of the Lord be upon you; take heed and do it; for there is no iniquity with the Lord our God, nor respect of persons, nor taking of gifts. Thus shall ye do in the fear of the Lord, faithfully, and with a perfect heart."

Daniel Webster's Religion.

From the "Reminiscences of Daniel Webster," by his friend Peter Harvey, a volume of great interest, just from the press of Little, Brown & Co., Boston, we make the following extract:

The year before Mr. Webster died, in the autumn of 1851, I was spending a few weeks with him at his place in Franklin. One pleasant morning he said to me:

"I am going to take a drive up to Andover, and I want you to go with me."

Andover was about ten miles from his place in Franklin. He added:

"We can start after breakfast, and it will take us an hour and a half or two hours to go. We shall only want to stay there an hour or so, and we will return in time for dinner. When we get into the wagon I will tell you whom I am going to see."

The horse was harnessed, and we started off. As we rode along, Mr. Webster had a great many reminiscences called to mind by different objects that we passed. Such a man used to live here, he would say, and such a man lived in such a house, and there, I remember, such a man lived in such a house; and here he used himself to live when a boy, and there he used to pitch quoits, and in another place he used to play with John Holden's boys.

After Mr. Webster had recounted various pleasing reminiscences of this kind, he said:

"Now I will tell you the object of this trip to-day. I am going to see a man by the name of Colby. John Colby is a brother-in-law of mine. He married my oldest half-sister, and was, of course, a good many years older than myself—as she was. I have not seen him for forty-five years, as nearly as I can recollect. My sister, his wife, has been dead many years, and any interest I may have had in John Colby has all died out; but I have learned some particulars about his recent life that interest me very much, and I am going to see him. I will tell you something about him. When I was a lad at home, on the farm, John Colby was a smart, driving, trading, swearing [illegible], money-loving and money-[illegible]. In that rather rude period, when there were not many distinc[illegible] society, when one man was [illegible] another, and when [illegible] very few educated persons, [illegible] a very [illegible] I remember [illegible] up when I was a little fellow, throw me astride of a horse, bare-back, and send the horse to the brook. The horse would gallop, and I had to hold on to his mane to keep from being pitched into the river. Colby was a reckless, wild, harum-scarum, dare-devil sort of a fellow. Well, John Colby married my oldest half-sister. She was a religious, good woman; but beaux were not plenty, and John Colby was a fine looking man. His personal habits were good enough, laying aside his recklessness; he was not a drinking man, and he was, as the world goes, a thrifty man. Any of the girls in town would have married John Colby. After he married my sister I went away to college, and lost sight of him. Finally he went up to Andover and bought a farm, and the only recollection I have about him after that is, that he was called, I think, the wickedest man in the neighborhood, so far as swearing and impiety went. I used to wonder how my sister could marry so profane a man as John Colby. I think she herself was very much shocked, and I know her father was, who was a religious man. And still Colby was considered a 'good catch.' I came home from College during vacation, and used to hear from him occasionally; but after a few years—perhaps five or six years—my sister died, and then, of course all the interest that any of us had in John Colby, pretty much ceased. I believe she left a child—I think a daughter—who grew up and was married and also left a child.

Now I will give you the reason why I am to-day going to see this John Colby. I have been told by persons who know, that, within a few years, he has become a convert to the Christian religion, and has met with that mysterious change which we call a change of heart; in other words, he has become a consistent, praying Christian. This has given me a very strong desire to have a personal interview with him, and to hear with my own ears his account of this change. For, humanly speaking, I should have said that his was about as hopeless a case for conversion as I could well conceive. He won't know me, and I shall know him; and I don't intend to make myself known at first."

We drove on, reached the village—a quite little place, one street running through it, a few houses scattered along here and there, with a country store, a tavern, and a post-office. As we drove into this quite, peaceable little hamlet, at mid-day, with hardly a sign of life noticeable, Mr. Webster accosted a lad in the street and asked where John Colby lived.

"That is John Colby's house," said he, pointing to a very comfortable two-story, with a green lawn running down to the road. We drove along towards it, making our horse secure, we left the wagon and proceeded to the house on foot. Instead of steps leading to it, there were little flagstones laid in front of the door; and you could pass right into the horse without having to step up. The door was open. There was no occasion to knock, because, as we approached the door, the inmates of the room could see us. Sitting in the middle of that room was a striking figure, who proved to be John Colby. He sat facing the door, in a very comfortably furnished farm-house room, with a little table, be called a light-stand, before him. Upon it was a large, old-fashioned Scott's Family Bible, in very large print, and of course a very heavy volume. It lay open, and he had evidently been reading it attentively. As we entered he took off his spectacles and laid them on the page of the book, and looked up at us as we approached, Mr. Webster in front. He was a man, I should think, over six feet in height, and he retained, in a wonderful degree, his erect and manly form, although he was eighty-five or six years old. His frame was that of a once powerful, athletic man. His head was covered with very heavy, thick, bushy hair, and it was white as wool, which added very much to the picturesqueness of his appearance. As I looked in at the door, I thought I never saw a more striking figure. He straightened himself up, but said nothing until just as we appeared at the door, when he greeted us with—

"Walk in, gentlemen."

He then spoke to his grandchild to give us some chairs. The meeting was, I saw, a little awkward, and he looked very sharply at us, as much as to say, "You are here, but for what I don't know; make known your business. Mr. Webster's first salutation was:

"This is Mr. Colby, Mr. John Colby, is it not?"

"That is my name, sir," was the reply.

"I suppose you don't know me," said Mr. Webster."

"No, sir, I don't know you; and I should like to know how you know me."

"I have seen you before, Mr. Colby," replied Mr. Webster.

"Seen me before!" said he; "pray, when and where?"

"Have you no recollection of me?" asked Mr. Webster.

"No, sir, not the slightest;" and he looked by Mr. Webster toward me, as if trying to remember if he had seen me. Mr. Webster remarked:

"I think you never saw this gentleman before; but you have seen me."

Colby put the question again, "When, and where?"

"You married my oldest sister!" replied Mr. Webster, calling her by name. (I think it was Susannah.)

"I married your oldest sister!" exclaimed Colby; "who are you?"

"I am 'little Dan,'" was the reply.

It certainly would be impossible to describe the expression of wonder, astonishment and half-incredulity that came over Colby's face.

"You Daniel Webster!" said he; and he started to rise from his chair. As he did so he stammered out some words of surprise. "Is it possible that this is the little black lad that used to ride the horses to water? Well, I cannot realize it!"

Mr. Webster approached him. They embraced each other; and both wept.

"Is it possible," said Mr. Colby, when the embarrassment of the first shock of recognition was past, "that you have come up here to see me? Is this Daniel? Why, why," said he, "I cannot believe my senses. Now, sit down. I am glad, oh, I am so glad to see you, Daniel! I never expected to see you again. I don't know what to say. I am so glad," he went on, "that my life has been spared that I might see you. Why, Daniel, I read about you and hear about you in all ways; sometimes some members of the family come and tell us about you; and the newspapers tell us a great deal about you too. Your name seems to be constantly in the newspapers. They say that you are a great man, that you are a famous man; and you can't tell how delighted I am when I hear such things. But, Daniel, the time is short—you won't stay here long—I want to ask you one question. You may be a great man; are you a good man? Are you a Christian man? Do you love the Lord Jesus Christ? That is the only question that is worth answering. Are you a Christian? You know, Daniel, what I have been; I have been one of the wickedest of men. Your poor sister, who is now in Heaven, knows that. But the spirit of Christ and of Almighty God has come down and plucked me as a brand from the everlasting burning. I am here now, a monument to His grace. Oh, Daniel, I would not give what is contained within the covers of this book for all the honors that have been conferred upon men from the creation of the world until now. For what good would it do? It is all nothing, and less than nothing, if you are not a Christian, if you are not repentant. If you do not love the Lord Jesus Christ, in sincerity and truth, all your worldly honors will sink to utter nothingness. Are you a Christian? Do you love Christ? You have not answered me."

All this was said in the most earnest and even vehement manner.

"John Colby," replied Mr. Webster, "You have asked me a very important question, and one which should not be answered lightly. I intend to give you an answer, and one that is truthful, or I won't give you any. I hope that I am a Christian, I profess to be a Christian. But, while I say that, I wish to add—I say it with shame and confusion of face—that I am not such a Christian as I wish I were. I have lived in the world, surrounded by its honors and its temptations, and I am afraid, John Colby, that I am not so good a Christian as I ought to be. I am afraid I have not your faith and your hopes; but still, I hope and trust that I am a Christian, and that the same grace which has converted you, and made you an heir of salvation, will do the same for me. I trust it; and I also trust, John Colby—and it won't be long before our summons will come—that we shall meet in a better world, and meet those who have gone before us, whom we knew, and who trusted in that same divine, free grace. It won't be long. You cannot tell, John Colby, how much delight it gave me to hear of your conversion. The hearing of that is what led me here to-day. I came here to see with my own eyes, and hear with my own ears the story from a man that I know and remember well. What a wicked man you used to be!"

"O Daniel!" exclaimed John Colby, "you don't know how wicked I was; how ungrateful I was; how unthankful I was! I never thought of God; I never cared for God; I was worse than the heathen. Living in a Christian land, with the light shining all round me, and the blessings of Sabbath teachings everywhere about me, I was worse than a heathen until I was arrested by the grace of Christ, and made to see my sinfulness, and to hear the voice of my Savior. Now I am only waiting to go home to Him, and to meet your sainted sister, my poor wife. And I wish, Daniel, that you might be a prayerful Christian, and I trust you are. Daniel," he added, with deep earnestness of voice, "will you pray with me?"

We knelt down and Mr. Webster offered a most touching and eloquent prayer. As soon as he had pronounced the "Amen," Mr. Colby followed in a most pathetic, stirring appeal to God. He prayed for the family, for me, and for everybody. Then we rose, and he seemed to feel a serene happiness in having thus joined his spirit with that of Mr. Webster in prayer.

"Now," said he, "what can we give you? I don't think we have anything that we can give you."

"Yes, you have," replied Mr. Webster, "you have something that is just what we want to eat."

"What is that," asked Colby.

"It is some bread and milk," said Mr. Webster. "I want a bowl of bread and milk for myself and my friend."

Very soon the table was set, and a white cloth spread over it; some nice bread was set upon it and some milk brought, and we sat down to the table and ate. Mr. Webster exclaimed afterward:

"Did'nt it taste good? Didn't it taste like old times?"

The brothers-in-law took an affectionate leave of each other and we left. Mr. Webster could hardly restrain his tears. When we got into the wagon he began to moralize.

"I should like," said he, "to know what the enemies of religion would say to John Colby's conversion. There was a man as unlikely, humanly speaking, to become a Christian as any man I ever saw. He was reckless, heedless, impious; never attended church, never experienced the good influence of associating with religious people. And here he has been living on in that reckless way until he has got to be an old man; until a period of life when you naturally would not expect his habits to change; and yet he has been brought into the condition in which we have seen him to-day—a penitent, trusting, humble believer. Whatever people may say, nothing," added Mr. Webster, "can convince me that anything short of the grace of Almighty God could make such a change as I, with my own eyes, have witnessed in the life of John Colby."

When we got back to Franklin, in the evening, we met John Taylor at the door. Mr. Webster called out to him:

"Well, John Taylor, miracles happen in these later days as well as in the days of old."

"What now, Squire?" asked John Taylor.

"Why, John Colby has become a Christian. If that is not a miracle, what is?"

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. NELSON & PHILLIPS,

National Repository,

A CHRISTIAN MAGAZINE,

Rev. D. CURRY, D.D., Editor.

Begins Jan'y, 1878. Try it one Year.

ONLY $3 A YEAR.

"The scope and character of the magazine shall be that of a first-class religious and literary monthly, of the brightest character attainable, and pervaded, whether in its general or religious articles, by a thoroughly Christian spirit."—Order of the Committee.

Under these directions, it will be devoted to General and Religious Literature, Biographies and Travels, Criticisms and Art.

A sufficient number of the best writers for the press are employed to furnish all the variety in the several departments which their scope and importance require to make them rich and instructive.

The editorial department will be a feature of the magazine. Rev. Dr. Curry, both experienced and successful as an editor, brings to his duties the purpose of giving his whole strength to the work before him.

Each number will contain one or more articles illustrated with Wood Engravings, in the best style of this art, adding beauty and value to the pages.

The twelve numbers for the year will contain 1,152 pages of reading-matter, which, published in book form, would make not less than fifteen volumes, worth $1.50 each, and will comprise a variety that will be more interesting and valuable to the general reader than can be procured in books for many times the yearly price of the magazine.

We earnestly request you to take the National Repository for 1878—to give it one year's trial, and thereby determine for yourselves whether it is worthy of a place in the Christian home.

All Methodist pastors are authorized agents.

Say No.

When tempted to wander from duty and truth,
By the siren of pleasure, in the freedom of youth,—
Have the courage to answer the soft smiling foe,
And when you are tempted, say earnestly, No!

When the glass that is sparkling is pressed to the lip,
And [illegible] companions invite you to sip,
Beware of the serpent beneath the rich glow,
And dash the bright wine cup with a hearty No, no!

The gamester may teach you, with his deep burning wiles,
With words that are pleasant, and a face full of smiles,
In sport he may ask you the dice-box to throw,
Be firm in your virtue—indignant, say, no!

The way that is evil, which multitudes throng,
With music and dancing and soul-melting song;
'Tis Beauty that beckons and asks you to go—
Away from false splendor,—say heartily, No!

Oh ponder your footsteps, leap not in the dark;
Upon the wild ocean launch not your frail bark;
Without the true wisdom that God will bestow;
When beckoned by error, say earnestly, No!

Take, take the good Bible for your guide and your chart,
And bind its pure precepts close, close to your heart;
[illegible] with the vicious you never will go,
But ever, when tempted, say heartily, NO!

A Pleasant Play for Pleasant Little Folks.

"[illegible] Annie, say, what is the [illegible] play you wrote to Katie about? Is it real nice? And did you play it when you were a little girl?"

"Three questions in a breath!" laughed Aunt Dee. "Well, the play is called 'Kitchen Furniture.'

"In the first place, you provide [illegible] chairs for the whole company except one. Then all but one [illegible] themselves in two long rows, face to face, but wide enough apart to leave plenty of room for the crier, who has no chair, to walk up and down between the lines.

"[illegible] the naming is done to [illegible], the crier (who is [illegible]) calls out as she stands between the two rows:

"[illegible] wants a gridiron, grid[illegible]?"

"[illegible] let the gridiron look [illegible] to her feet, and [illegible] as she can,

"[illegible] is before the [illegible] third time, she for[illegible] and must take the [illegible]. The crier must be [illegible] and keen-witted, [illegible] never get a chair by [illegible] wants.

"[illegible] plan for her to look [illegible], and also to [illegible] pot, pan or kettle she [illegible] by walking toward [illegible] plate.

"[illegible] can be varied as often [illegible] the crier calling out [illegible] wants a whole set, [illegible]!"

"[illegible] comes you must [illegible] seats as [illegible] the slow [illegible] pass who [illegible] the crier."

"[illegible] nobody'd [illegible] just change with [illegible]

"[illegible] not all do [illegible] Dee, merrily. [illegible] the fun. You [illegible] from one [illegible] cowards. [illegible] up with [illegible] make a [illegible] for a seat. [illegible] tell you [illegible]

"[illegible] it!" cried [illegible] my young [illegible] was [illegible] it, too. [illegible] peace are the natural conditions of family life.

Now, in certain things, man has been a constitutional shirk from the time of Adam—if the scientific gentlemen have left us any Adam—down to this day. Men will fight for their homes, and make slaves of themselves to their business to maintain them; but like the proverbial man who would die for a woman, but would never bring up a scuttle of coal, they can't tell what their children are studying at school, who their mates are, what they are learning of good or evil, nor hardly anything else that a father ought to know concerning his offspring. It is so sad a fact as to spoil the satire, when it is said that many a father finds his Sundays and holidays too few to enable him to "become acquainted with his boys." But we maintain that a man who hasn't time to be a father to his children, with all that includes, has no right to have any. He wrongs them, robs himself, puts an unjust responsibiliy upon the mother, and neglects his highest duties, human and divine.

There are so many ways in which a father may contribute to happy homelife, that it seems strange that the number of houses should so greatly exceed the number of homes. It takes so little to make children happy at home, that it is a wondrous pity so many little ones are miserable, or uneasy, or discontented. If for an hour after the evening meal the father should give himself to his children, would the mother wear out so fast, or the children be so lawless, troublesome and uncomfortable? What a ministry for good to both parties is a papa's frolic with babies! What an interest is added to the books, the drawings, the games, or even the studies, if the father enters into them!—Golden Age.

Queen Esther.

The story of Esther differs in one important regard from nearly all the other narrations of the Old Testament. What is elsewhere the prominent point,—namely, the assertion of the direct interposition of Divine Power to accomplish the proposed end—is here wanting, and it is left to the events alone to indicate the Jewish faith in the divine favor for this peculiar people. So entirely is this the case, that in the whole account of the deliverance of the Israelites from that fatal massacre, there is not even any mention of their Mighty Deliver; we find no assertion that the strong arm of their God once again rolled back from his people the waves of the red sea of blood which threatened to overwhelm them. The drunken whim of a monarch, the beauty and courage of a maiden, the overweening arrogance of a courtier, and the loyalty of a Jewish exile grow in this story into grand proportions, and involve the fate of a nation.

The romance of the story of Esther touches the heart, for the weary world, suffering from the usurpations and oppressions of wicked men, rejoices in every example of what is called poetic justice, and exults to see a plotter caught in the snares that he himself has spread.—Galaxy.

Galveston News: Col. Charles Hicks exhibited to some friends in this city, on yesterday, what is supposed to be one of the oldest coins in the United States. It is of gold, concave on one side and convex on the other. The head of Philip of Macedon covers one side, and on the reverse is a Greeek war chariot and the head of a trident, and below the latter representation are some hieroglyphics which are beyond the knowledge of the wise men who saw it. The coin was taken from the ruins of Thebes some years before the war by Mr. Belknap, then the representative of this Government to Greece, who gave it to his son, Col. Belknap, now of San Antonio, who presented it to Col. Hicks. If it really be contemporaneous with the great conqueror of Macedon, it must be nearly 2,000 years old.

At bedtime little Willie was saying his usual prayer at his mother's knee, and having got as far as "if I should die before I wake," hesitated.

"Well! what next?" asked his mother.

"Well, I s'pose the next thing would be a funeral."

In view of the constantly increasing popularity and demand for the Celebrated Arrow Tie, the universally recognized favorite Tie of Planters, Cotton Pressman and Shippers of Cotton generally, the American Cotton Tie Co., Limited, sole proprietors and manufacturers of said Tie, commanding unequalled facilities, have, in addition to the large stock now on hand, contracted for increased quantities, sufficient to meet the largest demand for Cotton Ties, to cover the entire crop of the coming season, and now, through their Agents generally, offer the popular and irrepressible ARROW TIE at $2.50 per bundle less 2½ per cent. discount for cash, in Bundles complete, being less than the market value of plain hoop iron; and it being the purpose of the Company to merit the continued patronage of the Planting community and to defy all competition that may arise; their Agents are instructed to contract with Dealers, Factors and country Merchants at the above named price and terms for future delivery up to the first of August in quantities as may be required from time to time, settlements being made on delivery.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

THE ORIGINAL

KING OF PAIN.

A Family Medicine,

Sure Cure for

CRAMPS, COLICS, DIARRŒA, SORE THROAT, HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE, EARACHE, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, COLDS, COUGHS, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, NERVOUSNESS, CUTS, SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, BITES OF VENOMOUS REPTILES, Etc.

Persons suffering from the above complaints might find it to their advantage to try KING OF PAIN, before sending for a physician, as a careful notice of the above directions may enable any person to learn how to use the medicine, which will prove beneficial in many complaints not mentioned in the above circular. This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Free Consultations

The rich will pay after cure only.

The poor will be treated, attended to and cured free of charge.

BY

D. J. BEAU,

(FROM PARIS)

Chemist and Professor of Phrenology.

Consultations Every Day, from 8 o'Clock a.m. to 4 p.m. at

NO. 106 BOURBON STREET,

By means of his powerful tonic and invigorating medicines, which he applies himself, he has obtained the greatest success in every place he has visited along the Coast, and he can show certificates of persons restored to health who had been given up as incurable, and bed-ridden for years. By his treatment, numbers of ladies, as well as gentlemen, have recovered their health and bloom of youth.

His new system is a sure cure for Apparent Apoplexy, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Neuralgia, Hemorrhage, Faintness, Sallowness, Strangulation, Diseases of the Womb, Fevers, Sore Eyes, Pain in the Stomach, Old and Rebellious Syphallitic Diseases, Scurvy, Scrofula, and all those Chronic Diseases which, in the South strike a man powerless and by a long agony lead certainly to death.

N. B.—His treatment excludes all those medicines having for base, arsenic, mercury, or quinine, which generally cause the decay of teeth and the weakening of all the organs, leaving the system in a state of prostration by taking off all its strength and very often afflicting it with new disease.

The Science of Phrenology has alone the power to recognize the symptoms characterizing diseases and to discover all the phases of existence; acquiring this knowledge only by a thorough study, it does not startle, but astonishes, and by its accuracy gives the person consulting a certainty of cure and an insight into what he is about.

Phrenological Consultations—At the Office $5, at Residence $10.

Couldst Thou Not Watch One Hour?

The night is dark, behold the shade is deeper
In the old garden of Gethsemane,
When that calm voice awoke the weary sleeper:
Couldst thou not watch one hour alone with me?

O thou so weary of thy self-denials,
[illegible] so impatient of thy little cross,
Is it so hard to bear thy daily trials,
To count all earthly things a gainful loss?

What if thou always suffer tribulation?
[illegible] thy Christian warfare never cease?
The [illegible] of the quiet habitation
[illegible] thee to everlasting peace.

[illegible] all must suffer, walking lonely
The path that Jesus once himself hath [illegible]
[illegible] in patience, through this hour
This one dark hour before the eternal dawn.

The captive's oar may pause upon the galley,
The soldier sleep beneath his plumed crest
And peace may fold her wing o'er hill and valley,
But thou, O Christian, must not take thy rest.

Thou must walk on, however man upbraid thee,
With Him who trod the wine-press all alone;
Thou wilt not find one human hand to aid thee,
One human soul to comprehend thine own.

[illegible] forget thy Christian superscription,
[illegible] happy which, enchanting
[illegible] thee, to the land
[illegible] water to secure?
[illegible] yield thy sure and glorious
[illegible] fleeting joys earth can afford
[illegible] away the treasure from us,

Profession and Practice.

[illegible]

Kingdom of Heaven which He announced. This is the teaching from the beatitudes to the two houses, the one that fell and the one that fell not. It was a kingdom of right, of truth. He came not to do away with the law, but to fulfill the law in the exaltation of the principles it contained of right, of justice, of truth. So all through the sermon. But let us observe this kingdom in the light of the text:

1. It is a kingdom of fruit, not of thorns, not of leaves. "Not every one that saith unto Me, Lord, Lord," etc. It is something more than talk, something more than profession. Yet, let us not undervalue the importance of profession. "He that confesseth Me before men," saith Christ," "him will I confess before My Father in Heaven."—Christ does not tell us not to say, Lord, Lord, but He means that this is not enough. Despise not words. It is a word that seals wedlock. But O, how empty is wedlock if it rests on nothing more than words!—Words are often weighty. Some words weigh tons. Luther's words, "Here I stand, I cannot do otherwise," before the Convention of Charles V., shook the thrones of earth. Words are mighty when backed by a soul ready to act.

2. We see the faith, which is so essential in the Kingdom of Heaven, is an active grace. The proof of sincerity is doing. Some imagine that faith is but an emotion of the mind; that there lies in it no energy, no self-determination to action. A mere profession is but a half truth—words are but half truths. Half truths often become whole errors. The Romish half truths put in practice become whole and most destructive errors. Simply resting in the arms of Jesus, simple faith in the Christian graces, are not represented anywhere in the Bible as enough. We must go beyond. The apostle clinched this when he said, Faith without works is dead. Faith is an active principle. It has cunning in its hands, and has swiftness of feet. I read that faith overcomes the world. To overcome is not a slight matter. It means war, and war is not lazy work.

3. Then we have this third truth, that every one that cometh into the kingdom of God must do God's will. He only is in that kingdom who doeth the will of God. Mere trust is not enough, nor mere active trust. It must be a trust that is active in the proper direction. But how can we find out what is the will of God? God gives eyes to the man who would know His will. He giveth wisdom to him that lacketh and desireth it. This divine will must be known by the Christian, and known, it must be obeyed. Christ says that he that loveth Him will keep His commandments. Keep, that is the word. It is easier to keep the commandments than to gather up fragments of a broken commandment. It is a sad, a dreadful task to gather up the fragments of a shattered commandment, and try, by the bitter tears of repentance and the grace of God, to cement those fragments. Keep, brethren, the commandments. The world is a great law keeper; had it not been, the sunlight would not have broken in upon us this morning. All God's universe must obey His laws. The man who would enter His kingdom must be ready to obey the divine will. There is no exemption. Even Christ had to do the will of His Father. Mark the lad in the temple as He answers his mother, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" Again He declared to His disciples that to do His Father's will was His meat and His drink. From Nazareth's work-shop the Gethsemane's bitter tears, to the agonies of the cross, His life was one of obedience. The command is, Be ye holy. Holiness is not rapture, it is not impulse; it is doing God's will. It is a life-work. Do that will if the eye goes out. Do it if an arm goes off. Do it though popularity is lost, though you are stripped of power.

Let us learn that a faith that is active in obeying the will of God is the decisive test of being in the kingdom of Christ. I care not what the denominational label is which you carry—labels often drop off. They are well enough for present [illegible], but they will not survive the [illegible] of the millenium. Have [illegible] that is active in its obedience [illegible] divine will? That is [illegible] and be- [illegible] God. No [illegible] from the [illegible] a fine sermon! never was the atmosphere of Judea agitated by grander words. So, from that time to the present, have there been many who were ever ready to talk about the truth. Christ saw this disposition in his hearers, and closed his sermon with the words, "Therefore, whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him," etc. (Matt. vii: 24–29.) The same winds struck both houses, but the one stood and the other fell.

3. Nor is confidence sufficient. The Pharisees were sure they builded on the rock, and that hey had no need to fear the beating of the storm. You remember the lighthouse that was built off the coast of England by Winstanley. The architect was confident that the structure was strong, and laughed at the criticisms upon it. To show his confidence, he took up his abode in the building. In the midst of that fearful November storm, how little that confidence availed him as the structure was caught in the grasp of the winds and shaken to pieces! Now another lighthouse stands there well founded, well builded, and lights the mariner to the safe harbor. So that character that is rightly founded and builded in Christ will not only be secure itself, but light others to security. In that great day of judgment it will be well with him who says, "Lord, Lord," and lives the Lord in his daily life. That man will triumph through the grave, beyond the judgment, and evermore.

I invite you, dear friends, to the searching test in this text, that you examine well your hearts. Possess, not confess only, Christ truly on earth; then you will behold, with not a cloud between, His face forevermore.—Metropolitan Pulpit.

A Remarkable Man.

If you lock up the idlest and most stupid tramp in a dungeon, he will work night and day to get out. He will be more than industrious. Often he will show himself exceedingly smart in deceiving his keepers, in filing off his chains, in unscrewing locks, and tunneling through stone walls; clever enough, had his work rightly and steadily applied, to have got himself a medal at the Centennial Exhibition, and perhaps a large fortune. And so of any young man who is good, honest, industrious; only lock him up in the dungeon of deep poverty, and, in order to get out, he will show the most wonderful skill and ingenuity. Let a story be told to illustrate this.

Once upon a time there lived in Fall River, Massachusetts, a young man named Alvan. He worked hard as an engraver of designs for calico prints, and was one of the quietest and most childlike of persons. There was a certain Manlius Sargeant who was universally known in those days as a public speaker; and Alvan, who had had no instruction whatever in painting, and who had only seen Sargeant upon the streets and on the platform, painted a picture of him. It was said to be so good that he went to Boston, rented a small room, hung out his sign, and waited for Boston to crowd to him to have its many portraits painted. Waiting was for a long time all the work he had to do, and of all work it is the hardest. Many a weary day and sleepless night did he wonder where the money was to come from upon which to live. At last, in sheer desperation, he one day took his picture of Mr. Sargeant and went on the streets to find a buyer. Seeing some persons in a place of business, he went in and held up the likeness. It was immediately recognized and declared to be very good, so good that a Dr. Bemis, who was one of the gentlemen, sat to Alvan himself and brought all his acquaintances to do so too, becoming his warm friend.

The young artist had plenty of pictures to paint henceforth, but his way of doing it was peculiar. He had a mirror so placed as to throw the face of the sitter upon the bottom of a desk at which he sat, the bottom being covered with canvas, upon which he traced the outlines. Next he would dot the drawing all over with numbers, each of which designated the exact shade of color in the sitter's face to be placed there. It was a mechanical process, but the portraits were truth itself. By way of exercise, he made himself an air-gun and shot at marks upon a wall. From that he made himself the best marksman with a rifle in Boston. Observing that it insured the accuracy of the ball to do it, he made a very short tube which he fitted on the end of the rifle, in driving the cartridge down, taking the tube off before firing. Still more ingenious were the telescopic sights which he made for his rifle. That was the origin of the work which has made him famous. From the smallest experiments when about forty years old, he began to manufacture telescopes. In 1857 an achromatic telescope was imported for the use of Harvard College, and he immediately made another which proved to be far superior. This was intended for a college in Mississippi, but the war breaking out, it went to the Chicago Observatory.

I spent a delightful day yesterday at his factory in Cambridge, near Boston. Upon the grounds near the houses in which he and his sons live, is a wooden building twenty-five by forty-five feet in size and two stories high with a basement. Here is the engine and the simple machinery by means of which the best telescopes in the world are now made. It is Alvan Clark of whom I am speaking. His two sons are associated with him, there being a mutual affection among them as well as a simplicity of manners which charmed me greatly.

"I happened," said Mr. Alvan Clark, the youngest son of the old gentleman, who is now seventy-two years of age, "to be looking through one of our largest telescopes at Sirius one night in 1862. You know that Sirius is the brightest star in the heavens. It is one hundred and twenty-three billions of miles away, and is four hundred times the size and power of our sun. M. Bessel had said that there must be something to make Sirius vary from its line of motion, and that night sure enough, I saw the planet of its system which did it."

Young Mr. Clark was whittling a stick when he told me, and did not think it was anything very remarkable; but the French Institute awarded him a medal for it, and it made him and his father's glasses famous forever. It was with one of these telescopes that Asaph Hall lately discovered the two moons of Mars. Queer moons they are, not more than five or ten miles in diameter, and revolving about Mars every seven hours. It took but a small pebble, however, to slay Goliath, and it is not impossible that those little brickbats, so to speak, of moons may kill the grand nebular hypothesis, which has been a sort of religion of astronomers for so long. The moons move altogether too rapidly to be accounted for upon that theory, Mr. Clark told me.

In the factory I saw the telescope being made for Princeton College, which is to cost $4000, and another for the Portuguese Government, to cost $6000. Mr. Clark is also building another which is to be a present from Mr. McCormick of Chicago, to a Virginia College, which is to cost $25,000. Mr. James Lick, of California, applied to them to make the largest telescope possible for him, but did not persist when he learned that it would cost $180,000. The son who discovered the planet of Sirius told me that he hopes to make one which will have an object glass some thirty-six inches in diameter, which will be by far the very largest ever made, and who can tell what it may not reveal.—Sunday Afternoon.

The Central Cross.

I believe that this world is just a bewildering maze, looked at from every point except one. I look back upon the records of history; I look back upon the speculations of science; I endeavor to gaze into the future of this world's career; where ever I turn I am opposed by the mysteries that hem in and crush me down, until I take my stand at the foot of the cross. Then darkness and discord become light and harmony; the mystery is solved; the night that shut me in becomes radiant with the divine light and glory. At the foot of the cross, art, science literature, and history become at once a divine, a glorious, and a blessed thing. And so I claim for my Lord his rightful dominion over all the works of his hand! We will gather all the beauties of art, and all the treasures of music, all that is brightest and best in this world, and will lay then down at his feet, for "worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive might, and majesty, and riches, and power, and honor, and glory." His is the scepter, his is the right, his this universal world.—Dr. Manning.

Daring Telouchkine.

Remarkable for its spire, the loftiest of St. Petersburg, is the church of St. Peter and St. Paul. The spire, which rises and is probably represented in an engraving as fading away almost into a point in the sky, is, in reality, terminated by a globe of considerable dimensions, on which an angel stands, supporting a large cross. This angel was out of repair; and some suspicions were entertained that he designed visiting, uninvoked, the surface of the earth. The affair caused some uneasiness, and the government at length became greatly perplexed. To raise a scaffolding to such a height would cost a large sum of money; and in meditating fruitlessly on this circumstance, without knowing how to act, some time was suffered to elapse.

"Lofty, and light, and small,"

Among the crowd of gazers below, who daily turned their eyes and their thoughts toward the angel, was a mujik called Telouchkine. This man was a roofer of houses (a slater, as he would be called in countries where slates were used); and his speculations by degrees assumed a more practical character than the idle wonders and conjectures of the rest of the crowd. The spire was entirely covered with sheets of gilded copper, and presented to the eye a surface as if it had been one mass of burnished gold. But Telouchkine knew that the sheets of copper were not even uniformly closed upon each other, and, above all, that there were large nails used to fasten them, which projected from the side of the spire Having thought on these circumstances till his mind was made up, Telouchkine went to the government and offered to repair the angel without scaffolding, and without assistance, on condition of being reasonably paid for the time expended in the labor. The offer was accepted.

The day fixed for the adventure arrives. Telouchkine, provided with nothing more than a coil of ropes, ascends the spire in the interior to the last window. Here he looks down at the concourse of people below, and up at the glittering "needle," as it is called, tapering far above his head. But his heart does not fail him; and stepping gravely out upon the window, he sets about his task.

He cuts a portion of the cord in the form of two large stirrups, with a loop at each end. The upper loops he fastens upon the two projecting nails above his head, and places his foot in the others. Then digging the fingers of one hand into the interstices of the sheets of copper, he raises one of the stirrups with the other hand, so as to make it catch a nail higher up. The same operation he performs on behalf of the other leg, and so on alternately. And thus he climbs, nail by nail, step by step, and stirrup by stirrup, till his starting point is undistinguished from the golden surface, and the spire dwindles in his embrace till he can clasp it all round.

So far, so well. But he now reaches the ball—a globe between nine and ten feet in circumference. The angel, the object of this visit, is above this ball, and concealed from his view by its smooth, round, and glittering expanse. Only fancy the wretch at this moment, turning up his grave eyes, and graver beard, to an obstacle that seems to defy the daring and intrepidity of man!

But Telouchkine is not dismayed. He is prepared for the difficulty; and the means be used to surmount it exhibit the same remarkable simplity as the rest of the feat.

Suspending himself in his stirrups, he girds the "needle" with a cord, the ends of which he fastens around his waist; and so supported, he leans gradually back, till the soles of his feet are planted against the spire. In this position he throws, by a strong effort, a coil of cord over the ball; and so cool and accurately is the aim taken, that at the first trial it falls in the required direction, and he sees the end hang down on the opposite side.

To draw himself into his original position, to fasten the cord firmly around the globe, and with the assistance of this auxiliary to climb to the summit, is now an easy part of his task; and in a few minutes more Telouchkine stands by the side of the angel, and listen to the shouts that burst like sudden thunder from the concourse below, yet come to his ear like a faint and hollow murmur

The cord, which he had an opportunity of fastening properly, enabled him to descend with comparative facility; and the next day he carried up with him a ladder of ropes, by means of which he found it easy to effect the necessary repairs.—Happy Days.

Church Preferments.

When James and John solicited, through their mother's agency, places of honor in Christ's kingdom, our Lord made use of the occasion to teach them and their angry brethren a vital principle applicable to the government of his coming Church. "Ye know," said he, "that the princes of the Gentiles exexercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them, but it shall not be so among you."

Here we have a prohibition expressed in the most positive terms. But what is prohibited? Not all authority, but only such as was then exercised by the existing secular governments; that is, despotic and arbitrary authority—dominion in which the mere will of the ruler regulated his action. Of this arbitrary authority, Jesus said emphatically, "It shall not be so among you."

Dr. Whitby paraphrases these unqualified words thus: "Your office being only to make known my will, you shall have no such government, no dominion over the faith of others, shall command nothing for mere will and pleasure, but your whole office shall consist in being ministers for the good of others." Dr. Clarke interprets this text in the same spirit, and remarks that: "Every kind of lordship and spiritual dominion over the Church of Christ, like that exercised by the Church of Rome, is destructive and antichristian." Accepting these interpretations, we affirm that just so far as any form of Church government admits the principle, and provides for the exercise, of arbitrary power, it is not in harmony with the mind of Christ.

A fitting pendant to this prohibition of every form of despotism is that radical charter of human liberty, equality, and fraternity, contained in those grand words of Jesus, addressed, not to his chosen twelve only, but also to the multitude which gathered about him at Jerusalem. They were recorded in Matthew xxiii, 1–12. We quote them in part: "But be ye not called Rabbi; for one is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren. And call no man your father upon the earth, for one is your Father, which is in heaven. Neither be ye called masters; for one is your Master, even Christ."

These noble words must be the corner-stone of every form of Church government which fills our Lord's ideal. They are, in truth, the rock on which all Protestanism stands. From them comes the justification of that individualism which claims the right for every soul to interpret the words of God by the light of his own reason and conscience, and to refuse absolute submission to fathers, Churches, or councils, on all questions affecting his eternal destiny. "Call no man your father on earth; one is your Master, even Christ." He alone is a man's supreme guide; for to him, and not to pope, prelate, or priest, is every man accountable.—National Repository for January.

Church Ritual.

Another important fact is that Jesus neither practiced nor prescribed any ceremonial forms for His Church to follow. In all things we see a divine simplicity which strictly accorded with his avowed purpose to found a spiritual kingdom. He commended prayer and preaching, but, with the exception of one simple prayer, provided no ritual. He ordained the rite of baptism and the supper of remembrance, but gave no directions with respect to the method of their observance. He called the twelve, he sent out the seventy, but laid no ordaining hand upon them. In all these things his anxiety to keep the spiritual element uppermost and to establish a personal union with each disciple are apparent. In nothing does he make it necessary that a human priest should stand between him and his Church.

So profoundly did he impress these principles upon the minds of his disciples that when it became necessary for them to organise their converts they did it with a [illegible] ty which is truly wonderful. Among themselves they recognized no first. While they acted in concert, they preserved their individual equality, calling no man master but Christ. They were very zealous in preaching Jesus, but very indifferent concerning ceremonial observances. There is, for example, no evidence that they ordained Matthias, the successor of the apostate Judas, by the "laying on of hands." Neither does it appear that Barnabas, or Saul, or Lucius, or Simon Niger, or Manaen, or the numerous brethren who, being scattered abroad by the persecution which gave the Church its proto-martyr, preached Jesus over a vast extent of territory, were inducted into the ministry by the appropriate, but not essential, ceremony called ordination. Indeed, whoever reads the Acts of the Apostles without prejudice cannot well cescape the conviction that, with respect to both preaching and the administration of ordinances, there was at first no very distinct line drawn between ministers and laymen. Every believer was a priest unto God, and accepted his obligation to do what he could toward discipling the world. As the need arose the wisest and the best were chosen by the suffrages of the Churches, and appointed by the apostles to give special attention to the administration of their affairs and to preaching. "The apostles," says Coleman, "often distinguish between the teachers and the taught, the rulers and the ruled, etc.; and this division, after their decease, continued in the Church; but the clergy and the laity were not recognized as two distinct orders or classes in the Church until the close of the second and beginning of the third centuries."—National Repository for February.

Stop and Shake Hands.

Why is it men dart out of a prayer-meeting as they do, the moment the benediction is pronounced? The true idea of the Church is that it is a family—God's family. Its members are children of one Father, and brothers and sisters one of another. A prayer-meeting, therefore, is a family meeting. It is a re-union of brothers and sisters. The service is of the character of a feast; and we all know that after feasting come talking, and the exhibition of good nature. After the former portion of the service is over, brethren, why not stay have an informal service of your own? Talk of whatever the Spirit suggests. Tell your joys and sorrows, your hopes and your fears, to one another. "Laugh with those who laugh, weep with those who weep." Don't file out of the room solemn as crows flying to the groves at night, passing through gloom into deeper gloom; but go forth happy as children pour out of the door when father and mother start out with them for a ramble in the bright sunshine across the green field. At least stay long enough, after the formal service, to shake hands with the pastor and each other, and greet any stranger that may have chanced to have dropped in among you of an evening. Lubricate the wheels of your Church machinery with the "oil of gladness," and you will be astonished at the ease with which all parts will be working together. "Salute every saint in Christ Jesus."—Golden Rule.

The Gospel.

A good many preachers think that they preach the Gospel, because they know that they don't preach anything else. They don't preach Universalism, or Skepticism, or Drawinism, nor any other ism; and so they take it for granted they are preaching the truth, the real Gospel, and that they are all right. They never were more mistaken in their lives. A man may avoid these and all other heresies, and not preach the Gospel. There are preachers, not a few, who don't preach anything; they stand up and say their say; but there is no life in it; it is destitute of freshess, vigor, vitality. It does not come from the heart, the experience. The speaker does not feel it, and nobody else feels it.

To preach the Gospel means two things; it means to preach "the Gospel;" and it means to "preach" the Gospel. It means something more than not preach hersey; though indeed, the worst heresy that the devil ever set on foot is preaching the Gospel as though it were not the Gospel—preaching the Gospel [illegible] that nobody cares whether [illegible] or not, whether you preach or not.—National Baptist.

Mississippi Conference.

We publish elsewhere the statistics and appointments of the Mississippi Conference which closed its session at Oxford, Miss., on the 21st inst. We were present during the entire session and do not hesitate to state that it was in many respects the best session of that Conference yet held. This is no disparagement to the preceding sessions, because as the Conference grows older and its members become more thoroughly disciplined in the polity, usages and spirit of Methodism, each session should be an improvement on the one going before. The Conference numbers 28,719 members, and probationers 117 pointments throughout the State. The enrolled membership of the Church is 28,719.

Of the administration of Bishop Harris we can only repeat what we said of him when speaking of his presidency over the Lousiana Conference. His administration was in every respect efficient and thorough. Very much is expected of a Bishop, while presiding over our Southern Conferences. In some respects the organization of these Conferences is not complete; in other respects the administration of Discipline has been allowed to conform to the necessary conditions growing out of the missionary type of the work, and in all the matters of Methodist polity and usage in the government of churches and in the organization and pushing of the local or connectional enterprises of the Church, there is need of instruction and inspiration. The chief time and place to inculcate right information and to awaken increased devotion to the Discipline of the Church is at Conference, and the chief source of instruction and inspiration is the Bishop. Bishop Harris, as well as his colleagues do noble work for our cause by their patient, painstaking addresses, covering during a conference week almost every vital point in the government and enterprises of the Church. And it must be said to the credit of our ministers in the South that these addresses are appreciated, and year by year their effects are visible in increased thoroughness in the organization of churches, and a more intelligent devotion of our people to their Church.

Oxford is one of the beautiful little cities of Mississippi located on the Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans Railroad, three hundred and fifty miles directly north from New Orleans. It is the seat of the University of Mississippi, which is now in a very flourishing condition. There are in attendance four hundred and fifty young men. There is a faculty of seven professors, and several tutors. By a law of the State no saloons are allowed in the town, so that in many respects Oxford is a pleasant place to live in.

Our people at Oxford entertained the Conference well. Presiding Elder Johnson and Pastor Blue did their work well and we heard no word of complaint. All had good homes and were well cared for. Our Mississippi Conference is almost exclusively a colored Conference, and the fact that so large a body can be entertained comfortably for a week speaks well for the improved condition of the colored people. Bishop Harris and ourselves were entertained by Rev. Dr. Wheat a leading minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and who has for several years been Professor of Greek in the University at Oxford. He and his excellent lady greeted us cordially and entertained us with lavish hospitality. Rev. Mr. Murrah, pastor of the Southern Methodist Church at Oxford, was cordial and gave every evidence of fraternal feeling. Both he and Dr. Wheat and several other gentlemen visited and were introduced to the Conference. The students of the university invited Bishop Harris to address them on his trip around the world. He consented and spoke in the M. E. Church South on Sunday night. The house was packed, many being compelled to stand. We heard but one report and that was very favorable to the Bishop. His address made a great impression in favor of the cause of missions. The fraternal greetings and acts of our Southern brethren in Oxford illustrate the tendency of the hour in the South. That tendency is to [illegible] fraternity as understood among Methodists. Those of truly [illegible] spirit are still in the minority, but they are the coming [illegible] and in time will leaven the [illegible]. The history of Oxford [illegible] of the whole South. [illegible] we were entertained [illegible] Gen. Grant made [illegible]. That was [illegible] South, is welcomed to Oxford. This, then, is the day of peace and at least of agreeing to disagree. After the war the pastor of the Southern Methodist Church in Oxford began as was the custom throughout the South before the war, to preach to the colored people in the afternoon. It was soon found to be disagreeable to his people and he took them to the basement; but it was soon found that the new-born dislike to the colored people would permit this. About this time a representative of our church came to Oxford and welcomed the colored Methodists into the church. Then came the work of securing a lot. Several were bargained for, but as the word would get out that such a one was about to sell ground to the "nigger church," he was made to feel the lash of adverse public sentiment to such an extent that he would not close the bargain. Finally a colored man was found who owned the lots on which our present church and parsonage stand, and from him a purchase was made. To-day an Annual Conference meets in that church, and leading citizens drop in and look upon the body and go away surprised at its dignity, decorum, intelligence and high moral tone. The fact that the Conference is made up mostly of colored men still makes it to be despised by many, but not a few regard the body because of its worth, and all are now hushed to peace, silence and respect in its presence. So onward moves the great work of remolding if not regenerating the South. God speed every messenger of peace and fraternity.

The Mississippi Conference has lost one of its noblest leaders. Early in the year Dr. A. C. McDonald fell at his post. We shall publish an extended notice of his life and death next week.

The worth of Dr. McDonald to Mississippi Methodism can never be estimated. His was a cultured, brave and patient soul. He gave his life for the people and work he loved. He rests from his labors but his works do follow him. The memorial services on Monday were deeply impressive and effecting. Addresses were made by several.

Dr. Revels was secretary of the Conference assisted by Bros. J. M. Shumpert, J. Campbell, and W. W. Hooper. The last Brother had the difficult work of collecting and tabulating the statistics which work he did well.

Shaw University rightly received a good share of attention. This Institution under Prof. Hooper is doing a great work. The present is its successful year. May its success increase yearly!

The SOUTHWESTERN received the endorsement of the Conference, and Presiding Elders and preachers promise earnest work for the paper for 1878.

The banner District of the Conference for benevolent collections was the Greenwood District, Rev. J. W. Dunn, Presiding Elder. The reports of all the Presiding Elders indicated that they had attended to their work. Rev. L. Bradford, of the Gulf District, traveled five thousand miles over the seventeen counties, included in his District. Some of the time he was compelled to walk, there being no railroads and not being able to buy a horse.

The Returning Board Prosecution.

The great event of the past week was the arraignment of Messrs. Anderson, Wells, Kenner and Casanave, the members of the late Republican Returning Board, before the Superior Criminal Court for trial. The charge is forgery in changing the returns in the late election so that the State went Republican and Hayes was made President. The charge is stoutly denied by these gentlemen.

The time for trial was fixed for last Saturday at 11 a. m. But the accused not making their appearance the Sheriff went to find them. They were believed to be in the Custom House. Mr. Anderson is Deputy Collector and Mr. Wells is Surveyor General of this port. When the Sheriff went to the office door to enter he was refused admittance, and when he proposed to force an entrance he was arrested by the custodian of the Custom House on the ground that he was about to injure the property of the United States. The excitement became intense, and the marines from the Revenue Cutter, John A. Dix, were stationed at the front entrance. Matters remained in statu quo, awaiting word from Washington, to which both sides appealed, until Saturday evening, when Attorney General Devens telegraphed that the United States would not interfere with the State Court. [illegible] Anderson, Kenner and Casanave [illegible] and lodged in [illegible] Parish Prison where they are still to-day (Monday). Mr. Wells has not been yet found. The proceedings of this trial will be watched with great interest, as it bears directly upon not only State but National matters.

Speaking of Mr. Anderson the New Orleans Times says:

> He is a man of wonderful personal strength, and has been a unique political power in this State for many years, bidding defiance in his section to both party organizations and sweeping them both from his pathway by sheer force of character. A man of conceded personal courage, of stubborn purpose, of restless energy and great wealth, it is said of him that he has pursued politics of late years for the sole object of advancing the fortunes of his numberless dependants and personal friends. He has built up many men in St. Landry, one of whom, Senator Robertson, is a leading light to the party that has lodged him behind the bars.

Massachusetts Letter.

The week of prayer has been observed by nearly all our churches, and a spirit of revival is general. Union meetings of one month's continuance have just closed in this city. Ministers and members of different denominations have become deeply interested in each other, and many embraced Christ as their only Savior. Our singing has been grand but whether the Church will give heed to this power of song is a question of considerable interest. New England has become so wedded to choirs or, which is worse, quartettes, that a divorce is very doubtful; and yet the good and grand congregational singing, such as you have in the South, would be a thousand times more Scriptural and I believe more acceptable to Him whom we worship. We believe in theory in the people worshipping God, and where is the reason in excluding them from this delightful part of the service in the house of God? It is certainly more human than divine. The strong breeze of congregational singing, if rightly directed, would blow all our choirs and quartettes out of the windows like a wad out of a gun, and I judge to the entire satisfaction of many.

Extra meetings are being held, and I suppose extra sermons preached on the subject of missions, and all hope for extra collections. Just think of it, a large and wealthy church, claiming to be the largest in this country, and abounding in wealth, so deeply interested in the salvation of the world as to give forty or forty-two cents per member annually for the accomplishment of this noble end. Less than one cent a week per member. Not so much as we pay for the yeast that raises our bread to say nothing of the flour; this is made on the basis that all were obliged to buy yeast by the penny's worth, and what man does not consume a penny's worth per week? And yet we expect great things by this small investment, and I hope to live to see the day when the Methodist church will give the missionary cause at least one dollar per member annually.

I rejoice that the Methodist Episcopal Church is increasing so fast in the South. This is of God, and we shall prove recreant to our trust when we loose our hold of so important a field of Christian labor.

T. J. ABBOTT.

Tennessee Letter.

The state of the weather has been decidedly variable for the past four months. Rain, snow, frost, wind, and cloudy skies make up the record. The extra session of the Legislature which recently adjourned has given this State world-wide notoriety by its refusal to provide for the adjustment of the public debt. The individual must be honest and pay the uttermost farthing or suffer reproach, but the State, which is a community of individuals, and in the aggregate, assimilates to unity, can build railroads and make other internal improvements on the strength of borrowed money and then recline on its dignity and through its very learned and grave legislators proclaim to the world that it owes, but will not pay. To the credit of thousands of the citizens of the Old Volunteer State it is just to say that they are stubbornly opposed to anything and everything that even savors of repudiation. The American, the leading journal of this city, is square on the question of the payment of the public indebtedness. Owe no man anything is as applicable to the State as to the individual.

It is not our privilege to report any unusual workings of grace in this part of the moral vineyard. A decided state of religious inactivity exists at present among all the churches but one—St. John's A. M. E. Clark Chapel despite the [illegible] has held its own, and the outlook for the future is grand. During last quarter we were blessed with a revival which resulted in 14 conversions and 35 additions. The financial exhibit at the Quarterly Conference held Dec. 30 was par excellence, amounting to nearly $500. In class collections we claim to be the banner church. We have 235 members including probationers and our class collections average $50 per month. We are on the home stretch in the payment of our church debt, and on the second Sunday in next month we expect to reach the goal. The church, through the trustees, was the recipient of a New Year's gift of $85, $68 from the Sunday-school and $17 from the Church Aid Society. The Sunday-school is led by J. G. Brown and the Church Aid Society by Sister Amelia Rhodes. Our Christmas tree was a complete success, every scholar received a present. Bro. C. Pickett, our earnest and successful Presiding Elder, was with us on a recent Sunday night and caused our hearts to burn within us by his words of wisdom and might. We were recently favored with an unusual congregation, not in size but in race representation. Negro, Chinese, and Caucassian. Our Chinese hearers, two in number, were very attentive and at the call of the Stewards left their pence on the table. Their presence recalled to our mind the saying of David. "The entrance of Thy word giveth light." Who knows but what these nomandic devotees of Confucius shall here in America learn by Him who alone is God and be constrained by the Spirit to recross the broad bosom of the deep Pacific and bid their kindred "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." At least such is our prayer. Central Tennessee College is crowded to excess. Never before in its history has its attendance been so large. Every energy of the members of the faculty is taxed in the discharge of ever pressing duty and there is great reason to fear that some of them may be prostrated by over-work. They are bearing their burdens however with cheerful hearts. The Medical Department has shared in the general increase, and Prof. Hubard has his hands full in giving us light on the structure of the human system, the ills to which it is heir and the remedies therefor. He is assisted by two other Professors resident practising physicians. Dr. Braden grows in zeal and popular favor which we hope will increase until the institution is fully developed and the scope of its influence increased. Dr. Walden, of the Western Methodist Book Concern, delivered a very able and instructive lecture to the students and public on the 16th inst. His subject was "What to read."

Nashville, Tenn., Jan., 25th, 1878.

The Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans Railroad.

A recent trip over this great route served to impress us very forcibly with the rapid strides being made toward making it in every respect a first class Railroad. The entire road is being ironed anew, with steel rails joined by fish bars.

Two daily trains, one each way, now run on good time and make good through connections. A through pullman car runs daily each way between New Orleans and Chicago. There are pullman cars to St. Louis and this is the only road from New Orleans which crosses the great St Louis Bridge. It is several hours the shortest route between New Orleans and Chicago, St. Louis and Cincinnati. Mr. F. Chandler is the gentlemanly and efficient General Passenger Agent in this city.

New Orleans and the South are to be congratulated upon the improved management of this great thoroughfare. It is now owned and controlled by the Illinois Central Railroad, which insures every possible improvement in the road and its rolling stock. Practically the 913 miles from New Orleans to Chicago is one road.

Good News from Austin, Texas.

Rev. W. E. McCarty, stationed a few months since in Austin, Texas, by Bishop Foster, has had a most excellent beginning in his work. While making the tour of the Texas Conferences we met him and enjoyed the hospitality of his home, and learned of his success. His congregations and Sunday School had more than trippled, and in doing the work of a diligent pastor he was being greatly blessed. We learn now from Dr. Brush, the Presiding Elder of Austin District, that a lot had been bought for a more central location for the Church. Success to our Austin brethren.

The sixty-first annual meeting of the American Colonization Society was held at Washington on the 16th inst. The Secretary of the Navy, Hon. R. W. Thompson, was among the speakers.

West Tennessee District Conference.

The last session of the West Tennessee District Conference met at Memphis. It was a pleasant occasion to all in attendance. If we may judge of the future of our work by the reports there exhibited it bids fair. We especially remarked the deep interest taken in the Sunday School department, from which is to come the future Church. There was also great stress placed upon the educational qualifications of the different applicants before the various committees. Every effort was made to systematize our benevolent collections and make it possible to measure up to our needed pro rata.

J. P. PRICE, Sec'y.

Walden Seminary.

The first numbers of the SOUTHWESTERN ADVOCATE are received. Thanks to your ready response to the needs of the school.

Walden Seminary opens its third month of school with encouraging prospects. Its present enrollment reaches forty five, five of whom are preparing for the ministry and nearly all are preparing for teachers. The present session will continue until May 23, possibly longer, if its enrollment at that time is large enough to ensure a full school.

Yours respectfully,
H. M. PERKINS.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 21, 1878.

A rich discovery of gold was made on the 12th instant at the Ranta Mines, a short distance west Pubelo, Col. Mr. Munn, an old prospector, struck a lode, the ore from which assays the enormous sum of $12,600 in gold and $1,100 in silver per ton. There is great excitement in camp, and every body is rushing to the scene of the new discovery.

General Religious Items.

The Reformed Episcopal Church now numbers 60 clergymen, 50 parishes, and about 4,000 communicants.

Mr. Uriah Clarke, formerly a distinguished Spiritualist, but converted and a member of the M. E. Church in Boston, has started a periodical in that city, call the Anti-Skeptic.

In India there are now 900 missionaries and ordained native pastors, exclusive of Burmah and Ceylon. The increase in the last four years has been 16,000.

In Italy the Wesleyan Methodists from England have 1,300 communicants who, not long since, were Roman Catholics. The American Methodists have, in different places, nine congregations, made up of former Romanists.

The Chinese government not only issued a proclamation favoring religious toleration, but it mentions, also, with special favor, the work of Christan Missions, and bid the providical government favor their work.

The American Bible Society has taken action directing all its depositories to sell for cash only, and the scale of prices will be re-arranged so that the booksellers can receive the publications on the same terms as auxiliaries. This fact may be of service to our Sunday schools in purchasing bibles and testaments.

General News Items.

Cleopatra's Needle has arrived in England.

Garibaldi has written to King Humbert, of Italy, begging him to follow in his father's footsteps.

The Georgia Legislature is considering the law prohibiting the selling of tobacco to minors.

Jacksonville, Fla., has voted to issue bonds to the amount of one quarter of a milion of dollars for improving and beautifying the city and its surroundings.

On January 15th the excursion train from the Moody and Sankey meeting at Hartford, fell through the trestle bridge into Farmington river. Two engines, one baggage and three passenger cars went down. Fourteen persons were killed; fifteen to twenty were wounded.

The New York Tribune finds, upon investion, that the whole amount of silver coinage from the beginning of our government to 1858 was $95,00,000. The Senate's silver bill, providing for from $2,000,000 to $4,000,000 per month, will give us as much silver in four years as the country used under the policy of the "fathers" in sixty years.

The Courier-Journal learns that the beautiful telescope, manufactured by Alvin Clark & Sons, of Cambridgeport, Mass., expressely for Central University, at Richmond, Ky., has been received at that place. The instrument is eight feet long, with a clear aperture of object glass six inches; a highly finished brass tube, with finder attached, and is mounted on the largest tripod they have made, with equatorial mountings. It has one diagonal for viewing objects in the zenith; another for examining the sun, its spots, etc., and every other convenience that could be desired.

The funeral of the late King Victor Emanuel was very impressive. The procession was an hour and a half passing a given point. In addition to the official part, which was a mile long, there were 2,700 deputations, from all parts of the kingdom. The costumes in the official part of the procession were magnificent. The Crown Prince of Germany, with representatives of Austria, Portugal, and Baden walked abreast. Seventy tattered banners heightened the display. The Pantheon, which was splendidly decorated as a Chapelle Ardente, was reached about four o'clock in the afternoon. The car, on which the body was, was the same that was used at the funeral of King Charles Albert. It was surmounted by the iron crown. The entire procession was on foot. The ecclesiastical service was confined to a simple absolution and benediction pronounced by Monsignor Gori, Archpriest of the Chapter of the Church.

The French Government has resolved to discard its present system of bronze field-guns and make its guns of steel rings, puddled and cast. It has been under the consideration of the French artillerists to adopt the English system of built-up wrought iron coils, including the muzzle-loading principle; but this would have required a new extensive plant of machinery, where as the transition from bronze to steel can be effected with very little trouble and expense, the substitution of a different metal being almost the only charge. The preference of the French for breech-loading cannon is to be gratified by the application to these [illegible] of the "[illegible]," or French system, two kinds of field-pieces are to be produced—one rather larger than the English 16-pounder, and the other somewhat smaller than the English 9 pounder, corresponding in size more nearly to the German than the English artillery.

Mr. Spurgeon said recently: "The first thing after conversion to Christ is confession to Christ, and the next is instruction in Christ. I fear that too many professed converts leap over these hedges, and endeavor to become [illegible] at once. They call themselves disciples. They say they are soldiers of the cross; but they can neither march in line nor keep step, neither will they submit themselves to order. They appear to think that the moment they are born they are fathers; the instant they are enlisted they are officers. Now, conversion is the beginning of the spiritual life, and not the climax of it. It makes a man a disciple, and the main thing a disciple has to do is to learn. After he has learned, he will be able to teach others also; but not till then. I have often said to you that nothing can come out of you that is not in you; and, therefore, if there is not something put into you to begin [illegible] but, [illegible] powder to [illegible], the enemy will not be much injured by your valor. We must be filled before we can run over. It is necessary for the Christian man to be prepared for holy service; that, in fact what he does for God should be a harvest growing out of himself, because of a previous seed-time, during which much precious seed was put into him."

[illegible] Dakota the other day a stage load of passengers were compelled to hold their hands over their heads while a gang of highwaymen [illegible]. One of the victims, who remarked, "This is a high handed piece of business," was allowed to keep his watch as a reward for his [illegible].

Our Work in China.

A LETTER FROM BISHOP WILEY.

[illegible] Bishop Wiley [illegible] on board [illegible] at the [illegible] Peiho. The bishop [illegible] the visitation of [illegible]

[illegible] Peking the 27th of [illegible] December, and [illegible] for our [illegible] the city, and [illegible] his assistant, and they have had a good year.

The Chinese city has been under the charge of Brother Davis. In this city we have a miserable substitute for a chapel, because they will not allow us to build one. We have been holding possession here, however, and had almost daily preaching for five years. It is a hard location. Brother Davis thinks he finds increasing friendship of the neighbors, but increasing hostility of the officials and gentry. Average congregation of twenty, nine boys in the school, members eight, baptized children three. This is the only chapel of any kind in the southern city, and meets with much opposition. Chen Ta Yung, a native local preacher, has been helper here.

Tientsin was reported by Brother Pyke, who has had charge for three years. This I look upon as a very important missionary point. It is a city of perhaps one hundred thousand native population, and of considerable foreign interest. It lies about fifty miles up the Peiho river, and about eighty by land, or one hundred and twenty by water from Peking. It is the head of navigation for vessels of much size, and is therefore the entrepot for Peking and all north China. Many Chinese from all parts of north China come here. It is occupied by the A. B. C. F. M. with two families and a single man, by the London Missionary Society by two families, by the English Connection Methodists by four families, and by us with one family. The New Connection Methodists have two good properties for residence and schools. We have a fine compound about three hundred feet by two hundred feet, with one good home upon it. By all means, if within the range of possibility, another house ought to be built here, and another family from Peking put into it, while a new man should be sent to Peking. Possibly Brother Lowry may share Brother Pyke's house with him this winter, or perhaps rent another. To reinforce Tientsin is the most pressing need I see in North China. There is a pretty fair chapel within the city walls where service is kept up regularly every day, with an average congregation of twenty. We have fifteen members and twelve probationers. The work here is prosperous and hopeful.

Our brethren have not been idle in spreading out into the country, having some appointments as much as four hundred miles away from Peking, reaching up north to the Great Wall, and south into the Province of Shantung. This country work, especially in the south, is very promising. There seems to be really a giving way of the people in these more interior regions. All our brethren take their part in this itinerant work. Other societies are also doing good in these provinces lying about the Yellow River, so that there are now one thousand two hundred and forty-eight native members in North China. A good report was given of the Women's Work by Misses Combs, Campbell, and Howard. In the afternoon of Nov. 30 we had a Sunday school anniversary of all the schools in Peking. About one hundred and thirty children were present, and about one hundred adults. The exercises consisted of singing and a blackboard exercise. It was a beautiful and interesting and suggestive occasion, under the direction of Brother Pilcher. During this annual meeting four new men were licensed to preach; first, Wen Fang, a very promising man, who stood ninety-five in his examination; second, Wang Cheng Pei, who stood one hundred in an examination on the first three books of the Old Testament, and first two of the New Testament, and his character was held for quite a time as the subject of "ancestral worship." He promises well for the future; third, Shang Ching Yuen, examination ninety, and fourth, Wang Ching Yuen, examination ninety-five. I was most favorably impressed with all these men.

On Saturday afternoon, after a sacramental service, conducted by Brother Lowry, we read out the appointments.

On Sunday the annual sermon in Chinese was preached by Brother Pyke, after which Te Jui and Chen Ta Yung, previously elected by the North Indiana Conference, were ordained deacons. These are two excellent men; bright and [illegible], the second solid and rich [illegible]. May God keep [illegible]!

The following are the statistics of our North China Missions:—Missionaries, five; assistant missionaries, five; Women's Foreign Missionary Society, four; preachers [illegible], four; ex[illegible] twenty-[illegible] proba[illegible]. Total, [illegible] boys' schools, two; pupils, eighteen; Sabbath schools, three; scholars, one hundred and eighteen; chapels, five, value $6,500; parsonages, four, value $19,000; Women's Foreign Missionary Society school building and home, $4,000; hospital and house $5.500.

I need hardly speak of the importance of our North China Mission in its relation to the evangelization of China. Its center of operation is in Peking, the venerable capitol of the empire, rich in its history and traditions, and powerful in its influence over the whole country. Of course it is full of national pride and prejudice, and the work must be more slow in its progress, but eventually more powerful in its influence over other parts of the country. From this center our work has already radiated nearly to the Great Yellow Wall on the north and east, and to the River in the South. The language that our missionaries are now learning and using enables them to speak to one hundred millions of people. They are now able to preach in the language with ease and impressiveness. They are devoted to men and women, in whom the Church may repose the utmost confidence, and they have already met with a degree of success beyond what we had any right to expect from the few years in which they have been working in this part of China.

Our missionaries must act very wisely and cautiously in all their work in and about Peking, as they are there only by sufferance, and probably have no real treaty rights to be in the city. But we can safely trust our interest in their hands. The imperative need of this work is another family to join Brother Pyke in Tientsin. Our force in this mission ought to consist steadily of six families, four in Peking, and two in Tientsin. We lack now one family, and the work is undoubtedly suffering for want of it. We must re-inforce them in the spring.

Appointments for 1878.—Peking, Tartar City, W. F. Walker and Te Jui; Chinese City, L. W. Pilcher and Chen Ta Yung; Tientsin, H. H. Long; Tsun Hua Chou Circuit, supplied by Wow Yung; Tsang Chou Circuit, J. H. Pyke and Wang Ching Yuen; Nankung Circuit, Shang Ching Yuen; Tai-an fu Circuit, G. R. Davis and Wang Cheng Pei; Girls' Boarding School and Women's Work.—Misses M. Q. Porter and L. S. Campbell. Medical Department.—Miss L. S. Howard.

Feb. 10, 1878.—JEHOSAPHAT HELPED OF GOD.

SCRIPTURE.—2 Chron. 20:14-22

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Believe in the Lord your God, so shall ye be established: believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper."—20.

Topic.—"The battle is not yours but God's."—15.

(Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.)

The promise of victory. (14:17.)—It did not take long to answer that prayer. The response came immediately. "Then upon Jahaziel came the Spirit of the Lord."

On the morrow they were directed to go down against this great army that had come up against them, and were told just where they would find them. But that was all that they were to do. They were to do no fighting. They were simply to stand still and see the salvation of God. The king and the people had done their fighting in their praying. They had contended with God, and now God was to contend for them. If we prayed more, we would have to fight less. The battle with the world is won upon the knees, or ever the Christian man leaves his closet. He often finds that he has only to stand still and see the salvation of the Lord.

Praise for victory (18:19)—The act that follows the utterance of the inspired singer is fully as remarkable as any other of the incidents connected with this wonderful history. Jehoshaphat prostrated himself "with his face to the ground, and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell before the Lord, worshiping the Lord.' Besides this, the singers of Israel, the Kohathites, and that part of the Kohathites which had descended from Korah, "stood up to praise the Lord God of Israel with a loud voice on high." Thanksgiving and praise were returned for the promise as for the triumph that it guaranteed. They accepted that as though it were the victory itself. No doubt of the result entered in to check their exultant and thankful joy. There could hardly be a better illustration of the fact that "faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things unseen." So ought we to feel about all of God's promises. The book that he has given is full of them, meant as truly for us as though some inspired Jehaziel had uttered them in our ears as directly from God to us. Let us receive them all with the devout and reverential thankfulness and praise that was shown by Jehoshaphat and the people of Judah in this particular instance. If we receive his promises with thanksgiving and praise, the things promised will not tarry. Blessings that we pray for can not fly to us unless our faith will furnish them with wings.

The Praise Victory (20-22).—As their troops have defiled before them just before going into battle, noted generals have inspired them with watchwords suited to the occasion. But we doubt whether any commander, before or since, ever gave such a singular exhortation as did Jehoshaphat: "Believe in the Lord your God, so shall ye be established; believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper.' And this battle array was as irregular as his battle cry. He appointed singers, clad in garments covered with holy ornaments, to go before the army singing: "Praise the Lord, for his mercy endureth for ever." He adhered strictly to the command of the Lord to stand, "ye still," and hence marched forth, not for battle, but to behold the fulfillment of God's promise. When the Lord commands an apparently foolish thing, it is better to follow out his directions to the very letter, "because the foolishness of God is wiser than men." They marched, not like an army going into battle, but like one triumphantly returning from one. And, although this all seems very absurd, when one compares it with modern war maxims and tactics, yet it was as successful as any general could have desired. The end gained proves whether the means were adequate or not.

The Lord redeemed his promise. Before they came in sight of the enemy the battle was won. "When they began to sing and to praise, the Lord set ambushments against the children of Ammon, Moab, and Mount Seir, which were come against Judah, and they were smitten. The conjunction of the two facts—the singing and the ambushments—shows how closely they were related, and how much the latter depended upon the former. It was as if the Lord was awaiting for that anthem of praise as for a signal to commence the battle.

What is meant by saying that "the Lord set ambushments against the children of Ammon," etc? It is reasonable to surmise that these tribes of the desert, naturally suspicious and distrustful of each other, and easily excited to hostility, in some way became mutually offended. It is probable that one tribe, or part of a tribe, on account of some real or fancied insult, hid themselves in some defile in order to take a treacherous revenge.

When Judah, with its vanguard of singers came to the conical hill, which is spoken of as a "watch-tower," and which is supposed to be the hill known as Jebel Fereidis, or Frank Mountain, they saw a wonderful sight. They looked toward the place where they expected to behold the hosts of the enemy, and, behold, the plain was full of dead bodies, so full that it seemed as if none had escaped! They stood still and beheld the salvation of the Lord. Instead of to a battle, they came to a place of booty. Their very trial proved to be their gain—as so often it does in the case of every Christian. Many a dreaded Jezreel has proved to be a valley of Berachah. Immense was the spoil they gathered. It took them three days to collect it all. "And on the fourth day they assembled themselves in the valley of Berachah (blessing); for there they blessed the Lord." The valley bears the name, but slightly changed to this day, it being now known as Beirukut. And the valley down which the remnant of the invaders fled is called Jehoshaphat in memory of the king who led his singing army there to behold the salvation of the Lord. In these names that still cling to the localities, we have strong corroborative evidence of the truth of the narrative we are studying. "There they blessed the Lord." Psalm 47 appears to have been composed with reference to, and may have been used on this occasion. Every victory, given of God, should be immediately and gratefully recognized. On the very place of victory, if possible, is the place to return thanks. He who is the most thankful for the aid he receives is never likely to call in vain for help when he is in great need of it.

Died.

In this city, Nov. 28, 1877, Aaron Washington, aged 47 years.

He was born in Montgomery county, Maryland, and came to New Orleans in 1850. He came with a heart full of love to God and continued to the end of life a faithful servant of the Master. He was leader of Class No. 11 in Wesley Chapel, and he also led the congregation in singing. With his last words he urged those about him to meet him in Heaven. —B.

National Repository,

A CHRISTIAN MAGAZINE.

Rev. D. CURRY, D.D., Editor.

Begins Jan'y, 1878. Try it one Year.

ONLY $3 A YEAR.

"The scope and character of the magazine shall be that of a first class religious and literary monthly, of the brightest character attainable, and pervaded, whether in its general or religious articles, by a thoroughly Christian spirit."—Order of the Committee.

Under these directions, it will be devoted to General and Religious Literature, Biographies and Travels, Criticisms and Art.

A sufficient number of the best writers for the press are employed to furnish all the variety in the several departments which their scope and importance require to make them rich and instructive.

The editorial department will be a feature of the magazine. Rev. Dr. Curry, both experienced and successful as an editor, brings to his duties the purpose of giving his whole strength to the work before him.

Each number will contain one or more articles illustrated with Wood Engravings, in the best style of this art, adding beauty and value to the pages.

The twelve numbers for the year will contain 1,152 pages of reading-matter, which, published in book form, would make not less than fifteen volumes, worth $1 50 each, and will comprise a variety that will be more interesting and valuable to the general reader than can be procured in books for many times the yearly price of the magazine.

We earnestly request you to take the National Repository for 1878—to give it one year's trial, and thereby determine for yourselves whether it is worthy of a place in the Christian home.

All Methodist pastors are authorized agents.

My Wife and Child.

[The following exquisite poem is from the pen of the famous "Stonewall" Jackson, written while he was in the United States Army in Mexico.]

The tattoo beats—the lights are gone,
The camp around in slumber lies;
The night with solemn pace moves on,
The shadows thicken o'er the skies;
But sleep my weary eyes hath flown,
And sad, uneasy thoughts arise.

I think of thee, O dearest one,
Whose love my earthly life hath blest—
Of thee and him—our baby son—
Who slumbers on thy gentle breast;
God of the tender, frail and lone,
Oh, guard the gentle sleepers' rest,

And hover, gently hover near,
To her whose watchful eye is wet—
To mother-wife—the double dear,
In whose young heart have freshly met
Two streams of love so deep and clear—
And cheer her drooping spirits yet.

Now, while she kneels before thy throne,
Oh, teach her, Ruler of the skies,
That while by thy behest alone
Earth's mightiest powers fall or rise
No tear is wept to thee unknown,
No hair is lost, no sparrow dies.

Jim Peters.

One day, about a year ago, the door of my sitting-room was thrown suddenly open, and the confident voice of Harvy introduced a stranger:

"Here's Jim Peters, mother."

I looked up, not a little surprised at the sight of a ragged, barefoot child.

Before I had time to say anything, Harry went on:

"He lives round in Blake's Court and hasn't any mother. I found him on the doorstep feeding birds."

My eyes rested on the child's face while my boy said this. It was a [illegible] little face, thin and colorless, not bold and vicious, but timid and having a look of patient suffering. Harry held him firmly by the hand with the air of one who bravely protects the weak.

"No mother?" said I, in tones of pity.

"No, ma'am; he hasn't any mother. Have you Jim?"

"No," answered the child.

"[illegible] dead ever so long; [illegible]?"

"[illegible] since last winter," he said [illegible] his eyes, into which I saw the tears coming, upon my face. My heart moved toward him, [illegible] he was because of his [illegible].

"[illegible] little lambs straying on the [illegible] and barren hills of life," said a [illegible] heart. And then I felt a tender compassion for the [illegible] child.

"Where do you live?" I asked.

"Round in Blake's Court," he replied.

"[illegible] with?"

"[illegible] Flint; but she doesn't want me."

"Why not?"

"[illegible] I'm nothing to her, she says, and she doesn't want the trouble of me." He tried to say this in a brave, don't-care sort of way, but his voice faltered and he dropped his eyes to the floor. How [illegible]!

"[illegible]" I could not help [illegible] over his pale face. [illegible] new to him, this [illegible].

"[illegible] little lambs." I [illegible] my heart saying [illegible] to love him— [illegible] for him. Poor little [illegible] of my own child, [illegible] dear to me, had [illegible] our door and [illegible] the love and care [illegible] to his heart. [illegible] and shut the [illegible] when I knew he [illegible] no home? [illegible], mother, [illegible] want. And [illegible] There's room [illegible] and we've [illegible] pleading [illegible] withstand [illegible] I said [illegible] When [illegible] dining-room [illegible] Jim Peters [illegible] known by [illegible] of them [illegible] a wonderful [illegible]

[illegible] give him into your care. Let me find him when I call my sheep by their names."

As I finished writing the last sentence a voice close to my ear said "Mother!" I turned and received a loving kiss from the lips of Jim. He often does this. I think, in the midst of his happy plays, memory takes him back to the suffering past, and then his grateful heart runs over and he tries to reward me with a loving kiss. I did not tell him to call me "Mother." At first he said it in a timid, hesitating way, and with such a pleading, half-scared look that I was touched and softened.

"She isn't your real mother," said Harvey, who happened to be near, "but then she's good and loves you ever so much."

"And I love her," answered Jim, with a great throb in his throat, hiding his face in my lap and clasping and kissing my hand. Since then he calls me "Mother;" and the God and father of us all has sent into my heart a mother's love for him, and I pray that he may be mine when I come to make up my jewels in heaven.—Happy Days.

Three Things.

Three things to love—courage, gentleness and affection.

Three things to admire—intellect, dignity and gracefullness.

Three things to hate—cruelty, arrogance and ingratitude.

Three things to delight in—beauty, frankness and freedom.

Three things to wish for—health, friends and a contented spirit.

Three things to like—cordiality, good humor and cheerfulness.

Three things to avoid—idleness, loquacity and flippant jesting.

Three things to cultivate—good books, good friends and good humor.

Three things to contend for—honor, country and friends.

Three things to govern—temper, tongue and conduct.

Three things to think off—life, death and eternity.

Bearing False Witness.

"What is the ninth commandment?" said a teacher to a boy in a Sunday Scool.

"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor."

"What is bearing false witness against thy neighbor?"

"It is telling a falsehood."

"That is partly true; and yet it is not exactly the right answer, because you may tell a falsehood about yourself."

Then turning to a very little girl, she said:

"It is when nobody did anything, and somebody went and told of it."

"That will do," said the teacher with a smile.

A five year old child left its seat in the Baptist church at Grand Rapids, Mich., walked up to the pulpit and up the steps, and stood beside Dr. Graves, the pastor, who turned toward the lad, saying: "What do you want, my little man?" The child innocently replied: "A glass of water." The pastor poured out a glass of water, the child drank it and left the platform. The incident created considerable merriment among the audience, which the child in returning to his seat noticed, and thinking the people were amused at some mistake of his, he made a bow to the pastor, and said, "Thank you, sir," and went to his seat, satisfied that he had not comted an impropriety.

Faith and hope are twin sisters, and hardly to be known apart; both alike beautiful, and very often mistaken each for the other. Yet there is a clear difference: while Hope expects, Faith inspects; while Hope is like Mary looking upward, Faith is like Martha, looking atward; the eye of Hope is high, and the eye of Faith is strong; Hope trembles in expectation, Faith is quiet in possession; Hope leaps out toward what will be, Faith holds on to what is; Hope idealizes, Faith realizes.—Anon.

An Irish couple, a few evenings since, at about nine o'clock, rang the door-bell of one of the Protestant parsons of our city. The door was opened by the clergyman, who, on inquiring what they wanted, was informed by Michael, that he and Bridget came to be married.

"But why," asked the parson, "don't you go to the priest?"

"And shure we did," said Michael, "and he told us to go the divil, and so we came to you."

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

U. S. Marshal's office. Harrisonburg. Va.

Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease, itching piles, had consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. I deem it my duty to give you this well merited testimonial of so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit. Very respectfully, WM. P. GROVE.

J. Q. A. Metcalf, (firm of Hanley & Metcalf,) Palmyra, Mo., writes:

January 1, 1877.

I received your letter, also the ointment for itching piles. I have used the ointment for three weeks, and am now perfectly cured. I feel very thankful that I am free from that terrible pest, the "itching piles."

To Consumptives AND Invalids.

Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry

seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered with night sweats, burning fever, pains and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.

HOME TESTIMONY.

DR. SWAYNE—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs; in short, it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to resume my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me, at the factory. EDWARD E. HAMSON, Engineer of Geo. Sweeney's Pottery, Ridge road, below Wallace, Phila.

Over twenty years have elapsed, and Mr. Hamson still remains a hearty man to this day—September 30, 1877.

PHYSICIANS RECOMMEND IT.

Dr. Thos. J. B. Rhoads, Boyertown, Berks Co. Pa., writes: "Your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry I esteem very highly; have been selling and recommending it to my patients for many years, and it always proves efficacious in obstinate coughs, bronchial and asthmatical affections. It has made some remarkable cures in this section, and I consider it the best remedy with which I am acquainted."

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speok of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

Memory's Hall.

Oh! a strange old castle is Memory's Hall,
With its towers and turrets sublime;
For its portals are guarded by spectres tall—
The spectres of years, that come at the call,
Of [illegible] that live in that clime.

It stands in the country of "Long Ago,"
By the side of the river of Time,
Whose waters surge on with an endless flow,
And sing a song as they gently go,
[illegible] the vesper chime.

To the hall of this castle we often go,
For [illegible] buried our treasures there;
There are locks of beauty, and hands of [illegible]
[illegible] clasped long years ago
And tresses of golden hair.

Smiles [illegible] have faded, and joys now dead,
[illegible] we once thought fair,
And [illegible] that encircled some loved one's [illegible]
Words of tenderness once been said,
And [illegible] that she used to wear.

Echoes of voices that used to call,
Fall on the tremulous air;
And [illegible] wall,
[illegible] from the shadowy past recall,
While we stand enchanted there.

The [illegible] departs, and the past returns,
[illegible] o'er its dusty floor;
And [illegible] overflowing with sadness, [illegible]
And the soul within us with wildness yearns,
For [illegible] things we loved of yore.

The Word Sufficient.

CONCLUSION OF A SERMON BY G. F. KET[illegible], D. D., IN THE SOMMERFIELD M. E. CHURCH, BROOKLYN.

[illegible] Moses and the prophets, [illegible] will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead.—Luke xvi: 31.

[illegible] parable which I [illegible], and of which [illegible] part, is intended to [illegible] truth of the an[illegible] of the Word of God [illegible] Heaven, and that [illegible] proofs or demon[illegible] add to their author[illegible] of them. The [illegible] appeal to the [illegible] of man. [illegible] can pos[illegible] appeals more [illegible] Elijah, as [illegible] did not dis[illegible], in the earth[illegible] when he heard [illegible] he wrapped his [illegible] mantle and went forth [illegible] with God. What [illegible] the super[illegible] do, the [illegible] effected. All [illegible] the still [illegible] to his heart [illegible] of truth is [illegible]. This is what [illegible] to mean. [illegible] more com[illegible] suppose that [illegible] more in[illegible] phenomena [illegible] convictions of [illegible] ence is [illegible] natural vision [illegible] as [illegible] believe. [illegible] by that [illegible] tion from the other world, it establishes no system of truth, and hence affects men little one way or the other. Your life is affected by the truths that lie in your understanding, and no rehersal of these truths, though it be by one who his risen from the dead, can make you more than believe them. Now, the Bible is full of these spiritual truths essential to our salvation, and they are brought out over and over again. They cannot be told us more plainly. They appeal to the conscience, as does all religious truth—they have their roots there. No apparition of ghosts and goblins can make them more certain. If truth, backed by conscience and the reason, and brought to us on every page of the Bible and by every ringing of the church bells, leaves us unaffected, the enunciation of the same truth by one from the dead will also leave us unaffected. The Jews who witnessed the resurrection of Lazarus were but aroused the more to push Christ to death, and also Lazarus for participation in the deception.

But let us turn to something more practical. By a ghost we mean the spirit of man stripped of its eathly appendages—without the material and visible conditions which has distinguished his appearance among men. Now, it is not necessary for man to go out of the world to realize this condition. The world is full of such ghosts. They are coming forth out of the depths of their ruin, their woe, and talking to us, but who heeds them? Let us look at a few of these ghosts.

1. See the ruined men—men of society—stripped of everything that marked them among men. They are but ghosts stalking among us. They talk to us of the folly, the vanity of riches, of the bitterness that comes with ill-gotten gains. They speak of the torment at the end of every such course. Who listens to these gibbering ghosts? Is there one man in a thousand who is turned from his course by what they say?

2. Then there are the ghosts of those who have been destroyed by intemperance. Oh, what hideous wrecks, ghosts—what testimony they bear! They are dead, yet they speak, but who listens? The young man sees, listens, and with a laugh turns to his glass.

3. So is it with the horrible evil of licentiousness. We see all around us the haggard ghosts of men who were once respectable, possessed of all that gives grace and symmetry and manhood to men, now but a mass of putrid rottenness. These hideous ghosts, too, tell their warning in vain in the ear of men. If one will not hear these who come forth from these dens of hell, neither will they be persuaded. He reasons from a wrong principle, from a false knowledge of human nature, who asserts that men should be convinced by the testimony of the dead.

4. Look at the criminal classes. As we pass up the East River we see the abode of the ghosts of hundreds of men—men there on that Plutonean shore, stripped of all that makes men men. Now, who is deterred from crime by sailing up the East River, and looking upon the prisoners on Blackwell's Island? Indeed it has been declared by those who have carefully studied the subject, that men are made worse by observing the punishment of criminals. Christ continually acted upon this knowledge of human nature. When asked for a sign, something occult, He refused, saying no sign but that of Jonah should be given. The story of Jonah teaches simple obedience.

In conclusion. The word is sufficient. 1. In its duties—a perfect rule of life. 2. In its motives. Its teachings converge into the noblest motives, etc. 3. Its promises, which are unto eternal life.—Metropolitan Pulpit.

Letter from Florida.

BY REV. JAMES MITCHELL.

In company with Bishop Scott, we reached Jacksonville, Florida, on the morning of Tuesday, January 1, 1878. After forcing our way through as boisterous a band of porters as ever beset helpless travelers, we reached Dr. Webster's carriage, drove off, and soon found ourselves in the midst of the Doctor's kind and hospitable family, enjoying the [illegible] of a New England home transplanted into this Southern [illegible] with all the fire of [illegible] in St. Augustine, so on Wednesday we took boat for Tocoi, the point on the St. John's River where we take rail for that ancient city. After a run of three hours up that remarkable river that seems to run up hill for 300 miles, for all our great streams run in a southerly direction, the St. John runs from south to north, we reached Tocoi at noon. We observed as we came up that the banks of the river are dotted here and there at wide intervals with settlements and handsome plantations, of which some are orange-groves, but some of the lands under these attractive groves will not bear too close inspection; there is too much sand and swamp water in the landscape.

At Tocoi we took rail and after an hour's run of fifteen miles we entered the oldest European town in North America. It is located on the Atlantic coast; was settled by a Spanish adventurer named Menendez, who, having occupied it for a time and secured himself and followers by an intrenched camp, being actuated by the diabolical spirit of his country, his age and Church, he planned and executed the destruction of a settlement of French Protestants or Huguenots who had settled near the mouth of the St. John's and built Fort Caroline. In that age of the St. Bartholomew massacre, we may expect such "acts of faith" to take place in the new world; so this general swept from the face of the earth, men, women and children; thus Spain and Rome stamped the early lights of this section of the new world in blood.

This blood-stained servant of Rome gave the name of St. Augustine to his new camp, and proceeded to baptize creeks, rivers, roads and streets with the names of saints; these meet you everywhere. The best streets of this ancient town are but fifteen feet wide, the cross-streets are from 8 to 10 feet wide. Its present population is about 2,200, at which figure it has stood for near 100 years. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop; its old Cathedral was built in 1793—an ungainly structure, with its front gable wall rising above the roof, and pierced by four holes, in each one of which hangs a bell; these, in connection with a clock-face, form a cross. This structure fronts on the little "plaza" or public square that contains about one acre. The door being open, we entered and found the usual adornments of the idol temples of Rome, the high altar, side altars, and pictures to mark the stations where devout worshippers must kneel.

Brother Grant, the minister in charge of our colored Church in St. Augustine, told us that the new bishop, who had recently been appointed, had obliterated the pictures of hell, purgatory, etc., that had for many years been painted on the walls of the old Church, on the ground that they were more theatrical than Christian. Bishop Scott remarked that if he would go just a little further and remove the images and image worship we would give him a vote of thanks.

Passing from the plaza we went to the barracks, once the convent of St. Francis, to call on General Dent, the commander of the post, with whom we had a slight acquaintance, and without whose permission we could not enter Fort Marion. Gen. Dent is the brother-in-law of Gen. Grant. He received the Bishop with much cordiality, referring to his early Oregon acquaintance, with the Bishop, who had visited that distant section of our country some three times, Gen. Dent then being on duty in the extreme Northwest.

He remarked that he dwelt in the oldest house in the United States, once the home of Spanish monks. He had occasion to cut a new front door through the thick wall of coquina, out of which all these old structures are built. This coquina is a conglomerate of small shells cemented together, that can be easily cut, but it becomes harder with exposure to the weather; but to return to the door-cutting operation of the General: His workmen came upon a small hole in the wall that had been constructed as a secretary for the monk, whose cell was inclosed thereby. It had been carefully closed up and was unseen by the modern world for generations past, but its careful concealment shows the full development of the faculty of secrecy for which the regular monastic orders of Rome are remarkable, even in insignificant [illegible]. The contents of this Spanish Padre's secretary and library are worthy of note, however. It contained a rosary or string of beads wherewith to count off the mechanical prayers—an ancient tobacco pipe—and last, though not least, a pack of cards; such were the mementoes of the ancient piety and good works of the Padre who dwelt there.

After an introduction to the General's family, and the receipt of a card to the commanding officer of the Fort, we took the line of travel that brought us near several convent buildings, the most expensive of which is a new and large building of coquina stone.

We likewise examined a lot that belongs to our Church, worth from ten to twelve hundred dollars. The old church on St George street, where our colored people worship, is a well-located house, on a fine lot, in the heart of the town. This property should come to us under the agreement at Cape May; it is one of the insignificant properties that we get for the sacrifice we made in Virginia and on the border generally. So soon as the title is fully conveyed to us by the action of the Florida Annual Conference of the Church South, we should expend some attention on this lot and house, and place the imprint of the new age thereon.

We reached the Fort by a walk along the water wall, a fine piece of masonry constructed by the United States Government, that protects Bay Street from being washed away. It is a mile long and about three feet wide. On reaching the entrance of the old Fort, called in Spanish times, "St Marco," (when it changed owners in 1821 it received its present name "Fort Marion,") we found the gate guarded by a fullblooded Indian sentinel, in the United States uniform, with gun on shoulder, crowned with bayonet; he did not unerstand one word we uttered, and would not let us pass. Here was a dilemma; the deep colored son of Shem had at last become master of the situation. We asked for Cap't. Pratt, but he was not in the Fort. We showed our card from the General, reading, "Please admit Bishop Scott and party to the Fort, and show him all to be seen;" but Mr. Indian cared not for bits of finely printed paper; so we turned away, when an intelligent Irish sergeant came to our relief, went into his house built on the outside of the Fort, brought out three large candles, and taking us in charge we followed him into the old structure that covers about one acre of ground.

It is built of coquina stone taken from Anastasia Island, that lies along the front of the town as a break-water. It is the oldest fortification on the Western continent. It is said to have been commenced as early as 1520, and was built by the enforced labor of conscript Indians. It is a well-preserved and fine specimen of the medieval fortification; pierced for one hundred guns on wall and in casement; it is now occupied by some sixty Indians—some of them prisoners, but all under instructions. We found there ladies hard at work instructing these sons of Shem.

God's Guide for Man's Faith and Practice.*

BY A. J. KYNETT, D. D.

Is it really? Why not? "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." I. Tim. 3, 16. "The holy Scriptures contain all things necessary to salvation." V. Art. of Religion. "His written word is the only rule, and the sufficient rule, both of our faith and practice." General Rules. The Scriptures are certainly "God's guide for man's faith and practice." But they were written by many hands, at widely separated intervals, extending through a period of sixteen hundred years, in the form of history, of precept, of poetry, of prophecy.

An ever-changing kaleidoscope, yet all inspired by the one Divine Author, the eternal spirit of God, and together constitute a revelation to man of all that it is necessary he should believe and do in order to salvation. When any questions arise as to any particular matter of faith or practice, how are we to know what is the "only rule, and sufficient rule," concerning it? Certainly by collating what God has said about it, and as nearly as may be, in the order in which he said it. This done, we cannot fail to have "God's guide" concerning it; and so of all questions on all matters of faith and practice involving human duty and destiny. Such are the simple principles that guided an able minister of the Gospel through a long and laborious life, in the study and exposition of the Word of God, and the plan and results of his studies, revised by his son, in pursuance of his last will and testament, are now given to the Church in convenient form, in the volume bearing the above suggestive and descriptive title.

Intimate acquaintance and relationship with the author, during the latter part of his life, and frequent conversations with him concerning this work, when in course of preparation, awakened an interest in it, which has led to a careful examination of it since its publication. The author's ideal may not be fully realized, but this work has decided advantages for all practical purposes over every other collection of the Scriptures of which I have any knowledge—advantages which flow naturally out of the simple principles on which it is constructed. The arrangement of topics is in simple and logical order, somewhat after the plan of Binney's Theological Compend, which has always seemed to me to be indispensable as an aid to every preacher and Sunday school teacher. Those topics comprehend the whole field of faith and practice. Father Gilruth used to say, with great emphasis, that there is not a member of the body, nor a faculty of the mind, nor a relation in life, for the regulation of which there is not full direction in the Word of God.

The chronology of the various texts indicated on the margin, and their arrangement in consecutive order is of great value for the careful study of the subject treated. Those who have heard Father Gilruth preach, in the latter part of his ministry, will remember how he almost invariably fixed in the opening of his sermon the chronology of the text, and how frequently it was like the rising of the sun upon a hitherto obscure landscape. In the arrangement of the texts in topical and chronological order, he often remarked the singular fact that the later texts always added something important to the statements of those which preceded, so that there is not only agreement and cumulation of testimony, but a gradual unfolding of revelation on all subjects of which the Bible treats. Is not this a marvelous proof that all is inspired by the one Eternal Spirit?

If such a collection of the Scriptures as we have here be not important to a clear, thorough, practical knowledge of Divine revelation, then a clear, vigorous mind, whose honesty was never questioned, was under an illusion for more than forty years of careful study of the Bible, with all the helps he could command.

Having used this "Guide" for some months in the study of the Bible, in the preparation of sermons, and in topical readings in family worship, and having often thanked others for directing me to the best helps in doing my work, I commend this book to all who earnestly desire to know the will of God and do it.

Some Mission Paragraphs.

The aggregate force in the Protestant foreign mission fields is about five thousand missionaries, and twelve thousand native pastors, catechists and teachers. The actual communicants are over five hundred thousand, and a million and a quarter of Pagans have become nominal Christians. The members in mission churches are geographically distributed as follows:

Africa, including Madagascar	130,000
Europa, including Scandinavia and Germany	53,500
Asia	120,000
Polynesia	70,000
America, North and South	21,500
West Indies	105,000
Total	500,000

One of the largest Christian congregations in the world, numbering some four thousand five hundred members, is in the Sandwich Islands. It is in the memory of living men that the population represented by this church were cannibals. Madagascar has two hundred thousand professed Christians, against a few persecuted, scattered converts a score of years since. The Fiji Islands contain thirty thousand Christians, giving fifteen thousand dollars a year to religious objects. Fifty years ago they were savages. In China Christian missions have been established in forty walled cities and three hundred and sixty villages. The ratio of increase in the China missions, may be seen by the following:

	1853.	1868.	1864.	1868.
Stations	26	108	130	806
Native preachers	59	141	170	365
Native Christians	351	1,974	2,607	5,743

On the west coast of Africa there are a hundred organized congregations. Sixty years ago there was not a solitary native Christian in Polynesia; now more than three hundred islands of Southern and Eastern Polynesia have abandoned idolatry. Prof. Griffis says that seven years ago there was not one native Christian church nor ten native Christians in Japan. Now there are many native churches and five hundred native Christians. Then there were no Sabbath school scholars; now there are three thousand. In India alone there are one hundred and fifty thousand pupils in mission schools. Forty years ago the Fijians fed on human flesh. now forty thousand of their children are in Sunday schools. There are now fifty thousand regular attendants at the evangelical churches of Italy. Previous to 1848 there was not one. Missions have had a rapid growth even when compared with that of the churches in the age of miracles. In seventy years after the first preaching of the apostles, it has been estimated that there were a hundred thousand Christians in all the world. In India seventy years after Carey's first baptism of a native convert, there were in India and British Burmah alone seventy-three thousand native Christian communicants and a nominal Christian population of over three hundred thousand.

"Do your gods love you?" asked a missionary of some Indians. "The gods never think of loving," was the cheerless reply. The missionary repeated the sixteenth verse of the third chapter of St. John's Gospel: "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." "Read it again," asked the arrested Pagan, "that is large light—read it again." A third time the blessed words were repeated, and with the emphatic response; "That is true; I feel it."

"From Greenland's Icy Mountains."

"It does not necessarily take a life time to accomplish immortality. A brave act done in a moment, a courageous word spoken at the fitting time, a few lines which can be written on a sheet of note-paper, may give one a deathless name. Such was the case with Reginald Heber, known far and wide, wherever the Christian religion has penetrated, by his unequalled missionary hymn, 'From Greenland Icy Mountains.' These line, so dear to every heart, so certain to live, while a benighted man remains to whom Christ's story has not yet been wafted, were written in a parlor, with conversation going on around its author, and in a few minutes' time.

"Reginald Heber, then thirty-five years old, was visiting his father-in-law, Dr. Shipley, in Wrexham, having left his own charge at Hodnet a short time in order to deliver some lectures in Dr. Shipley's church. Half a dozen friends were gathered in the little rectory parlor one Saturday afternoon, when Dr. Shipley turned to Heber, knowing the ease with which he composed, and asked him if he could not write some missionary lines for his church to sing the next morning, as he was going to preach upon the subject of Missions. This was not very long notice to give to a man to achieve the distinguishing work of his life, and in the few moments which followed, Heber builed better than he knew. Retiring to a corner of the room, he wrote three verses of his hymn, and returning read them to his companions, only altering the one word, savage, to heathen in the second verse.

"'There, there,' said Dr. Shipley, 'that will do very well.' But Heber, replying that the sense was not quite complete, retired for a few moments, and then returned with the glorious bugle-blast of the fourth verse:

"Waft, waft, ye winds, his story.
And you, ye waters, roll,
Till like a sea of glory
It spreads from pole to pole;
Till o'er our ransomed nature
The Lamb for sinners slain,
Redeemer, King, Creator,
In bliss returns to reign. Amen"

"It was printed that evening and sung the next morning by the people of Wrexham church."

What Washington Didn't Know.

We don't like to be irreverent, but would like to ask, What did our forefathers know? What, for instance, did George Washington know? He never saw a steamboat; he never saw a fast mail-train; he never held his ear to a telephone; he never sat for his picture in a photograph gallery; he never received a telegraph dispatch; he never sighted a Krupp gun; he never listened to the "fiz" of an electric pen; he never saw a pretty girl run a sewing machine; he never saw a self-propelling engine go down the street to a fire; he never heard of evolution; he never took laughing gas; he never had a set of store teeth; he never attended an International Exposition; he never owned a bonanza mine; he never knew "Old Probs;" he—but why go on? No; when he took an excursion it was on a flatboat. When he went off on a train it was on a mule train. When he wanted to talk to a man in Milwaukee he had to go there. When he had his picture taken it was done in profile with a piece of black paper and a pair of shears. When he got the returns from back counties they had to be brought in by a man with an ox cart. When he took aim at the enemy he had to trust to a crooked barreled old flint-lock. When he wrote it was with a goose-quill. When he had anything to mend his grandmother did it with a darning needle. When he went to a fire he stood in a line and passed buckets. When he looked at a clam he never dreamed it was any relation of his. When he went to a concert he heard a cracked fiddle and an insane clarionet. When he had a tooth pulled he sat down and never left off yelling. When he got out of teeth he mummed his victuals. When he wanted an international show he sent for Lafayette and ordered his friends up from Old Virginia with the specimen carefully labeled in bottles. When he once got hold of a nugget of gold from an Indian chief he felt rich. When he wanted to know anything about the weather he consulted the ground-hog or goose-bone. When—but why go on? What did such a man know? Who was he, anyway?—Washington Union.

Mind Your P's.

A writer puts a great deal of good sense and a good many p's, in a small space, in the following:

Persons who patronize papers should pay promptly, for the pecuniary prospects of the press have peculiar power in pushing forward public prosperity. If the printer is paid promptly, and his pocket-book kept plethoric by prompt paying patrons, he puts his pen to paper in peace; he paints his pictures of passing events in more pleasant colors, and the perusal of his paper is of more pleasure to his people. Past, this piece of proverbial philosophy in some place where all persons can perceive it. Be pleased, also, to ponder upon it thyself patiently and perseveringly and profitably, and persistently practise its precepts perpetually.

The time and manner of electing a Pope are of paramount interest just now, when the death of Pius IX is daily expected. In the early ages the Pope was elected by the Bishops and clergy of the Roman province; but for several centuries the election has been by the College of Cardinals, which consists of three orders—viz., six cardinal Bishops, who are the titular Bishops of the Roman province and who hold the first rank in the College, and, if it be full, sixty-four cardinal priests and deacons. Every cardinal has a right to a vote for Pope; but no summons are issued for the conclave. All who are in Rome when the conclave is held, which is ten days after the death of the incumbent, may attend and take part in the election. The cardinals who attend the conclave are held close prisoners until the new Pope is chosen. The windows and doors of the Vatican are walled up, and all sources of communciation from outside cut off, except for the purpose of passing in food. In the interim the cardinal chamberlain administers the affairs of the Holy See.—Independent.

Colored Cadet Minnie, of New York, has withdrawn from the United States Military Academy on account of the coarse treatment he received. Of the three hundred white cadets in the institution there were but three or four that would speak to a colored student outside of official communication. The New York Tribune publishes an exposure of the Colorado stone man, which had been on exhibition as the petrified remains of a human being of heroic size. The "man" was made in Elkland, Pennsylvania, by George Hull, the maker of the Cardiff Giant. The figure was composed of ground stone, ground bones, clay, plaster, blood, eggs and other materials, which were molded into proper shape and baked in a kiln. It is said Hull spent $10,000 or $12,000 in this scheme. P. T. Barnum was at the bottom of the fraud.

A Washington dispatch of the 27th ult., says: The House committee on revision of the laws regulating the counting of the votes for President and Vice-President sub-divided its work to-day. One sub-committee is to examine the subject of the method of electing, another the mode of counting the electoral votes, and the third is charged with the consideration of the subject of the official tenure of the president and vice-president. The committee is diligently at work, and, though not expected to act concurrently with the similar committee of the Senate there are frequent and free consultations between the two.

Steadily Advancing.

We mean the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States. We have lately traveled several thousand miles visiting our Southern Conferences, and on returning we contemplate with pleasure the manifestations of growing strength we witnessed in every Conference.

In every Conference there are a large number of earnest, well qualified men from among our own people coming to the front. In the organization of our work in the South directly after the war the Church was shut up to the necessity of using whatever material she could command. Tens of thousands of people flocked to her standard without shepherds, money, social standing, or intellectual culture. This was specially true of the colored people, and in many places was also true of the white people. In collecting and organizing such masses of members, there must of necessity have been imperfect organizations to begin with, and to provide the hundred pastors demanded at once in almost every State, gave no time for preparation or even very careful selection. Twelve years have served to work a wonderful revolution. Many who were in the work as at first organized are still honored workmen among their brethren, but there has also been a great change in the personnel of every Conference. Our schools have given at least a score of men in every Southern Conference. From the ranks of the people, as they have advanced, have come strong and devoted young men full of zeal and strength for the Master. The decorum of our brethren at Conference, their gentlemanly appearance and dignified bearing in conducting business have called forth very favorable remarks from visitors at every session.

At the seat of every Conference we visited there were many indications of improved estimate of our Church work on the part of the citizens of the towns and cities. There were more visitors, more kind words, and in some cases special efforts made by leading citizens to express by acts and words their appreciation of our work. At Oxford, Mississippi, Judge Hill, of the United States Circuit Court, called on Bishop Harris and formally welcomed him to the city. In Jefferson, Texas, Bishop Foster received marked attention from leading citizens, and not a few visited the Conference and expressed gratification at what they saw and heard. It is surprising how much ignorance yet prevails concerning our Church in the South, and it would be an easy task to collect at every Conference facts and incidents illustrating a strong spirit of opposition. In many cases these unpleasant incidents would be found to have their inspiration from sources high in authority and influence in sister Churches. But it will neither wipe out these incidents that have occurred nor, perhaps, help to lessen the number yet to be, to publish them broadcast. It is enough for us to say and rejoice in the fact, that these exhibitions of that intolerance which yet characterizes the South are growing less frequent year by year. People not living in the South cannot appreciate the wonderful revolution caused by the war, the abolition of slavery, and the reconstruction of the Southern States. It was a revolution which involved every grade of society, revolutionizing the social, commercial and industrial relations of the whole people. These relations were determined by slavery, and underlying each was all the fervor, and in most cases the fact of religious conviction. Time is an essential element in all reforms among all people. Twelve years have done wonderful things in the South. So far as our own work in the South is concerned we have only to do our duty, patiently and thoroughly. The result is sure.

A great impetus was given to our work in the South by the discussions and decisions of the General Missionary Committee which met in New York in November. There has been and still is a strong and persistent determination on the part of a majority of the leaders of the M. E. Church, South, to interpret the Cape May Commission as [illegible] that the M. E. Church is [illegible] the South. The exact plans [illegible] which this was to be accomplished [illegible] with great con[illegible] and discussed upon [illegible]. The sentiment that [illegible] the case was, and [illegible] talked among [illegible] this sentiment [illegible] own [illegible] Committee [illegible] maintain and prosecute it this work as part and parcel of herself.

In the matter of building churches and parsonages, and in all the essential work of the church year by year there is a steady advance in all our Southern Conferences.

Why Not Believe There is a Hell ?

The usual argument, and perhaps the strongest one, against the doctrine of the endless punishment of the finally unrepentent is, that such a doctrine is forbidden by the goodness of a God. It is said God is too good to have a hell anywhere in his universe. The Northern Christian Advocate in an editorial, shows the inconsistency of this view. We quote at length as follows:

1. It is inconsistent with what we see of the government of God in this world. Everywhere we meet with the suffering which God permits. We may study the love of God from what we know of love in ourselves, but still what our love would do His love often refuses to do. The suffering that the love of father or mother, of brother or sister, longs and labors painfully and in vain to relieve, the Almighty Father does not relieve. Is not this a mystery? Can divine love be in its nature and promptings different from pure disinterested human love? Is God indifferent where we are full of pity and compassion? It is true we are taught to believe that God compensates His children for their afflictions, but can we conclude that He is so limited in power that He must leave good dependent on evil, and condition the happiness and well-being of His own children on suffering? May we not say, "It is impossible to believe that He would do it!" This, perhaps, we would say, were it not for the fact that He has done it. And then, observe the suffering which is the immediate result of sin. We may say that this suffering is penal; that it is reformatory in its design. But is it the only possible mode of reformation? And does it always reform? The well known fact is that sin, and the suffering resulting from it, often continue to increase together, and mutually aid each other. No form of suffering which sin is known to produce in this life—not even remorse—is always or even ordinarily effective for the purpose of reformation. In the presence of these facts can we reasonably assume that God will not permit suffering in the future world, or that He will cause it to end in the purification of the sufferer? The great problem which meets us is the old one of the existence of evil—of sin and misery—anywhere under the Government of God. Until we can solve this problem for this world, it is not wise to attempt to solve it for the world to come.

2. It is inconsistent with what we know of ourselves. We do not forget that the objection we are answering derives its force confessedly from the teachings of our own moral nature. But the teachings of our moral nature are just as authoritative concerning ourselves as concerning God. In these two respects they should be in harmony; and if our moral sense compels us to believe that God will not permit a soul to suffer eternally, then there ought to be in our moral experiences; in the manifestation of our moral sensibilities and powers; yea, in the very pangs of our remorse, some promise or sign of ultimate and eternal bliss. But what are the facts? When conscience condemns us do we not seem simply to be alive to the stern realities of our character? Is there anything in these realities to suggest that they will change? Character is retrospective; in our own deeds we have made a record. Conscience reads this record; but as it reads it, is there anything to indicate that the letters, syllables and words will ever change so that conscience will ultimately read something else? And will conscience ever be less able to read the record correctly than at present? It may indeed consent for a time that the record shall be put out of sight, but it warns us that the same may be called for again. And will that call not be made when in the spirit world the diversions of earthly scenes have passed, and things spiritual and moral alone engage the attention? Here conscience always calls for the record in the Divine presence. When we stand before God will it not demand that the book shall be opened? Remorse sometimes sleeps, but we know that it wakes again. Will it not wake in the future world? It is true that in this world we find refuge—refuge from ourselves, not refuge from God—in the Atonement, but when we analyze our faith we find that the assurance which we derive from the Atonement respects the honor which it does to a law under which we now live. If we question our conscience as to what will be our experience, if we despise this Atonement during the period in which the law which it honors may also be honored by our faith in Christ, what answer will we receive? Does it not warn us of the "sorer punishment," of which he "shall be thought worthy who hath trampled under foot the Son of God?" We are unable to understand how any one who carefully analyzes his moral experience should meet with even a suggestion of the impossibility of endless punishment, or of any attribute in the perfect moral nature of the Almighty which must of necessity prevent such punishment. God has undoubtedly satisfied the demands of His own love-nature in the gift of His Son, but if even this gift is despised, what then? What does our moral sense teach us?

3. It is inconsistent with what every believer in the Bible must admit respecting its teachings. It is now generally admitted, even by those who deny that the Bible teaches the endlessness of future punishment, that it requires us to believe that the finally impenitent do suffer punishment, for a longer or shorter time, beyond the grave. This being admitted, the figures—the fearful figures, but not literal descriptions—by which hell is represented, must be regarded as some indication of the intensity of the sufferings of the lost. Does God permit what, it must be conceded, the Bible reveals?—what becomes, then, of what some regard as the moral impossibility of believing that God will punish eternally. If Infinite Love can inflict suffering upon a disembodied spirit, is it for us to say how long that spirit shall suffer, or that its sufferings shall not be endless? If our "moral sense" is to waive its objection sufficiently to admit the truth of the Bible with reference to the fact of future punishment, it has only to be consistent and waive its objection to the equally plain declarations of Scripture respecting the duration of that punishment.

Mexican Mission of the M. E. Church South.

Our Southern Methodist brethren held a farewell missionary meeting in Carondelet street Church in this city last Thursday night in honor of the departure of Rev. W. M. Paterson and a young native Mexican preacher, Rev. F. D. Villegas, for Mexico. Bishop Keener, and others spoke, and $500,00 were raised for Mexico. Bishop Keener, brothers Patterson and Villegas left for Mexico on the first instant. May the blessing of God go with them. Bishop Keener in the New Orleans Advocate in speaking of the missions of his Church in Mexico says, very properly we think:

The presence of the Methodist Episcopal Church in a mission-field is to us no more than the presence of Baptists, Presbyterians or Episcopalians. Each of these missions is in fact a help to the other; for there is room enough for every branch of the church of Christ; and behind each one is the supporting column of the church at home. The city of Mexico, besides being the headquarters of every important movement in the State, is a large city, and we might as well yield New Orleans to one church as that field. So, too, the large cities of Leon, Guanajuato, Guadalahara and Puebla. Dr. Riley occupied many of these places first, which have since become points of missionary enterprise for the Presbyterian, Congregational and Methodist Episcopal Churches.

Public Adultery in Louisiana.

Mr. Coulton, in the Louisiana House of Representatives, has introduced a bill defining what public adultery is and fixing penalties upon those guilty of it. The bill was advocated by Mr. Warmoth and others, but was postponed until March 4th, which is equivolent to its total defeat, as in the last hours of the session it will be impossible to consider it, or if passed in the House, to get it to the Senate. Mr. Jonas, a leading Representative from this city, made an astounding remark when opposing the bill. He said that if the bill became a law it would indict from two to three hundred leading men in every parish of the State. Such a remark from so good an authority is a dreadful comment upon the moral character of a large proportion of the leading men of this State. And let it be remembered 'tis no "Northern-Radical-slander" upon Louisiana. It comes from one of the most respected representatives of the best element of the Democratic party in this city.

Mississippi will receive no money from the Peabody School Fund this year. The income derived from the Fund has fallen off, and such aid as the trustees have to give they will render "to the Southern States that are doing more for their schools than Mississippi, and have received less."

Eadsport's First Service.

Sabbath, January 27th, 1878, found the writer at Eadsport, La., the object being to conduct the first religious service on the far-famed South Pass of the Mississippi. By previous invitation we were informed of the exceeding great desire on the part of the friends of morality and order, to initiate a movement of a religious character, so we received a cordial greeting on our arrival on Saturday night; such a greeting as assured us that we were welcome. Sabbath came, a lively morning, and with it, we trust, the dawing of a brighter day spiritually for this new field of operation.

Eadsport is a temperance village and reflects great credit on its founders in this respect. We saw no drunken men to disturb the quiet of the Sabbath morning. The hour of service came, and about thirty persons assembled to hold the first religious service in Eadsport. We announced and sung that old hymn, "All hail the power of Jesus' name," and after prayer and a lesson from Mark's Gospel, 10th chapter, we administered the right of baptism to two infant daughters of Mr. T. B. Flynn, the first children baptized in Eadsport. We chose for our subject "The Savior's commendation and condemnation," Matt. xxiii: 23, and tried to elucidate the thought that while there is something good in any man, none can be saved except as they are saved through Jesus Christ. We arranged to give the people here the benefit of religious service bi-weekly. We made many delightful acquaintanceships among whom we may mention Col. Andrews, Mr. Carthell, W. Wright, Esq., and lady, and Bro. Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt, who, by the way, are the parents of the first child born in Eadsport, Messrs. Morton, Webb, Parmalee, and the family of E. H. Flynn, Esq., and others too numerous to mention. We pray that the services thus happily inaugurated may be a blessing to the people of Eadsport, as well as to the passing stranger. Yours in Jesus,

T. EDWARD MADDEN.

Good News from Dallas, Texas.

Rev. L. R. Carhart writes us from Fort Elliott, Texas:

At our late conference—Austin, (Foster)—I was made pastor at Sherman, a city of 10,000, in North Texas, and also presiding elder of the "Denison District," covering a space equal to one of our largest conferences. I am now exploring my diocese, and mapping out the work. At Sherman we have within the past six months organized our work, and have now forty-three on roll, forty-five in Sunday-school, and the foundation of a new church (40x75, and costing $5,000) laid, and in ninty days it will be dedicated, giving us nine months in which to score a twelve months' race and results. The southern Methodist Church is strong in numbers at Sherman, but cannot do our work. We expect to record the quickest Church enterprise yet heard from.

We are preaching in the Opera House every Sabbath, and hold our Sunday-school their also. During my absence Rev. S. S. Steele, a princely superintendent of church architecture, has charge of the work, and will have the house inclosed by the time of our return. Mrs Carhart has charge of the Sunday-school, and oversight of pastoral work. So goes the battle.

Missionary Board Meeting.

At the meeting of the Board of Managers of the Missionary Society, on Tuesday, January 15th, Rev. D. A. Wise, D.D. presiding, the Treasurer reported the net receipts of the month past at $5,338 17, the smallness of the sum being accounted for by the fact of no conferences at this season of the year. These are periods when the churches are gathering for future remittances. The net cash indebtedness of the Society is $137,225 34 on Dec. 31st against $122,925 01 a month previous. This indicates the need that Pastors and Sunday-schools should comply with the request of the Board and make monthly or quarterly remittances to the Treasurer and take his receipt as a voucher to Conference, instead of the cash. The sum in the hands of any one, pastor or charge, may not seem considerable, but many a "nickle makes a muckle" and by the present process of retaining all funds till Conference, the Treasurer has to make his remittances beforehand and gets them behindhand. Many a dollar of interest money would be saved by compliance with this request for prompt and frequent remittances from the charges. The Treasurer's bills do not come along as spasmodically, or rather at such long periods as the Church collections.

Among the interesting business statements of this meeting of the Board was the intelligence communicated by General Fisk about our Indian Agents. General F. is a member of this Board and of the Committee of the Board which has to do with these agents. He is also a member of the Indian Commission of the Government. While in Washington last week, observing that some newspapers were charging the Indian Agent with fraud, he called on the Department to know how far any of the Agents nominated by the Methodist Episcopal Mission Board, were held as blameworth in the Department. He was referred to a clerk whose business it is to register everything known or rumored of a character derogatory to Indian Agents. He asked this clerk to give him the names of any Agents nominated by the M. E. Missionary Board against whose name there was nothing entered. The clerk wrote the names of eleven out of fourteen Agents, as being wholly free of any intimation of an unsatisfactory character, and all that was against the other three, was merely newspaper reports.

Rev. W. Kelynack, of Australia, was introduced and addressed the Board. Mr. K. is ex-editor of The Wesleyan Record, of Australia, but now connected with the educational interests of that country, and was appointed delegate of the Wesleyan Australian Churches to the Wesleyan body in England. He is a renowned pulpit orator and lecturer, and is returning to Australia by way of the United States. He gave a most interesting account of the Missionary work of the Australian Wesleyans in the South Seas.

Anniversaries of the Sunday School and Tract Societies.

The Anniversaries of these two Societies were held in Cleveland, Ohio. Bishop Andrews, Dr. Wheeler, of the Pittsburgh Advocate, Drs. Rice, Ridgway, Vail and Todd were the principal speakers at the various meetings, aside from Drs. Vincent and Freeman, whose presence and instructions always form an important part of these annual gatherings.

Dr. Freeman read an interesting paper on "The Work of our Tract Society." He gave a rapid glance at its foundation and history, and the special work of late. The amount of money spent in Germany since 1854 was $17,692.63, and in other foreign countries since 1858 amounted to $24,631.62—total, $42,324.25. During twenty-five years the society has contributed, not including accounts with colporteurs, $275,000.

During the past twenty-five years the Union has expended in building up and supporting missions $25,782.22. The statistics of these missions aided in foreign lands are as follows: Schools, 637; officers and teachers, 2,779; scholars, 35,486.

Dr. Vincent, Corresponding Secretary of the Sunday School Union, presented an interesting statistical report, as follows:

Number of Sunday Schools in the M. E. Church in 1877, 19,872, an increase during the year, of 399; officers and teachers, 212,353, an increase in the year of 2,333; scholars, 1,511,022, an increase in 1877 of 64,995; conversions in the Sunday Schools, 116,726, being an increase in the year of 14,702.

Maximum circulation of the Sunday School Journal, (monthly,) 183,000 copies; total circulation for 1877, 1,445,900 copies; Sunday School Advocate, (semi-monthly,) 250,000 copies; total circulation for 1877, 5,846,000 copies; Picture Lesson Paper, (monthly,) 146,000; total, 1,553,000; Berean Leaf, (monthly,) 1,250,000; total, 13,200,000; Leaf Cluster, 11,450; Berean Question Book, 71,000; number of bound volumes of requisite text-books, 84,344; number of bound volumes in library, 98,575. Whole number of pages of leaves, books, papers, Leaf Clusters, and everything published in 1877 in the Sunday School Department at New York, 111,261,969.

South Carolina Conference.

This Conference met at Columbia, S. C., January 16, Bishop Scott, presiding. The Bishop is wonderfully sustained in his work, and is making his tour of the Atlantic sea-board Conferences with promptness and efficiency, and greatly to the delight of our preachers and people. The statistics of the Conference are as follows: Membership 31,490; raised for missions, $1,735.81; Church Extension, $60.65; Sunday School Union, $48.90; Freedmen's Aid, $36.06; Tracts, $15.64; Episcopal Fund, $63.15; Education, $64.40. The Columbia Church in which the Conference was held had been built during the year, and was dedicated by Bishop Scott. Rev. J. B. Middleton was appointed Agent of Claflin University. The Charleston Centenary Church in this Conference has 2,030 members and raised $505.78 for missions.

The Southern Pacific Railroad.

It looks very much as if the Southern Pacific Railroad scheme now before Congress will be defeated. A resolution against subsidies of all kinds has passed the House. And while the friends of the Southern Pacific say that as they do not ask for a subsidy, but simply for the credit of the Government to be loaned to them, and that therefore this resolution does not apply to them, still the sentiment of Congress seems against the Southern Pacific.

This is to be regretted. The Southern Pacific is demanded by the interests of the whole country. The fact that the whole country was swindled to the amount of $47,000,000, by the Northern Pacific scheme should not deter Congress from doing a manifestly right thing for the vast undeveloped regions of the Southwest. The Central Pacific has to earn over $8,000,000 per annum to discharge the interest upon its bonds. This of course causes exorbitant rates of travel and freight. If the Southern Pacific though Texas can receive the recognition it asks it will have to pay but $2,000,000 interest a year. This would insure cheaper rates of travel and freight across the continent.

The proposition to change the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, at its next General Conference, to Episcopal Methodist Church, is awakening some discussion. The Holston Conference thinks a change should be made. A correspondent in the Central Methodist protests very strongly against any change. He says there are geographical, sentimental and ecclesiastical reasons why the word South should be retained. Rev. Mr. Mays, of the Columbia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in Oregon, says if the change is made he will consider it his duty to leave the country where he is now laboring.

If any change is made we call attention to the important fact that there are very grave legal reasons why our Southern brethren should not adopt the name Episcopal Methodist Church. The similarity of such a name and our own (Methodist Episcopal Church) is so great that there would be endless trouble and confusion in the matter of bequests, and in all things where the matters of the two churches would be directly related to the laws of the land. We do not know but it would be the duty of the representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church to invoke the law of the land to forbid any other denomination in this country assuming a name so like her own.

Whether silver be made a legal tender by Congress or not, one fact has been developed by the discussion, and that is that there is a fair prospect of the old party lines being broken up. Think of it, Benjamin F. Butler leading the Southern silver men in the House of Representatives! Butler is a great and strong leader for any party, and in accepting him as their spokesman Southern men simply show their wisdom. We notice, also, that extreme Radicals in the Democratic party are on good terms with men of extreme opposites. This is a good indication. Mix up and become acquainted, gentlemen, and you will know and respect each o her better.

The New Orleans City Item says: "The truer heroism and loftier manhood of the Southern statesman over his brother of the North and East are almost every day evinced in Congress."

Pshaw! We had supposed such conceit on the part of Southern editors had about run its course. We heard a great deal about this superiority of Southern bravery and heroism over that of Northern men before the war, but that foolish conceit is no longer felt, especially among the bravest of the ex-Confederate soldiers, who are the best qualified to judge, and whose own heroism and bravery make their judgment most valuable.

Rev. Dr. Braden writes from Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 23: "There are over two hundred students in the Central Tennessee College, and a gracious revival is in progress. Six had been converted within a week. Praise the Lord! Pray for us. Dr. Walden lectured to the students on Books and Reading, on his return from Atlanta, last Wednesday night. He had the closest attention of the large audience throughout. It was a good lecture and was highly appreciated by the students.

The Louisiana State Lottery will not be disturbed by the present Legislature, if we are to judge by the vote in the House, which indefinitely postponed a bill to amend and also a bill to abolish it. The right name of this institution is the Louisiana State Swindle. Every year it gleans from the pockets of the poor tens of thousands of dollars under the lying deception that they have a good chance of becoming rich for a few cents. The enormous profits of the Company prove to every thoughtful person that the Louisiana Lottery Company is but an organized swindle.

Rev. A. M. Gregory, Waco Texas, writes: "Our first quarterly meeting has just closed. The lovefeast, communion and other services were largely attended and a deep spiritual interest was manifested. We hope to complete our church this year. Harmony, and good will prevails among our membership. Our Sunday-school is under efficient officers, its missionary meeting just held was a grand success."

Rev. H. M. Turner writes from the North Georgia Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, recently in session at Eatonton:

"One of the most solemn times I ever witnessed was the memorial services over the late Rev. Lewis Davis, who was killed a few weeks since, in his house, by Ku-Klux. Elder Davis, well known to myself, was one of the purest and holiest of men. He knew nothing, nor did he bother with anything but the souls of men. No politician, no meddler, no disturber of the peace, it is impossible to imagine for what his life was taken, except to gratify the infernal negro hate which still rankles in the breast of a few incarnate devils. As a Christian, he was as near spotless as men ever get, and as a church builder, he had few equals and no superior. The announcement of his death on the floor of the North Georgia Conference created the most intense sensation. Old and young ministers cried like children, and the vengeance of heaven was asked upon the perpetrators of the horrible deed and as God lives it will come."

The latest revival sensation in the "City of Churches," comes in the shape of a colored woman named Amanda Smith, who has, in addition to her powers of exhorting, the ability to enliven and entertain her auditors by her singing. Her voice has a double register, the upper resembling a basso-falsetto, the lower one being a decided tenor, and she shows her versatility by singing solos in the former and choruses in the latter. Her repertoire is as extensive as her voice, and contains many hymns never sung here before. Her skin is very dark. The oddity of her appearance is heightened by a quaint bonnet and shoulder cape which she wears during the service.—N. Y. Tribune.

The steamship Metropolis from Philadelphia for Para, Brazil, went ashore on Currituck, N. C., beach, three miles south of the lighthouse, during a furious southeast gale. Great confusion prevailed on board. Owing to the fury of the gale and the roaring of the surf the orders of the officers were unheard. About fifty of the passengers and crew have washed ashore. About two hundred persons are believed to be lost.

The census of New York state shows that there are in the state 63,681 more single males than females. It would seem, therefore, that any unmarried lady wanting a husband ought to have no trouble in finding one.

Specials from Rome say the pope has ratified the plans for reconstruction of the Scottish heirarchy, appointed two archbishops and four suffragans, and will hold a consistory shortly to give palliums to the archbishop. The pope's health is improving.

Boston University.

Each professional school of the University is to be represented on Commencement-day by two speakers, one of whom is to be chosen by the Faculty, the other by the students.

The School of Law has already appointed its representatives for that occasion, the students' choice being Mr. L. W. Aldrich, and Francis L. Willman being the choice of the Faculty.

The arrangements of the Trustees for the organization of the University Convocation in 1881 are received with great gratification by the more than four hundred and fifty alumni, already admitted to degrees, who are then to be eligible to membrship in the new body.

Miss Clara B. Swain, M. D., the first Medical Missionary sent by a Society to the women of any heathen country, and for seven years in charge of a Hospital and Dispensary in Bareilly, India, is now on a visit to this country to recruit her health, and is attending lectures at the Boston University School of Medicine.

According to the New York Times the grand total of church property in New York City of all the denominations is $56,191,600; and the indebtedness to which this is liable is $7,770,314, or nearly one-seventh. In all 345 churches and chapels are represented—63 Protestant Episcopal, 56 Roman Catholic, 54 Methodist Episcopal, 39 Presbyterian, 31 Baptist, 20 Lutheran, 18 Jewish, 17 Reformed (Dutch), 11 miscellaneous, 8 colored (of different denominations), 6 United Presbyterian, 5 Congregational, 5 Universalist, and 5 Reformed Presbyterian, and 3 Quaker meeting-houses. Nearly half of the total valuation of the property, or $24,175,000, which is estimated according to the present value of real estate is assigned to Protestant Episcopal churches. The next wealthiest denomination is the Roman Catholic, which has $11,176,500 of property; the third is the Presbyterian, with $5,[illegible]; the fourth, the Reformed (Dutch), with $4,281,000; the fifth, the Methodist Episcopal, with $2,-[illegible]; the seventh, the Jewish, with $1,861,000; the seventh, the Baptist, with $1,446,500; the eighth, the Lutheran, with $1,095,000. Only one denomination is entirely free from debt—the Friends. On their property, valued at $585,000, there is not a dollar of debt. Of the 345 churches, 120, or more than one third, are able to write "no debt" after their names. Of the 120, 22 are Protestant Episcopal, 22 Methodist Episcopal, 20 Presbyterian, 14 Baptist, 7 Reformed (Dutch), 5 Jewish, and 4 Roman Catholic. The Roman Catholics have by far the largest debt.

The wealthiest church is Trinity, which has about $15,000,000 of property; next comes the Reformed Dutch Collegiate Church, with $2,-[illegible]; third, the new Roman Catholic Cathedral, with $2,200,000; [illegible] Episcopal Church, [illegible].

Feb. 17, 1878.—JOASH REPAIRING THE TEMPLE.

SCRIPTURE.—2 Chron. 24:4-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Joash was minded to repair the house of the Lord."—4.

Topic.—"They offered willingly to the Lord."

(Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.)

The mind of the king (4-5).—Indebted to the temple for the preservation of his life, Joash would have been very ungrateful if he could have permitted the house of God to have remained in a dilapidated state. Every one in a Christian country, whether he be a professor of religion or not, is under obligations to the house of God, that should compel him to respond from motives of gratitude to every appeal for money in its aid. It is the presence of the church in a community far more than law that gives public peace and security. Take that out, and there will be drunkenness, brawling, gambling, robbery, murder and all the other crimes of which the unregenerated human heart is capable. To it we owe the justness of our laws, the moral sentiment that makes a crime a thing of reproach, and the elevation and refinement of the family. Indeed there are few things that we prize in civilization whose root did not spring from, and now finds its nourishment in Christianity. Therefore it behooves all men to acknowledge their obligations to the church, and to contribute liberally to its support.

The mind of the priests (6:7).—That was shown in the fact that they did not hasten the work as commanded. It was delayed until the twenty third year of King Joash. Just how many years it was neglected, we are not informed. Joash began to reign when he was not seven years old. It is not probable that he gave the command until he had reached an age approaching maturity. During the days of the apostasy, the contributions to sustain the public worship had not been, of course, what they ought to have been. They had so largely fallen off that it is entirely probable that the priests did not collect more than enough to support themselves. It is more than likely that they found the people generally unwilling to give, and were too discouraged to press the matter beyond getting enough to carry on the temple services. They fell into the same error that pastors do when they think that, if the church builds or puts the old house into thorough repair, they will not receive their salary either promptly or in full, whereas the universal experience is that, under such circumstances, that is paid more cheerfully and punctually than ever. The king did not take away from them all their resources of income. He left them all that which legitimately was theirs.

The mind of the people (8:11).—Instead of depending upon a personal canvas, as before, the king issued a proclamation inviting the people to bring in the money themselves. He made a chest and bored a hole in its lid, "and set it beside the altar, on the right side as one cometh into the house of the Lord." 2 K. 12:9. The priests were not excluded from participation in this new movement. They were employed to receive the money as it was handed in, and to deposit it in the box—a duty which would not have been assigned them had they been utterly untrustworthy. The chest was locked, and was opened only by the king's scribe and the officer of the high priest. As often as it became full, they emptied the money, put it into bags and weighed it. At that time there was no coined money, so far as can be ascertained. Coins came into use not till after the return from the captivity. Therefore it was that the money was put into bags and weighed after it was put in. The bags so weighed, with the official seal upon them certifying to their weight, passed among men the same as coin.

Under this arrangement the people responded heartily. "And all the princes and all the people rejoiced, and brought in, and cast into the chest, until they had made an end. It was not such a difficult matter to secure contributions as the priests had supposed. The people not only gave, but they gave joyfully. And all classes gave—the princes and the common people. No offering was too [illegible] themselves [illegible] not [illegible] as their neighbors. They [illegible] to give "until they had [illegible]." In that way the [illegible] had a chance, in all [illegible], to give several times. [illegible] the way to secure the [illegible] a new building, or [illegible] to pay off the [illegible] the people give [illegible] end of the mat-[illegible] and the one given in Chronicles relative to the furnishing of the temple. There it says that no bowls of silver, snuffers, basins, trumpets, or any vessels of gold were made of the money that was brought into the temple, and here it says that, when the repairs were finished, the residue of the collection was brought to the king and to Jehoiada, who expended it in getting just such vessels. The discrepancy is easily reconciled; for the record in Kings means to say nothing more than that no part of the money was directed to be used by the workmen, who had charge of the work, in procuring such utensils. After the work was all completed, then, we are informed by the writer of the Chronicles, that the king and Jehoiada so appropriated that which was left.

But the most remarkable thing about the restoration is stated in Kings. There it is affirmed: "Moreover they reckoned not with the men into whose hand they delivered the money to be bestowed upon the workmen; for they dealt faithfully." There were no "rings" in those days. It was absolutely safe to intrust public funds in the hands of public servants without putting them under heavy bonds or subjecting them to the espionage of a secret detective service! We should be glad to see such a state of things in these later and, it is thought "better," days.

It is a pity that Joash did not go on as he begun. After the death of his good adviser, he was flattered into permitting the worship of groves and idols. As a consequence the wrath of the Lord came upon Judah. He so far forgot all the obligations that he was under to his dead benefactor that he caused his son to be stoned to death because he had rebuked him in the name of the Lord. The people never forgave him for that act. When the Syrians came up, "and executed judgment against Joash," they left him sorely wounded, and then his own servants conspired against and slew him "for the blood of the son of Jehoiada the priest." And for this cause, also, "they buried him in the city of David, but they buried him not in the sepulchre of the kings." When he was crowned, all shouted before the child-king, and rejoiced and blew the trumpets, but when he died there were none so poor as to do him reverence. None can tell the end of a life certainly from the beginning. He who makes not the Lord his daily strength and portion will surely fall.

If you would be happy in time and safe in eternity—if you would be useful in the Church and a shining light in the world—if you would be saved from evelasting ruin, rest not in the darkness of unbelief. Your tears will not blot out sin; your right views of the gospel will not justify you; you must be covered with a spotless righteousness; your change of heart and of life will not justify you; it cannot cover past sins, neither is it perfect. Jesus offers you perfect righteousness.—Robert Boyd.

The following inscription was cut in the cedar floor of a cell at St. George's Bermuda: "John Stevenson, Methodist missionary, was imprisoned in this jail six months and fined fifty pounds, for preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ to African blacks and captive negroes. St. George's Bermuda, June, 1801." Notwithstanding this persecution, Methodism to-day is one of the most powerful elements in the religious life of those sunny islands.

The very moment a sinner accepts of the finished work of Christ in his behalf, his sins, which were many, are forgiven; he is, for Christ's sake accounted as righteous, and that law which before could be satisfied only by his eternal death, has no claims against him.—Darling.

Married.

His death was triumphant—by faith he saw the Angels of God ascending and descending.—His last words were, "Sing, sing, sing," and with them he took his departure to join the Angels in the "New Song" of the redeemed.

The Parent of Insomnia.

The parent of insomnia or wakefulness is in nine cases out of ten a dyspeptic stomach. Good digestion gives sound sleep, indigestion interferes with it. The brain and stomach sympathize. One of the prominent symptoms of a weak state of the gastric organs is a disturbance of the great nerve entrepot, the brain. Invigorate the stomach, and you restore equilibrium to the great center. A most reliable medicine for the purpose is Hostetter's stomach bitters, which is far preferable to mineral sedatives and powerful narcotics which, though they may for a time exert a soporific influence upon the brain, soon cease to act, and invariably injure the tone of the stomach. The Bitters, on the contrary, restore activity to the operations of that all important organ, and their beneficient influence is reflected in sound sleep and a tranquil state of the nervous system. A wholesome impetus is likewise given to the action of the liver and bowels by its use. feb17tomar1.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. Sherer, Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. jan24-1m.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.—Read's Sore Throat and Catarrh Powder is one of the most wonderful articles of the present age for all affections of the throat, head, and lungs, including sore throats of any description, whether incipient, chronic, ulcerated, or consumptive. The Class-Leader.

His Work, and How to Do It.

With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.

BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,

Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo..........$1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

STATE

Regulation of Vice.

Aaron M. Powell, of New York,

CONTAINS

1. State Regulation of Vice.

A paper read before the New York Committee for the Prevention of Licensed Prostitution.

2. Regulation Efforts in America.

A paper prepared for the International Congress at Geneva, Switzerland, 1877,

3. The Geneva Congress,

embracing a sketch of the proceedings, and in full, the conclusions of the several sections of the Congress: 1. Hygiene; 2. Morals; 3. Social Economy; 4. Rescue Work; 5. Legislation.

5. New York Committee's Address to the Geneva Congress.

The author, Mr. Powell, (formerly editor of the National Anti-Slavery Standard), represented the New York Committee as a delegate in the International Congress, at Geneva, to promote the abolition of Government Regulation of Prostitution.

This is a book of great interest and importance to all students of social science; especially to all physicians, ministers, journalists and legislators, and to the intelligent and philanthropic everywhere.

Under the guise of hygiene, and of the public welfare, already several States have broached the question of regulating prostitution by law, and unless the opponents of these movements are wary we shall have in this country laws which will be disgraceful to humanity and oppressive to virtuous women, before we are aware of it. Let every one who favors justice to woman, morality in man, and purity everywhere, buy and help to spread the sale of this book where it will do the most good. Price $1.00

National Repository,

A CHRISTIAN MAGAZINE,

Rev. D. CURRY, D.D., Editor.

Begins Jan'y, 1878. Try it one Year.

ONLY $3 A YEAR.

"The scope and character of the magazine shall be that of a first-class religious and literary monthly, of the brightest character attainable, and pervaded, whether in its general or religious articles, by a thoroughly Christian spirit."—Order of the Committee.

Under these directions, it will be devoted to General and Religious Literature, Biographies and Travels, Criticisms and Art.

A sufficient number of the best writers for the press are employed to furnish all the variety in the several departments which their scope and importance require to make them rich and instructive.

The editorial department will be a feature of the magazine. Rev. Dr. Curry, both experienced and successful as an editor, brings to his duties the purpose of giving his whole strength to the work before him.

Each number will contain one or more articles illustrated with Wood Engravings, in the best style of this art, adding beauty and value to the pages.

The twelve numbers for the year will contain 1,152 pages of reading-matter, which, published in book form, would make not less than fifteen volumes, worth $1.50 each, and will comprise a variety that will be more interesting and valuable to the general reader than can be procured in books for many times the yearly price of the magazine.

We earnestly request you to take the National Repository for 1878—to give it one year's trial, and thereby determine for yourselves whether it is worthy of a place in the Christian home.

The Best That I Can.

"I cannot do much," said a little star,
"To make the dark world bright:
My silvery beams cannot struggle far
Through the folding gloom of night;
But I'm only a part of God's great plan,
And I'll cheerfully do the best I can."

"What is the use," said a fleecy cloud,
"Of these few drops that I hold?
They will hardly bend the lilly proud,
Though caught in her cup of gold;
Yet am I a part of God's great plan,
So my treasures I'll give as well as I can."

A child went merrily forth to play,
But a thought, like a silver thread,
Kept winding in and out all day
Through the happy, golden head:
"Mother said: 'Darling, do all you can,
For you are a part of God's great plan.'"

She knew no more than the glancing star,
Nor the cloud with its chalice full,
How, why, and for what all strange things were—
She was only a child at school,
But she thought, "It's part of God's great plan
That even I should do all that I can."

She helped a younger child along,
When the road was rough to the feet,
And she sang from her heart a little song
That we all thought passing sweet;
And her father, a weary, toil-worn man,
Said, "I will do likewise the best I can."

Our best! Ah! brethren, the best of us
Must hide our faces away,
When the Lord of the vineyard comes to look
At our task at the close of day!
But for strength from above ('tis the Master's plan),
We'll pray, and we'll do the best that we can.

Fashionable Women.

Fashion kills more women than toil and sorrow. Obedience to fashion is a greater transgression of the laws of woman's nature, a greater injury to her physical and mental constitution, than poverty and neglect. The slave woman at her tasks will live and grow old, and see two or three generations of her mistresses fade and pass away. The washer-woman, with scarce a ray of hope to cheer her in her toils, will live to see her fashionable sisters die all around her. The kitchen-maid is hearty and strong, when her lady has to be nursed like a sick baby. It is a sad truth, that fashion-pampered women are almost worthless for all the ends of human life. They have but little force of character, they have still less power of moral will, and quite as little physical energy. They live for no great purpose in life—they accomplish no worthy ends. They are only doll-forms in the hands of milliners and servants, to be dressed and fed to order. They write no books, they set no rich examples of virtue and womanly life. If they raise children, servants and nurses do all, save to conceive and give birth—and when reared, what are they? What do they ever amount to but weak scions of the old stock? Who ever heard of a fashionable woman's child exhibiting any virtue or power of mind for which it became eminent? Read the biographies of our great and good men and women. Not one of them had a fashionable mother. They nearly all sprung from strong-minded women, who had about as little to do with fashion as with the changing clouds.

"Honor Bright."

"Will you now, truly?" "Yes, honor bright." That was all I heard of the talk, as I looked down at the eager faces that passed my window, and it set me to thinking. I have no idea what kind of compact the boys were making, but whatever it was they evidently thought it was made specially sure and sacred by those two words, "honor bright." You all think so, I believe, you boys and girls; there is an unwritten code of honor among you which makes it quite right and proper to break certain kinds of promises, if it suits your convenience, but very disagreeable to break others—the honor bright kind. May be you got it from your elders, or what is more likely, your elders learned it when they were boys and girls, and carried the principle with them out of small transactions into great ones, until there is no telling the mischief it has done.

That is a good motto,—honor bright,—and I wish you would adopt it, not for special things, but for every word and action of your whole lives. If you make a promise, in great things or small, fulfill it carefully, sacredly, honor bright, no matter how much it costs you, provided you have not pledged yourself to a wrong. If you have, there can be no honor about it, except in frankly saying, "I made a bad promise; I am ashamed of it; I cannot keep it;" and do not let any foolish notion about honor make you stick to the wrong.

You don't want to do this thing? No; but you said you would. Now stick to it, honor bright.

You didn't promise to do it? No; but you know it is expected of you. Do it, honor bright.

Nobody expects it of you? Ah, but you know you ought; therefore do it, honor bright.

A girl six years old was on a visit to her grandfather, who was a New England divine, celebrated for his logical powers. "Only think, grandpa, what uncle Robert says." "What does he say, my dear?" "Why, he says that the moon is made of green cheese. It isn't at all, is it?" "Well child, suppose you find out for yourself?" "How can I, grandpa?" "Get your Bible and see what it says." "Where shall I begin?" "Begin at the beginning." The child sat down to read the Bible. Before she got more than half through the second chapter of Genesis, and had read about the creation of the stars and the animals, she came back to her grandfather, her eyes all bright with the excitement of discovery. "I've found it, grandpa! it isn't true; for God made the moon before He made cows."

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Free Consultations

The rich will pay after cure only.
The poor will be treated, attended to and cured free of charge.

BY

D. J. BEAU,
(FROM PARIS)
Chemist and Professor of Phrenology.
Consultations Every Day, from 8 o'Clock a.m. to 4 p.m. at
NO. 106 BOURBON STREET,

By means of his powerful tonic and invigorating medicines, which he applies himself, he has obtained the greatest success in every place he has visited along the Coast, and he can show certificates of persons restored to health who had been given up as incurable, and bed-ridden for years. By his treatment, numbers of ladies, as well as gentlemen, have recovered their health and bloom of youth.

His new system is a sure cure for Apparent Apoplexy, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Neuralgia, Hemorrhage, Faintness, Sallowness, Strangulation, Diseases of the Womb, Fevers, Sore Eyes, Pain in the Stomach, Old and Rebellious Syphallitic Diseases, Scurvy, Scrofula, and all those Chronic Diseases which, in the South strike a man powerless and by a long agony lead certainly to death.

N. B.—His treatment excludes all those medicines having for base, arsenic, mercury, or quinine, which generally cause the decay of teeth and the weakening of all the organs, leaving the system in a state of prostration by taking off all its strength and very often afflicting it with new disease.

The Science of Phrenology has alone the power to recognize the symptoms characterizing diseases and to discover all the phases of existence; acquiring this knowledge only by a thorough study, it does not startle, but astonishes, and by its accuracy gives the person consulting a certainty of cure and an insight into what he is about.

Phrenological Consultations—At the Office $5, at Residence $10.

"KING BABE."

His septre is a rattle,
His throne is his mother's arms;
He reigns a tiny tyrant,
In all his dimpled charms!
Yet round his tiny presence
Our loving hearts entwine;
Dictator of the cradle,
And king of right divine!

Whatever be his mandates,
No courtiers dare rebel;
His mother's chief of the household,
Prime minister as well!
In his perambulator,
His downy car of state,
Exulting, tiny monarch,
What triumphs on him wait!

In purple ease and splendor,
Long, [illegible] he seeks to rein;
All hints of ease disjointed
He smiles at with disdain:
Alas! that royal greatness
Should ever be disowned;
Here comes a tiny stranger—
King Baby is dethroned.

Incompetent Preachers.

Let us look at some of the causes of incompetency.

1. Lack of brains. A minister is set apart to be a leader of the people in morality and spirituality. He cannot be a leader unless he rises above the people in intelligence and moral culture. If his mind is incapable of culture and growth, all the advantages of family and social position, of personal appearance, and even piety, cannot make him a leader. The theory is a false one [illegible] our system, we need [illegible] low intellect to minister [illegible] people. The very aim of [illegible] is to instruct and [illegible] ministry that does not [illegible] is a failure.

[illegible] for study. A man [illegible] for farming, me[illegible], or art, but [illegible] capacious, may [illegible] the ministry. We [illegible] convinced that [illegible] is an acquired [illegible] separated from [illegible] or ability to [illegible] in tread-[illegible] moving forward, [illegible]—still they [illegible] preachers, after [illegible] labor, show no [illegible] nor fulness [illegible] when they [illegible] manhood there [illegible] dull intellect [illegible] the possessor [illegible] ministry, such as [illegible] zeal, and [illegible] of novelty. [illegible] props give [illegible] the resources [illegible] Having [illegible] intellectual [illegible] uncultured, [illegible]

[illegible] charge over [illegible] may show [illegible] of growth when [illegible] became to it, [illegible] indolent. The [illegible] work. Work in [illegible] in the meetings, [illegible] among the people [illegible] paying off Church [illegible] a new edifice. [illegible] people have [illegible] that if a [illegible] shall be cut. [illegible] a preacher carries [illegible] reputation for [illegible] will want [illegible] wife. The [illegible] ministerial wives [illegible] pre-emi[illegible] [illegible] hesitates [illegible] who [illegible] preacher's [illegible] served are his well-ordered children, that it is coming to be a point of growing consequence as to what kind of a family the preacher is to bring to a new charge. If, on the contrary, the wife and children are pernicious in their example, the preacher goes to his appointment a clipt eagle. Happily, among the disqualifications for the ministry, this is perhaps the least; yet of importance enough to awaken the deepest regret that the itinerancy should raise to prominence such women, and ventilate their errors from charge to charge.

5. Pernicious habits. Unfortunately these are not confined to the laity. More than one minister within the writer's knowledge, by the extravagant use of tobacco, has destroyed his usefulness. The abstract question of the sinfulness, or even impropriety, of its use is not embraced in this discussion. The case under review is where copious discharges of filthy liquid, or incessant smoking in utter disregard of the rights of others, or filling parsonages with noxious vapors, so that delicate members are repelled from the door—these are hinderances for which talents and other virtues present unequal compensations. A candidate for a valuable appointment, not many months since, spent a Sabbath at the home of the chairman of the committee on procuring a preacher. He smoked so constantly that parlors and chambers were filled with the odor. This was enough for the chairman, who was himself a moderate smoker. Talents, eloquence, experience, all went down before the habit. Nothing further was said on the question of an engagement, and it is probable the brother wonders to this day why the negotiation so suddenly ended. Then there is the habit of trifling and story-telling. Stories to illustrate some valuable point in conversation, or to cheer a social group, if always chaste, are desirable and helpful, but there are ministers whose whole aim in conversation is to produce mirth, and indulge in jokes and puns to such an extent, that the seriousness of the pulpit cannot undo the damage to the people.—Cor. N. Y. Advocate.

Tide Marks.

BY REV. JAMES MITCHELL.

In the late trip made in company with Bishop Scott, through Florida and the Carolinas, it was our singular good fortune, from our first enterance on that journey to receive marked attention from our brethren of the Church South. Beginning at Charleston, S. C., where the first Sabbath was spent, Bishop Wightman, one of the most discreet and judicious of the Southern Board, encountered a rain storm to meet Bishop Scott, in his own city. This I regard as a tidal wave of higher altitude than we had yet gained in the fraternal flow. Bishop Scott preached, and Bishop Wightman closed with a prayer of peculiar power and unction. He was evidently disappointed when he learned that we started on next morning before dawn, as he wished to see more of Bishop Scott. When the latter asked Bishop Wightman if he resided in Charleston, he made the amusing rejoinder, "No, I don't but my wife does. I live where duty calls."

We passed from Charleston to Jacksonville, Florida, spending some time in that city and neighborhood. When we reached the seat of the Florida Conference, at Zionsville, we found that fraternal feeling renewed in a most remarkable and unexpected manner. Rev. Mr. McCook, a young minister of the Church South, was with us from the commencement to the close. He is the pastor of the Gainsville church, and with him was Dr. L. S. Duncan, "the blind chaplain of the Georgia Senate." He made several addresses in a happy spirit, which were well received by our people.

The next Conference was that of South Carolina, held in Columbia. It will be remembered that this body has few white charges connected with it, whilst a body remarkably advanced in all that makes an efficient Methodist Conference. Take, for example, $1,735 81 for missions. At this Conference we were visited by the leading Methodist minister of the place, [illegible] addressed in the most fraternal [illegible] I will give at large the remarks of these ministers as I re[illegible]. I was not present [illegible] J. W. Kelly, of the [illegible] Conference of the [illegible] but as a [illegible] Carolina Methodism his remarks were highly fraternal and direct. Rev. S. H. Brown, editor and proprietor of the Christian Neighbor, an independent Methodist journal published in Columbia, likewise a member of Conference, being present, was requested to address the Conference, which he did with great effect. He said substantially:

"I have been with you several sessions; have been an observer of your progress. I rejoice that you are here to aid us in our struggles against sin, wrong and Romanism. It is important that our Protestant forces should cherish the spirit of unity; we are one in Christ as Christians, but especially are the Methodist families one in the spirit of our mission. We bid you God speed in this Southern field, You come to supplement our force. You have the power to resist Rome. You have saved our colored people from Rome and Satan."

Another of our brethren of the Church South, Prof. J. W. Dickson, A. M., of Columbia Female College, was present, and on Sabbath aided the Bishop in his work.

The Rev. Dr. J. T. Wightman, who has charge of their fine church in Columbia, won us all by his grace and ability. When he was requested by the Bishop to address the Conference he spoke substantially as follows:

"I feel myself honored by your invitation to address the Conference, but did I consult my own feelings I would rather sit at the feet of your venerable Bishop and receive from his lips words of wisdom and godliness; but I cannot permit the occasion to escape without mamifesting my deep interest in the welfare of the colored people, and without expressing the hope that your Christian efforts may greatly advance the kingdom of Christ among them. I love the colored man. Why should I not? I am not a stranger to them. I have given the prime and strength of life to arduous ministerial labors among the colored people; these hands have broken the body of the Lord to hundreds and thousands in their service; these hands have received thousands into the Church, and at the graves of their sainted dead I have pronounced the benedictions of heaven to comfort their bereaved. 'I have magnified my office,' and to-day I cherish a holy satisfaction of lond ang harmonious pastorate among the colored people of my former charges, representatives of whom I see in the good and true men by whom I am surrounded. God bless the colored people and make them a thousand-fold more prosperous in every good word and work! I am in full accord with you in every effort to advance the Kingdom of our common Master. Times may change and circumstances may change, but there is one who will never change. 'Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, to-day and forever;' and on his unchangeable love we may all unite in common faith and hope and effort.

"What has Methodism done for South Carolina? What has it accomplished for the colored people? Let me present a specimen of our Eshcol, that you may see the fruit of this spiritual land. Methodism entered the State at Charleston ninety-three years ago. To-day it numbers about 110,000 Church members, of which about 45,000 are whites, and 65,000 are colored persons. In the first generation of thirty years it advanced at the rate of 1,000 per annum; in the second at 1,500, and in the third at 2,000. In the meanwhile the Church among the colored people grew with two-fold more vigor. Never was Methodism in the State more prosperous than at this period; it is now marching forward to new positions of usefulness and power in the Kingdom of the blessed Lord.

How was this great conquest achieved? by what means? by power? by wealth? by wisdom? No; by the preaching of the Gospel. I would not presume in this place to instruct this body, but permit me to say to the younger members that the success in preaching depends on three qualifications: "Preach the word," the word of truth, "the word of the Spirit," before whose blade the proudest champions of error and sin will fall prostrate before the Lord. The truth is power. Do not seek to throw your mind into the word, but to draw the mind of Jesus from it. Do not ask what do I think it means, or what do men say it means; but what does God mean. It is His word. Search for "the truth as it is in Jesus," the plain, full, soul-converting and heaven-inspiring truth, the truth baptized with the blood of Jesus, and infused with the life of the Holy Spirit. This is power. But we should expound the word intelligibly; we should seek to enlighten the consciences of men; we should make them know the truth; we should rise above an appeal to ignorance and superstition and try so to understand and expound the word, that it may be approved by the good sense of the hearer, and thus reach his conscience and his heart. To do this, "give thyself to reading." Let the oil which illuminates the house of God be well beaten and pure. Yes, beat it out with prayer and meditation, with groaning and holy sweat. He who will not study to teach is but a blind leader of the blind, and has no right to handle the Word of God carelessly. Study to show yourself approved." But we should not only preach the truth and intelligibly expound it, but also look for the baptism of the Holy Ghost. Look for effect, preach for the immediate conversion of souls. Nothing will convert souls but the Holy Ghost. Though an angel from Heaven might preach the word, yet, without the Holy Ghost, he would only sow chaff upon the whirlwind. Successful preaching is to win souls. Strive for this; keep it in the eye of every sermon. Let nothing divert you from it. Yes, my brother, preach Christ—only Christ—Christ, the salvation of the world; Christ in us, Christ for us, Christ our power, Christ our hope; Christ now, Christ forever! Preach him with humility and faith, with zeal tempered with patience, with courage sweetened by charity. You cannot fail. The heavens may fail to give rain and the earth may fail to yield her fruit, but, 'My word shall not return unto me void,' saith the Lord.

"Vast, my brethren, is the responsibility resting upon your ministry. You stand not only before God as preachers of the truth, but also before man as the hope of the race. In the hands of the intelligent colored people of these lands reposes the destiny of the race. If you be true to your mission, if you go forth to call the colored people back from paths of sin and error, if you seek to win them to duty, to truth and to God, then you will have accomplished the noblest work of your life. You may not have accumulated wealth or won earthly glory, but, far beyond these achievements, you may exclaim with your dying Master, 'I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do," and, laying your dying head upon your sheaves, depart from the field of earthly toil to those mansions of reward reserved for all them who are faithful to the Lord. God bless the colored people!

"I had the honor to aid in laying the corner stone of this beautiful church, and I am gratified in now being permitted to meet you therein."

We passed from Columbia to Lumberton, North Carolina, to find a renewal of this kindly feeling, but this time on the part of leading laymen. It is a small town of one thousand inhabitants, but small as it is, it contained many liberal and intelligent persons who kindly entertained our people.

This demonstration that, to me looked spontaneous, betokens a better day; and such I, for one, will hold the sign until the good men in the Church South are bulldozed as they, alas! too often have been, by the unreasonable and over-exacting portion of that Church. That there is a large gathering of astute politicians in the lay ranks of that Church who intend to retain a "solid South," and swing that fearful club, as it has been, to the prostration of the right of man, I have no doubt; but these good ministers do not represent them, nor can they control them. In the presence of these advocates of a "solid South," which to me is a national nuisance, we may rest on the watch but by no means slumber. I wish from the depths of my soul I could in justice to the poor and oppressed say to the timid and fearful ones, "Peace, be still." But one thing I can say, we have true friends in the Church South who will continue to multiply their numbers and moral power until the men of charity and love prevail. To such allow me to say that when words of severity drop from our lips or pen we do not mean you. But with the aiders and abettors of a solid South under club law, we have no fellowship, nor can godly men require us to ignore wrong in our own Church or in any other denomination; we are Christ's watchmen.

I have just finished reading Bishop Harris' article in your issue of the 10th, on Liberia, and its relation to Africa. I thank him for it. My interest in that question does not grow less with passing time. I long advocated the interests of Africa in the Northwest, and had such men as Wright of Indiana, Doolittle of Wisconsin, and Lincoln of Illinois to aid me; I give them in the order of time in which their States came to my help. The last the greatest, though his work so far as its foreign bearing was concerned was left incomplete.

Atlanta, Feb. 1, 1878.

After Many Days.

About the year 1820 a camp meeting was held in a certain town in the State of New York. The usual services were held and at the close of the meeting only one person had been converted, and he an unknown tin peddler. Many were discouraged; said God had ceased to own and honor camp meetings as an agent of great good. "Only a single soul converted," they said, "and he only a tin peddler." These prophets were too hasty in their judgments. They had forgotten that one of the factors in the problem on their hands was the agency or influence of Him with whom it is nothing to help, whether with many or with them that have no power. Some of those doubting brethren lived to see that this very camp meeting was one of the most successful ever held; for that tin peddler proved to be none other than the late great and good John Dempster, D. D., father of all the theological schools in the Methodist Church, and who, to the day of his death, had trained more men for the Methodist ministry than any man in our connection. Gospel workers cannot be too often reminded that they should never despise the day of small things. The history of the Church in every age fully authorizes us, instead of judging by appearances, in the matter of the result of our earnest efforts to save souls, to walk by faith. Time is necessary in order to the full revelation of the fruits of our toil. The Kingdom of Heaven cometh not by observation. Like long-buried seed, the word uttered in God's name, may bloom forth "after many days," and yield an abundant harvest.

In an obscure part of Ireland, a handful of God's people had assembled in a barn for the purpose of religious worship. The people were illiterate, but earnest and devout. The preacher on the occasion was hardly superior to his hearers in the matter of culture. He knew nothing of the learning of the schools; but he was familiar with his Bible. He could scarcely write, or even spell his name; but he felt assured, nevertheless, that that name was written in Heaven. He could preach in demonstration of the Spirit and with power, because he preached out of a full heart and with an unction sent down from on high.

In that rustic audience that afternoon there sat a wayward, thoughtless youth. All his life-long he had sat under the means of grace in England, but as yet had never been specially convicted of sin. Curiosity had drawn him, while thus abroad, to accompany a friend to the aforementioned humble Methodist service. The evident sincerity of the worshippers; the fervor of their songs and the power of their prayers; and above all the faithful, searching message of the anointed preacher so shook his conscience and impressed his heart, that he felt constrained, even there, to yield to be saved. Before he had left that barn he felt that he had truly been brought nigh to God. Little imagined the humble itinerant of that day how God was honoring his own truth, and his humble servant as well, in making him thus the instrument of bringing into Christ's fold one whose influence for good would never die. That young man thus convicted' thus converted, was none other than Augustus Toplady, the author of that perhaps, best of all hymns, "Rock of ages." Toplady never ceased to express his wonder that he should have been brought to God under just the circumstances he was. His life, though comparatively brief, was yet abundant in labors for the Master. His end was glorious. During his last illness he seemed to lie in the very vestibule of glory. To a friend's inquiry he answered, with sparkling eye, "O my dear sir, I cannot tell the comforts I feel in my soul—they are past expression. The consolations of God are so abundant that he leaves me nothing to pray for. My prayers are all converted into praise. I enjoy a heaven already in my soul." And within an hour of dying he called his friends and asked if they could give him up; and when they said they could, tears of joy ran down his cheeks as he added, "O what a blessing that you are made willing to give me over into the hands of my dear Redeemer, and part with me; for no mortal can live after the glories which God has manifested to my soul!"

And so he died. The fruit of that humble preacher's effort by no means appeared at the time That, indeed, could only be made fully manifest "after many days."

Such is the nature of religious truth that sown in one heart, planted and transplanted, it may live and grow from year to year and from century to century. The following train of spiritual results has been frequently referred to. How significant and impressive this record!

Binney sat alone and wrote his book of Christian experience; full of thoughts born in prayer and baptized in tears. One of its printed copies some careless hand had torn and thrown aside, and Richard Baxter chanced to pick up the old, torn leaves and read enough of truth to lead him at least to feel the evil of sin, and to find peace and hope, and he wrote his "Call to the Unconverted," which Doddridge read and was awakened and saved; and many other sleepers his solemn call aroused from their death slumbers, and many saints by him were helped to reach their everlasting rest; and Doddridge, saved through God's help by Baxter, wrote his "Rise and Progress," which led William Wilberforce to Christ, and Wilberforce wrote his "Practical View," which led Thomas Chalmers to be truly converted, while himself preaching an unknown Christ.

Let no preacher, no Christian worker, then, consider his earnest words lost on the seemingly unawakened sinner—hermetically sealed and dead in the vase of some hardened soul. Another has beautifully said: they may live, for all we know, "in the dust of memory's tomb." Sow in faith; utter the message that has been "born in prayer and baptized in tears," and, depend upon it, the glorious results of the same shall appear "after many days."—Northern Advocate.

The M. E. Church building in the city of Montevideo, capital of the Uruguay Republic in South America, was once a theatre. As such it had its fair share of public support, and was supposed to have its sitting accommodations pushed to their limits. As a church it has, singularly enough, become more attractive than when devoted to music and the drama; so that even after 150 sittings have been added, and the occupants of the gallery crowded to within a few inches of the ceiling, it is still found to be too small.

Tarboro (N. C.) Southerner: In opening a bed of marl on the farm of Mr. A. Case, some days since, they struck into what is supposed to be a creek or small river, some six or eight feet below the surface. There they found an Indian canoe with a skeleton of a human being sitting upright, with the remnant of a paddle in his hand. It is supposed that the embankment must have given away above and buried this person while setting at the base.

Public Adultery in Louisiana.

Last week we referred to the disgraceful fact that the House of Representatives in the Louisiana Legislatures refused to favorably entertain a bill defining what public adultery is, and fixing penalties upon those proven guilty of it. We have given the matter further attention and return to the subject again. The bill was introduced by Hon. F. A. Routon (not Coulton, as we said last week), and was entitled:

An Act defining public adultery, declaring the same to be a crime throughout this State, and providing penalties therefor.

Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That the act of publicly cohabiting as husband and wife in any other way than in lawful marriage, is by this Act declared to be public adultery, and henceforth to be a crime throughout this State.

Sec. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That if any persons shall cohabit as husband and wife, in a state of public adultery, either or both of whom having a lawful spouse living, and not being legally divorced therefrom, such person or persons shall, on conviction, suffer imprisonment in the penitentiary, at hard labor, not less than six months and not more than one year.

Sec. 3. Be it further enacted, etc., That if any persons shall cohabit as husband and wife, in a state of public adultery, one of whom has a lawful spouse living, and not legally divorced therefrom, and the other never having been lawfully married to any one, the former shall, on conviction, suffer the same penalties as provided for in the preceding section, and the latter shall, on conviction, suffer both a fine and be imprisoned in the parish jail; the fine not to exceed one hundred dollars, and not to be less than thirty dollars, and the imprisonment not to exceed ninety days, and not to be less than thirty days. The fine, when collected, to go to the public school fund of the parish in which the act is committed.

Sec. 4. Be it further enacted, etc., That if any persons shall cohabit as husband and wife in a state of public adultery, one of whom has been lawfully married and the spouse be either dead, or if living, legally divorced therefrom, and the other never having been legally married to any one, each of said persons shall, on conviction, suffer the same penalties as provided for unmarried persons in the preceding section.

Sec. 5. Be it further enacted, etc., That if any persons shall cohabit as husband and wife in a state of public adultery, neither of whom has ever been lawfully married to any one, or if both have been, and the spouse be either dead, or if living, lawfully divorced therefrom, each of said persons shall, on conviction, suffer the same penalties as provided in section three of this Act for unmarried persons.

Sec. 6. Be it further enacted, etc., That it is the spirit and intention of this Act to encourage, preserve sacred, and protect lawful marriage throughout this State.

Sec. 7. Be it further enacted, etc., That it shall be the duty of every district judge throughout this State, exercising criminal jurisdiction, to charge the grand jurors in every parish in his district, at each and every term of his court therein, specially as to this Act; and it shall likewise be the duty of the judge of the criminal court in the parish of Orleans, having jurisdiction, also to charge his grand jurors specially as to the provisions of this Act, at every empanelling of the same; it shall also be the duty of every District Attorney in this State to see to the rigid enforcement of this Act.

Sec. 8. Be it further enacted, etc., That this Act shall take effect from and after the first day of October.

This Act was reported unfavorably upon by the House Committee on Judiciary, and the House postponed its further consideration until March 4th, which is considered equivolent to killing it. A similar bill met a like fate in the Senate.

Mr. Routon introduced another bill into the House, as follows:

An Act entitled An Act to amend and re-enact section 800 of the Revised Statutes of the year 1870,

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That section 800 of the Revised Statutes of the year 1870 of this State, be amended and re-enacted so as to read as follows: That if any person shall marry, the former husband or wife living and not legally divorced therefrom, the one so offending shall, on conviction, suffer imprisonment in the penitentiary, at hard labor for not less than twelve months, nor more than two years.

Sec. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That it shall be the duty of every District Judge, exercising criminal jurisdiction in this State, to give this Act specially in charge of the grand juries at each and every term of their respective courts, and it shall be the duty of every District Attorney throughout the State to aid in its rigid enforcement.

Sec. 3. Be it further enacted, etc., That all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this Act be and the same are hereby repealed.

Sec. 4. Be it further enacted, etc., That this Act shall take effect from and after its passage.

The purpose of this last Act was to [illegible] Act of 1870, on bigamy, [illegible] the proper authorities [illegible] State would be [illegible] the [illegible] Judi- [illegible] of this [illegible] withdrawn [illegible] case demanding this law. A man came from Mississippi to this State, and after a few months, married a respectable girl. It afterwards developed that he had left a wife and five children. Louisiana had no law perfect enough by which he can be prosecuted. But our Legislature says through its committee on Judiciary, that this is no matter.

But we are especially surprised that the first bill should have received such treatment. Louisiana is, we believe, the only State in the Union where there is no law to punish public adultery. The law of 1870 was intended to punish bigamy, that is, where persons marry, either one of whom are already married and their spouse is living and not legally divorced. But persons already married can live, either with married persons who are not their spouse, or with unmarried persons, publicly, and the fact be known, and still there is no law in Louisiana to punish them. We learn, on good authority, of one case in a neighboring parish where a man, after being married a few years, put away his wife and took a younger woman, and growing tired of her put her away and now lives with her sister. Another case is where a man has two women each occupying different ends of the same house. These are all white people. Now there is no law in Louisiana which forbids this. Every one cognizant of the facts in this city and State knows that the keeping of mistresses, both by unmarried and married men is no uncommon thing. There is not law in Louisiana to forbid it. Let it be be remembered these are not cases of clandestine criminal sexual intercourse to which we refer, or to which the above proposed laws referred, but to cases of public adultery where the facts can be established in court.

Mr. Jonas said that if the first proposed Act became a low it would indict from two to three hundred leading citizens in every parish in this State. This is simply horrible! Will the religious press—will the pulpit—will the multitudes of religious and moral people of this city and State fail to speak out on so grave a matter? There must be reasons for this refusal to enact so righteous a law by our legislators. What are those reasons? It cannot be that our legislative halls are polluted with public adulterers, who see their own indictment in this proposed law? Is it then that the legislators are afraid of their popularity among their constituents and dare not pass such a law? No matter what the reasons are the decent people of this State have to face the following disgraceful facts: 1. There is no law in Louisiana defining and punishing public adultery. 2. According to the statement of one of the leading men of this city, Mr. B. F. Jonas, who opposed the bill for this reason, there are two or three hundred public adulterers in every parish in the State; and, 3. The Legislature of Louisiana, professing to represent the best and highest toned people in the State, refuses to pass any law defining and punishing public adultery.

The Prosecution of the Members of the Returning Board.

When the Commission sent to Louisiana by the President last spring, concluded to surrender this State Government into the hands of Gov. Nicholls, who was not elected if President Hayes was, certain pledges were exacted from the Nicholls' Government. Some of these pledges were tacit and verbal, such, for instance, as related to the payment of the employees of the Packard Government; others were solemnly declared by joint resolution of the newly formed Legislature, and duly approved by Gov. Nicholl. The following language was used:

"Desirous of healing the dissensions that have disturbed the State for years past, and anxious that the citizens of all political parties may be free from the feverish anxieties of political strife, and join hands in honestly restoring the prosperity of Louisiana, the Nicholls Government will discountenance any attempted prosecution, from any quarter, of individuals for past political conduct."

Notwithstanding this solemn pledge, the Nicholls Government, represented by the Attorney General, proceeded at once to cause the arrest, upon an information before the criminal court in New Orleans, of Governor Wells, Gen. Anderson, and the other members of the Returning Board, upon a charge of publishing false returns. If this is not a prosecution for past political conduct then the words have no significance.

But this act of bad faith, an act which will attaint the Democratic politicians of this State somewhat as repudiation did the credit of Mississippi, is not the worst feature in these prosecutions. It has been asserted, and appears to be true, that the prosecuting officers, or those under them, deliberately picked and packed the jury which was to try, and did try Gen. Anderson. It was proven upon the trial that the jury commissioners selected the list of jurors at the Democratic committee rooms, and it was shown that there was not a colored man or a Republican on the list. No honest man will honestly pretend that this was an impartial jury. With a packed jury and a partial judge; with the white league in attendance on court, the conviction of Gen. Anderson was no surprise.

But the end is not yet.

Trade With Brazil.

General Cyrus Bussey, President of the New Orleans Chamber of Commerce, went to Washington as a special messenger to urge congressional action in favor of the establishment of lines of mail steamships from New Orleans and other American ports, to Brazilian ports. General Bussey's argument before the joint committee on Post-offices and Post-roads of Senate has been printed and the pamphlet is before us. The argument shows conclusionly that the United States is losing millions of dollars every year, by not having lines of steamers running to Rio Janero and other South American ports. England and France by subsiding steamship lines do a vast trade with South America. Besides what trade we not have with Brazil is mostly carried on in English ships greatly to our disadvantage. From 1871 to 1875 the imports into Brazil, amounted to $471,570,000, and their exports to $577,041,000, while, during the same period, the imports of the United States from Brazil amounted to $274,000,000, and the exports from the United States to Brazil amounted to only $48,853,000.

Here is a deficiency of over $225,000,000, which we pay Brazil, in five years, in gold, over the amount of goods and merchandise which we have sold to them. All this comes because we have no ships in the South American trade. English ships load at Liverpool with English merchandise, go to Brazil and sell, and buy coffee, etc., and come to New Orleans or New York, and we pay in gold for this coffee, and then these same ships take our cotton etc., to England. Thus the trade goes on. Now if we had our own ships in this trade much more American merchandise would go to South America and the profits of shipping would remain in the hands of Americans. England pays her South American ships three dollars a mile for carrying the mails, and it is a good investment. The American Congress should give a like help to American commerce.

Who is the President of the Sunday School Board?

The following explains itself and will answer many questions received from pastors:

New Orleans, Feb. 4, 1878.

Rev. Jacob Braun, Pastor First German Church, New Orleans:

Dear Brother: At your last Quarterly Conference you submitted to me the following question of law for decision, to-wit: "Who is Chairman of all meetings of the Sunday School Board, provided for in the Discipline of 1876?"

My reply is, the Preacher in Charge.

In 1857 the Bishops made the following decision, to-wit: "The Preacher in Charge of a Circuit or Station, is the Chairman of all meetings known to the Discipline, except the Quarterly Conference in the presence of the Presiding Elder." This decision was reaffirmed recently by the Bishops as applicable to the Sunday School Board, provided for by the Discipline of 1876, in paragraph 248, and sections 1–6. This decision of the Bishops covers all lack of specific statement in the Discipline on the question involved. Yours fraternally,

J. C. Hartzell, P. E.
South New Orleans District.

Rev. C. L. Madison, Austin, Texas, writes: After getting home from Conference we organized our Sunday School into a Missionary Society. This we did on the first Sunday in January, and elected the officers—President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer. The school has increased since then seventy-five scholars. We took our first collection last Sunday, which amounted to nine dollars and thirty-five cents. The scholars all seem to be well pleased with the idea of being members of the Missionary Society. We think that the School and Church will contribute increased amounts for missions and other benevolent causes this year, and I hope our sister Churches may do the same throughout the West Texas Conference.

Europe bought $1,000,000 worth of children's toys in this country last year.

Tenth Annual Report of the Freedmen's Aid Society.

The Tenth Annual Report of the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church is at hand, and is a pamphlet of eighty pages. It is the most complete report this Society has sent forth. Dr. R. S. Rust, the indefatigable Corresponding Secretary, deserves all commendation for his constant and successful labors. No one can look over this report without being satisfied that no Society in the Church has done more for the Master in proportion to its age and the amount of money and the number of laborers employed. We have already published the annual statement and an account of the Anniversary. All our preachers will receive this Report, and we trust none will fail to read it and give the facts it contains to their people. An important addition to this report are the pictures of the principal Institutions of the Society in the South.

Hardee's Map.

We are indebted to Col. Hardee for a copy of his new and complete Business Directory and Map of New Orleans. The map is folded in convenient pocket size, and is prefaced with fifty pages of reading matter giving such information concerning the city as is needed by all, relating to the city government, street railways, freight railways, banks and insurance companies. There is also a good map of Eads' Jetties, showing the mouth of the river and giving a bird's eye view of South Pass as jettied looking from the light house seaward. The map itself is a marvel of completeness, and is reliable, being altogether the best map of the city we have seen. The Map, bound in the book, is sold for 75 cents.

We spent Sabbath, the 10th inst. at Donaldsonville. Rev. Pierre Landry, the pastor, has entered heartily upon his ministerial work, in addition to his labors as State Senator. The latter work will terminate with the present session. Our Donaldsonville people are hearty Methodists. The congregation at the eleven o'clock sermon was large and the Lord's supper was participated in by a large number. Rev. Landry began with a list of twenty-five subscribers to the Southwelter and intends to double.

We met Mr. Bentley, the active editor of the Donaldsonville Chief. The Chief is one of our best country papers.

From Jacksonville, Florida.

Jacksonville, Florida, is a city of 13,000 inhabitants. The carpet-bag element have in hand most of the interests. The city is well built, has several fine hotels.

The Churches of the Methodist Episcopal Church are well located. The Trinity Society (white) have a fine lot with a good parsonage building thereon; it is a double tenement; the whole of the lower stories thereof are thrown into one audience room that makes a fine chapel; it is well seated and will accommodate a good congregation, but not so large as our wants demand. In addition to this, the society reserves as fine a church lot as we have seen for their new church, when times will justify building. On this point the Church Extension Society should bestow much care. Rev. W. W. Hicks has had charge of this Church for some time.

The property of our colored society is a well located property, consisting of a church and school, the Cookman Institute. Rev. S. B. Darnell, the able and indefatigable principal of this institution is worthy of all commendation, and his excellent lady gives herself to the good work.

Letter from Dr. Godman.

My Dear Advocate:

It is long since our pen moved for your columns, but you have been none the less loved and remembered. Our work, like the celebrated John Gilpin's nag, goes straight on beyond tree and home and town and passing traveller, and the problem is to get a chance to sit down to pen and paper. However, here is a rainy, blustering day, and business has to lie on oars for awhile.

We came North from the sunny "Crescent City" in June and plunged at once into a sea of work. We found the heat raging and the people going to the seaside. There was no large expectation of our success in any one's mind. But we were cordially received by ministers and people. We began in Grace Church, with Rev. James Morrow at our right hand; thence to St. John's Church, with Charles Hill, Esq., and his excellent lady as coadjutors; thence to Arch street Church, with Bishop and Mrs. Simpson, Dr. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. John Keene and others for active friends. Thus we began, and engagements came about as numerously as we could conveniently meet.

But during the hot months it was impossible to get large audiences in the city. Until late in August we made above expenses only enough to pay one claim for $62.50 against the Home. Late in August, by means of some donations, added to a small amount of proceeds from concerts, we were able to pay $370 on the Cornwall claim, and settle it. In the latter part of September, we began to realize more liberally from concerts. In October we were able to send Mrs. Roberts $500. Later, we sent the Freedmen's Aid Society $500. Since then we've paid something on several smaller claims. We are about ready to send another small sum to Dr. Rust. Bro. Leavitt's claim is receiving attention, also. We are full of faith in ultimate success. It means, however, patient labor and plenty of it. Thank God, He gives us good health. To Him only we ascribe the open hearts of the people, and the measure of success we have had. What is already accomplished sums up thus:

To F. A. Society	$500.00
" Mrs. Roberts	562.50
" Cornwall	370.00
" other claims	300.00
	$1,732.50

We have found many friends, and have only one thing to notice that we would desire to see changed, i. e., the people of God who are rich, with a few noble exceptions, do not seem to recognize their privilege to give largely to the cause of Christ among the Freedmen. Bro. James Armstrong, of this city, is one of the noble exceptions; so, also, is Mrs. Bowman; likewise Mrs. Lauderbach. May Heaven's choicest blessings rest on them. We are going forward trusting in the Lord, waiting his guidance in all our movements. When He shall open the way, we expect to move eastward. We hope to write you occasionally. Pray for us.

W. D. Godman.

Gulf District Stewards Meeting.

All the District Stewards on the Gulf District are hereby requested to meet me at Brookhaven on Thursday, the 28th of February, for the purpose of estimating the Presiding Elder's claim, and apportioning it amongst the charges on the District. The Preachers are requested to co-operate in this matter by urging the District Stewards, as far as possible, to attend this meeting, also to explain to them that it is according to the Discipline and law of our Church. Compound Oxygen Treatment.

We were lately in Philadelphia where we had the opportunity of testing the above method under the guidance of Drs. Starkey & Palen. Very many are the evidences of people in all ranks of life who have received great benefit from this new and wonderful discovery.

Write to Drs. Starkey & Palen for a copy of the Brochure, a book of 200 pages, which will be sent free.

The Arkansas Conference.

The Arkansas Conference met at Little Rock January 24. Bishop Harris presiding. R. W. Hammett was elected Secretary, and J. M. McCoy assistant. The last General Conference gave the Conference authority to divide if, in its judgement, it was thought best, the Bishop concurring. After considerable discussion the resolution to divide on a geographical basis was adopted. According to the Central this division was practically on the color line, and adds, "Whether this action was wise, the future alone can determine."

Our Work in North Carolina.

In North Carolina the work among the colored people has been steadily growing for years, but among the whites it received a fearful blow in the fall and winter of 1876. T. B. F. James, who had stood well in the M. E. Church South, and also held a high social position, was received into the conference a few years before and given a standing among us equal to that which he had previously held in the other denomination. As presiding elder, the missionary money for the preachers came into his hand, and that for the last quarter of the year was not paid over to the preachers as it should have been, but, with other trust funds of the Church was misapplied, and he fled the country, leaving the preachers in want, some of them in distress. Several were not able to attend the conference session a year ago on account of this loss. This was a terrible blow to the Church and some feared that the whole district would be greatly shaken.

But Rev. W. G. Matton was appointed to that field, and he has done most efficient and heroic service, and through his faithfulness the cause is saved. We are sorry to be called upon to remark that ministers in the Southern Church were found who took advantage of this misfortune to disaffect our people. Some also said that the Cape May agreement was intended to break up the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South, and urged our members to return at once to the Church South. But nearly all stood firm, and though in addition to this a number of families have returned to the North under apprehension of danger to their interest in the new order of things, the membership has actually increased, so that we have now over three thousand white members in the North Carolina Conference. Those with the 2,735 in the Asheville district, if united, would form an influential body in that State. Counting this district, which is in the Holston Conference, we have in North Carolina nearly six thousand white and over seven thousand colored members at this time.—Methodist Advocate.

Death of the Pope.

While the announcement of the death of Pope Pius IX. will create little surprise, because the people have been for months expecting such an event, it will tend to still further unsettle the already unsettled condition of European politics, and, although the question of the succession has been duly canvassed, will cause great excitement in Roman Catholic circles.

While the Catholic States of Europe are combining to influence the election of a successor to the deceased Pope, the members of the Catholic Church will pay tribute to the memory of the man who, as priest, bishop, cardinal, and Pope, was distinguished for his benevolent and sympathetic nature. When he became Pope, in 1846, Pius IX. was 54 years of age, and was ripe in church experience and learned in what may be termed church diplomacy.

He was popular with all parties in the Roman Church, and his first official acts were such as to confirm the opinion that under his direction the church would be progressive and harmonious. He instituted many reforms that seemed full of promise, but, looking at subsequent events, many writers have claimed that his actions as to reforms and improvements were the result, not so much of liberal political ideas as of his natural kindness of heart; that he did what he did from impulse rather than conviction, and that the people about him abused his generosity. There is another view, to the effect that his reformatory measures were earnestly undertaken, but that the French revolution of 1848 gave such strength to the reactionary party in the church that he was compelled to change his policy. When he left Rome in 1848 his prospect for a long reign was not a brilliant one. The circumstances of his return in 1850, at the heels of the Austrain and French armies, did not improve the political aspects of the situation. The temporal power of the Pope was on the decline, and as projects ripened for bringing about the unity of Italy the more was Pius IX. made to stand, in his political relations, antagonistic to the people of the old Papal States. With the work of Garibaldi and the triumph of Victor Emanuel the temporal power of the Pope glided out of existence.

Pius IX. was a strict churchman, and his official acts were, many of them, interpreted, even by the most earnest Roman Catholics, to be against the spirit of the age. While he lost the sympathy and support of many of the Old Catholics of Europe, and while some of his ecclesiastical acts gave the Protestants new opportunities for attack, it must be admitted that the church, speaking in a general sense, made good progress during his pontificate. That he had the affection and love of his people to a greater extent than many of his predecessors is certain, and that he had from those outside the Roman church a larger measure of sincere respect than many other pontiffs is equally certain.

His successor will be elected by a conclave of cardinals, which will assemble at once. During the setting of this conclave the cardinals will have no communication with the outside world. As a two-thirds vote is necessary to elect, and as there are many candidates, the session may be a long one, and, if influenced at all by political considerations, a stormy one.—Inter Ocean.

The Texas Border.

Gov. Hubbard has written a three-column letter to President Hayes on border affairs. He goes into the details of the causes of the Mexican raids, and gives the history of the same for the last twenty years, including Cortinas' capture of Brownsville in 1859. The Governor's specific charges are:

1. It has been a depredatory war.

2. Custom House officials have been murdered, Custom Houses taken and robbed, Post-offices robbed and burned, hundreds of citizens killed and some tortured. William McMahon, for instance, had his legs cut off and was forced to walk on the stumps. Murdoch was chained, a harrow placed on him, and he was burned while in his own house, within five miles of Corpus Christi. Women have been made prisoners and subjected to treatment too horrible to mention.

3. A million dollars worth of property has been taken from Texas owners, carried into Mexico, and sold in the public markets.

4. Mexico has furnished an asylum for the robbers and a place of deposit for their stolen goods.

5. The Mexican Government has been notified may times by ours of the existence of these evils, but it has not restrained its citizens, and it refuses to permit the United States to break up the hostile bands which commit the atrocities, and has declared an attempt to do so a cause for war.

6. Mexico has refused to execute the extradition treaty by not surrendering raiders who were themselves enemies of mankind, by breaking the jail of Storr county, releasing prisoners therefrom, and wantonly wounding our peace officers, and by turning loose fugitives under indictment for murder in Texas and regularly demanded by our Commissioner of Extradition.

7. She has afforded an asylum to Indians, and permitted them to use her territory to set on foot expeditions to invade the territory of the United States, and to wage a savage warfare upon the people of Texas, including within its scope every age and sex. Children have been captured in Texas, carried into Mexico and held as slaves.

Gov. Hubbard asserts that Texas does not want war, but simply protection from Mexican violence. He charges that the San Elizario mob who shot Howard, McBride and Atkinson to death, was composed largely of Mexican citizens. The Governor recites the horrible massacre, and says, "Mexico should make amends for the crimes committed by her citizens."

Feb. 24, 1878.—UZZIAH'S PRIDE PUNISHED.

SCRIPTURE.—2 Chron. 26:16-23.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall."—Prov. 16:18.

Topic.—"God resisteth the proud"—I Pet 5:5.

(Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.)

The king's pride (16).—Uzziah had a long and most prosperous reign. In the one chapter that is devoted to him, we get, of course, but a small glimpse of the achievements of what must have been a very energetic life. But from what is given, we can see that he had plenty of reasons, as men would count them, for being proud.

The king's provocation (17, 18).—The king succeeded in entering the holy place that never before was trod by unconsecrated feet. The priest, penetrating his design, in hot haste went after him with fourscore valiant assistants. They withstood the king, backed, though he probably was, by a retinue within call. It takes considerable moral courage to withstand the king, no matter what may be his transgressions. It is dangerous to expose royalty. No doubt that the high priest realized all this when he threw himself athwart the path of Uzziah. The two men confronted each other, the one the true, the other the would-be priest, the one animated by a high, and the other by a base resolve. The remonstrance of the priest is at once firm and temperate. "It appertaineth not unto thee, Uzziah, to burn incense unto the Lord, but to the priests, the sons of Aaron, that are consecrated to burn incense." There was in that earnest protest a reference to the penalty annexed to the transgression upon the priestly function mentioned in Num. 18:7: "And the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death." Had he been in anything but an imperious and intractable mood, he might have thought of the similar offense of [illegible] and Abiram, and spared himself the infliction of a punishment [illegible] with theirs in [illegible] and in its exhibition of the power of God. But he was in no temper to listen to remonstrance. "Go out of the sanctuary; for thou hast trespassed." They did not hesitate to command as well as to expostulate. They reminded him of [illegible] already he had [illegible] to prevent a [illegible] trespass. Neither shall it be for thine honor from the Lord. The king [illegible] thought differently. He [illegible] from his purposed act [illegible] with God and honor from [illegible]. No office permanently can [illegible] honor. When, for a time [illegible], the office is disgraced [illegible] the man elevated. [illegible] make any office honorable [illegible] will make it a by-word [illegible] reproach. No consecrated [illegible] be worthily filled by [illegible] men. All things should [illegible] decently and in order [illegible] to obtain honor [illegible] to obey all his commands [illegible] servant [illegible] before the people. [illegible] by men [illegible] upon them. [illegible] I will [illegible] despise me [illegible]." 1 Sam. [illegible] serve [illegible] honor."

[illegible] (19-23).—[illegible] wroth." Literally [illegible] with wrath. [illegible] accustomed to [illegible] with him. How little it pays to brave the anger of God!

How much Uzziah lost in those few moments of rebellion! He had expected honor—he gained an enduring infamy instead. Instead of being courted by all men, he became shunned of all. He dwelt in a "several" or "sick" house all the days of his life. He lost the kingdom he had in the vain attempt to grasp a new sort of rule. In place of becoming the chief of the temple—he never again entered within its sacred precincts. He became that most loathsome of things—a leper. He was shunned in death as he had been in life—for he was buried in a field instead of finding a sepulture in the tomb of the kings. In endeavoring to grain the whole world, he nearly lost his own soul. We say "nearly" lost, for the way that he appears to have borne his punishment indicates that, after all, he was a true child of God. Whether one is a son of the Most High is shown, not by being absolutely sinless, but by sorrow for sin and by patient submission to the Father's chastisement. No word of rebllion is recorded as escaping from his lips. On account of its almost complete concord with the facts, it is supposed that the 88th Psalm was written by Uzziah. It certainly has a most wonderful adaption to the woeful condition of a leper. "I am counted with them that go down into the pit. I am as a man that hath no strength. Free amoung the dead, like the slain that lie in the grave, whom thou rememberest no more." Ps. 88: 4, 5.

The Greek Church.

Edward King writes to the Boston Journal an interesting account of the faith, practices, and customs of the Russo-Greek Church, which includes in its membership the great bulk of the population of Russia, nearly fifty millions in number. The facts are gathered from a recent work on "Russian Society."

"The Russo-Greek Church differs from the Roman Catholic in the following essential particulars: 1. In not recognizing the primacy of the Pope. 2. In denying that the Holy Ghost proceeds from the Son. 3. In rejecting the purgatory predestination (except in the omniscience of the Deity), indulgences, dispensations, and works of supererogation, although admitting the intercession of saints in prayer. 4. It holds the necessity of complete submersion of the body at baptism, unless in urgent cases when even laymen and women may perform it; but they must immerse the infant with the baptismal words: "In the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost," if the infant can bear the immersion; if not, then sprinkling or ablution is used. Should the priest arrive in time, he reads the supplementary prayers, and performs the mystery of annointing with chrism. 5. Whilst admitting the doctrine of transubstantiation in regard to the eucharist, it affirms that the holy bread must be leavened, the wine and water being placed in the chalice; and it is only at the prayer of transubstantiation that part of the agnus is placed in the chalice. The element of wine with water is alone administered to children up to the age of seven, for fear of the elements being ejected or falling to the ground. 6. Another important distinction is, that marriage is obligatory on the secular clergy, although monogamy is a strict tenet of the church. A priest may continue to serve after his wife dies. 7. No instrumental music is allowed, but vocal music forms a most attractive portion of the service.

This church rejects all massive images of the Savior or saints as idolatrous; and pictures, mosaics, bas-reliefs and, in short, all that is represented on a flat surface, is not held a violation of the law which says: "Thou shalt not make unto thyself any graven image."

There are four great fasts; 1. Lent, or the great fast, between the carnival and Easter, of seven weeks duration, and of which the first and last are the most rigidly observed, being more specially devoted to repentance, confession, and preparing for the sacraments. 2. The Petrof, or Peter's fast, before St. Peter's Day, in June, of two to five weeks duration according [illegible] Sunday falls. 3. The [illegible], or Assumption fast, called by the people the Gos[illegible], from the first to the fifteenth of August. 4. The Philip[illegible] St. Philip's fast, of six [illegible] before Christmas. The first [illegible] Lent, is the most rigidly [illegible]. Besides the above, the [illegible] Friday of every [illegible] days, and the com[illegible] keep them [illegible] are [illegible] frequently [illegible] Con[illegible] the [illegible] to comprise mystery, rendering that ceremony supererogatory.

The church festivals and saints' days, kept with Eastern splendor, are numerous, and consequently form drawbacks to the business of life, although they greatly relieve the laboring classes.

The venerative feeling of the people is profound, and they are zealous church-goers, early and late, being due observers, besides, of all the outward forms of religion, in which the essence is sometimes absorbed. There is, however, much genuine piety to be met with; pilgrimages are frequent among all classes; donations, free gifts, offerings and alms being liberally bestowed by both rich and poor. There are no entrance fees, no distinctions for great and little, no pews, no reserved places in Russian churches; the congregation stands; all are equal before God. The Sabbath is not much observed, except as a church-going day. The shops are shut during the hours of worship, but all public places of amusement are afterwards thrown open; visits are made, and business is but little affected by obedience to this salutary ordinance of the Supreme Lawgiver."

Startling Fact.

Carefully prepared statistics show that there are over six hundred thousand drunkards in the United States, and that seventy thousand die annually who go to the grave of a drunkard. Every year one hundred thousand men and women are sent to prison under the influence of intoxication, while three hundred murders and four hundred suicides occur from the same cause. Two hundred thousand orphans are annually thrown upon the charity of the world by this curse of intemperance. Nine-tenths of the crime in our country and not less than seven-eights of the pauperism is the immediate result of whisky, and that at a cost to the Government—besides individual want—of not less than $60,000,000 every year.

Is it not high time that the Christian people of the country throw aside their niceties which have kept them aloof from the inebriate, and rush to his rescue and salvation?—Religious Telescope.

The Atlanta, Ga., Cotton Factory was started on Monday, the 28th ult., the machinery working with great accuracy. A force of three hundred hands is to be put to work, though when in full operation between six and seven hundred will be needed. The superintendent is Mr. Geo. B. Harris, of Massachusetts, a young man who has been in charge of large mills for several years. He expects to be able to turn out cloth in about two weeks.—Methodist Advocate.

The Atlanta Methodist Advocate says, February 5th: "We have a few more names on our list than we had last year on the fourth of February; but we are far below the number we had expected."

WILLIAM M. DAILY.

Wm. M. Daily, D. D., L. L. D., was born in Cashocton, Ohio, in 1812. The same year his father moved to the territory of Indiana, and located his family in Franklin county, on a farm near Brookville, the county town. There he spent his childhood days and attended the county school when there was one. Having a frail constitution, it was decided when he was quite young that he would never be fit for manual labor. When he had learned all he could at the county school, he was sent to Brookville, where he learned all that was taught there. At fifteen he left home to take charge of a school in an adjoining county and begin life for himself, which he preferred to do, when he found he could not do his share of the work on the farm, although his father was a man in comfortable circumstances. He preferred to work and be independent. He was baptized in infancy and grew up in the Church. At sixteen he exhorted and preached—the people going miles to hear him, "the boy preacher," as he was called. In 1831 he joined the Conference. In 1833 he was ordained deacon by Bishop Soule, in Madison, Indiana, where the Conference was held, and Mr. Daily was stationed.

In 1835 he was ordained Elder by Bishop Roberts.

While discharging all the duties the Church required of him as a minister, which were very laborious in those days he kept up his studies, always rising at four o'clock in the morning that he might have a few hours at his books, as well as studying on horseback when going to his appointments.

In 1835-36 he was stationed at Bloomington, Indiana, where he discharged the duties of pastor and student, graduating in 1836 in the Indiana State University. In 1837 he was agent of the Preachers' Aid Society. In 1838 he was transferred to the Mission Conference, and stationed in St. Louis. Soon after he was elected a professor in St. Charles College. He remained in Missouri until 1840, when he returned to Indiana in broken health. He rested a year or two with his father and visiting old friends. His trouble was hemorrhage of the lungs. In the spring of 1843, at the suggestion of Bishop Ames, he was called to take charge of a congregation in Madison, Indiana. Here he met and was married to Miss Permelia A. Northcraft, who survives to mourn his loss.

In the winters of 1844 and 1845 Dr. Daily was chaplain in the United States Congress, after which he was stationed at Rising Sun and Evansville, then agent for the Asbury University, then Presiding Elder of the Bloomington and Madison Districts.

In 1853 he was elected president of the Indiana State University, when, after six years of hard labor, he resigned and returned to Madison in 1859.

The parents of Mrs. Daily having died, Dr. Daily settled the business of their estate. In 1852 Dr. Daily was a member of the General Conference. In 1862 he was appointed hospital chaplain at St. Louis by Mr. Lincoln, through the recommendations of Senator Wright and Governor Morton, which position he held until the close of the war in 1865. At the close of the war, being desirous of going South, at the request of Gov. Yates, Postmaster General Dennison appointed him special mail agent. He received the degree of A. M. from the Indiana State University, and Augusta College, Ky., when Bishop Bascom was president of the latter. He received the title of D. D. from Indiana State University in 1852, and the degree of L. L. D. from the University of Louisville.

Dr. Daily became connected with the Louisiana Annual Conference in January 1869 and was appointed by Bishop Scott to the Baton Rouge District, and after serving four years he was appointed to the Upper District on which he served a term of four years. In January, 1877, Dr. Daily was made Presing Elder of the North New Orleans District, but his time of departure had come. A few days after Conference he was taken seriously ill, and in a few days passed away. Shortly before he died as Drs. Hartzell and Braun, of the Louisiana Conference, stood by his bedside the former remarked "Doctor you are almost home." His reply was "Yes almost home and all prepared." These were his last words. His funeral was very largely attended in Ames Church, New Orleans, and his remains, a few months after his death, were removed to Madison, Indiana, his old home, where they now repose.

HENRY P. TAYLOR.

Henry P. Taylor, died at Houma, La., January 15th, 1877, aged 52 years. He was born at Charlestown, South Carolina, and converted at the early age of 13. He was born in slavery, but such were his natural abilities that he received an education with the free children of his native place. He came to Louisiana in 1845, and assisted in the erection of Wesley Chapel, New Orleans. He joined the Louisiana Conference in 1873, as an Elder from the African Zion Church, and brought with him a whole congregation. He was appointed two years to Plum street, New Orleans, and two years to Houma, where he died. He was twice married. His first wife died some 19 years ago, leaving three children who are an honor to their parents. His last wife survives him, and, with those children, mourns his sudden decease. His last sickness was brief, but it found him at his post and ready to depart. Bro. Taylor died in the triumph of faith, dearly beloved by his brethren in the Church and Ministry. Their memory of him is pleasant, and he "being dead, yet speaketh." He was a fine vocalist, but his voice is mingled with the song of the redeemed in glory. Thus passed away a Christian gentleman, a dearly beloved parent and husband, and a highly respected servant of the Lord Jesus Christ. His end was peace.

The Parent of Insomnia.

The parent of insomnia or wakefulness is in nine cases out of ten a dyspeptic stomach. Good digestion gives sound sleep, indigestion interferes with it. The brain and stomach sympathize. One of the prominent symptoms of a weak state of the gastric organs is a disturbance of the great nerve entrepot, the brain. Invigorate the stomach, and you restore equilibrium to the great center. A most reliable medicine for the purpose is Hostetter's stomach bitters, which is far preferable to mineral sedatives and powerful narcotics which, though they may for a time exert a soporific influence upon the brain, soon cease to act, and invariably injure the tone of the stomach. The Bitters, on the contrary, restore activity to the operations of that all important organ, and their beneficient influence is reflected in sound sleep and a tranquil state of the nervous system. A wholesome impetus is likewise given to the action of the liver and bowels by its use. feb17tomar1.

STATE

RegUlation of Vice.

Aaron M. Powell, of New York,

CONTAINS

1. State Regulation of Vice.

A paper read before the New York Committee for the Prevention of Licensed Prostitution.

2. Regulation Efforts in America.

A paper prepared for the International Congress at Geneva, Switzerland, 1877,

3. The Geneva Congress,

embracing a sketch of the proceedings, and in full, the conclusions of the several sections of the Congress: 1. Hygiene; 2. Morals; 3. Social Economy; 4. Rescue Work; 5. Legislation.

5. New York Committee's Address to the Geneva Congress.

The author, Mr. Powell, (formerly editor of the National Anti-Slavery Standard), represented the New York Committee as a delegate in the International Congress, at Geneva, to promote the abolition of Government Regulation of Prostitution.

This is a book of great interest and importance to all students of social science; especially to all physicians, ministers, journalists and legislators, and to the intelligent and philanthropic everywhere.

Under the guise of hygiene, and of the public welfare, already several States have broached the question of regulating prostitution by law, and unless the opponents of these movements are wary we shall have in this country laws which will be disgraceful to humanity and oppressive to virtuous women, before we are aware of it. Let every one who favors justice to woman, morality in man, and purity everywhere, buy and help to spread the sale of this book where it will do the most good. Price $1.00

The Class-Leader.

His Work, and How to Do It.

With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.

BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,

Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo.............................$1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

Begins Jan'y, 1878. Try it one Year.

ONLY $3 A YEAR.

"The scope and character of the magazine shall be that of a first-class religious and literary monthly, of the brightest character attainable, and pervaded, whether in its general or religious articles, by a thoroughly Christian spirit."—Order of the Committee.

Under these directions, it will be devoted to General and Religious Literature, Biographies and Travels, Criticisms and Art.

A sufficient number of the best writers for the press are employed to furnish all the variety in the several departments which their scope and importance require to make them rich and instructive.

The editorial department will be a feature of the magazine. Rev. Dr. Curry, both experienced and successful as an editor, brings to his duties the purpose of giving his whole strength to the work before him.

Each number will contain one or more articles illustrated with Wood Engravings, in the best style of this art, adding beauty and value to the pages.

The twelve numbers for the year will contain 1,152 pages of reading-matter, which, published in book form, would make not less than fifteen volumes, worth $1.50 each, and will comprise a variety that will be more interesting and valuable to the general reader than can be procured in books for many times the yearly price of the magazine.

We earnestly request you to take the National Repository for 1878—to give it one year's trial, and thereby determine for yourselves whether it is worthy of a place in the Christian home.

MAKING CALLS.

My mamma and I went out calling to-day
The first one we called on was old Mrs. Gray.
She's lame; she's got "rheumatiz" right in her bones,
And that's why she makes twisted faces and groans.
Mamma gave her red flannel and plasters and tea,
And she gave a doll and a doughnut to me.

Then we went to John Butler's. He's got a cracked head,
He fell from the roof; he was shingling the shed.
But they sent for papa—he's the doctor, you see—
And he's growing together as fast as can be.
He called me a duck. I'd as soon be a hen,
But he looked so good natured I'll go there again.

Then we went to the house of the three Misses Spear,
They are all tall and bony, so stiff and so queer!
Miss Priscilla shook hands and said, "Do take a cheer,"
Miss Ann [illegible] a short and said, "What's your name, dear?"
Miss Jane talked with mamma 'bout missions and such,
We didn't stay long, and I didn't care much.

Then we stopped at the Brown's. They have everything nice—
Canary-birds, flowers, a black dog, and white mice,
A bushy-tailed squirrel that whirls on a wheel,
And Guinea-pigs—they have the funniest squeal!
And three little kittens, black, spotted and white.
If mamma'd have stayed, I'd have stayed there all night.

We made our last visit on Widow McCrea,
Her husband is dead. He was drowned in the sea.
She cried, and mamma cried, and I tried to cry,
But the tears would not come—I don't scarcely know why.
[illegible] in the cradle the baby was crowing,
And [illegible], and winking and looking so knowing,

That I went straight and counted her fingers and toes,
And brushed off a fly from the dear little nose,
[illegible] up her face and she stuck out her hand,
And [illegible] in a langurge I can't understand.
[illegible] laughed! Oh! of all things I've played with to-day,
[illegible] darling is sweet Baby May.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

U. S. Marshal's office, Harrisburg, Va.
Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth st., Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease itching piles, had consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the Ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. I deem it my duty to give you this well merited testimonial of so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit. Very respectfully, seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered, with night sweats, burning fever pains and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry

A Remarkable Cure.

Dr. Swayne—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs; in short it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me at the factory. EDWARD H. HAMSON, Engineer of Geo. Sweeney's Pottery, Ridge road below Wallace, Phila.

PHYSICIANS RECOMMEND IT.

Dr. Thos. J. B. Rhoads, Boyertown, Berks co., Pa., writes: "Your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry I esteem very highly; have been selling and recommending it to my patients for many years, and it always proves efficacious. It has made some remarkable cures in this section, and I consider it the best remedy with which I am acquainted.

Price, $1. Six bottles for $5. Describe symptoms in all communications, and address letters to DR. SWAYNE & SON, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia. No charge will be made for advice. Sold by druggists and dealers in medicines generally.

"For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in the body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." "And that servant which knew his Lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes; but he that knew not and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes." Both servants were guilty; one in a small degree, the other to a great extent. Each are punished, and the stripes are in proportion to their guilt. There can be no variation in the duration of their punishment; it shall be evelasting in the case of all who die impenitent. Hence, this variation must be in degree. But annihilation admits of no degrees, but inflicts the same penalty, both in duration and degree, upon the impenitent, who differ immensely in point of guilt. It deals out the same condemnation to the child who cherishes an unholy thought toward his playmate, and the hardened pirate, who bathes his glittering blade in the heart's blood of the innocent and defenseless. It is evident that the punishment of the wicked will be measured by the number and malignity of their crimes; and as annihilation admits of no such adaptation, it derives no countenance from the Scriptures.

3. This destruction can not be annihilation, for that would be most acceptable to the wicked, and would strip the law of God of all its terror, which the apostle urged as a persuasive to a Christian life, and there would be nothing in the terrific quakings of Sinai to arrest the infatuated votary of pleasure in his downward career. Would a God of infinite wisdom, in providing restraints to deter the wicked from injuring the interests of his moral government, affix such penalties as would be most congenial to those engaged in this bitter warfare? No; Jehovah would not thus furnish fuel to feed the flames of rebellion. The idea of being struck out of existence at the termination of a wicked life, would let loose the basest passions of the human heart, and pour a deluge of desolation upon the world. The child in sin would speedily become a giant, and would bid defiance to every holy influence, and console himself with the thought that he should soon be in oblivion, forever freed from conscience and sin. Then all those unpleasant emotions, those goadings of conscience, that wring the sinner's heart in his crimes, shall soon repose in the tomb of annihilation! If this doctrine be true, the guilty who are troubled with their consciences have every inducement to stifle the gentle whisperings of the heavenly monitor, by plunging into dissipation and vice, for there would be no eternity in which they must suffer the merited punishment of a wicked life. Reason and revelation frown most bitterly upon this cherisher of crimes and destroyer of happiness. The nature of man pleads with immortality.

4. This destruction implies continued existence accompanied with positive pain. A thing is destroyed when it is rendered unfit for the purpose for which it was prepared. A watch is an exhibition of ingenuity and skill. Its design is to measure time, and it is of immense value. But blot out the figures on the face, by which the different periods of time are delineated, and the watch is rendered unfit for its prepared use; as a watch, it is completely destroyed. Man was created for happiness and usefulness. The moral image of God, which consists in righteousness and true holiness, was impressed on his nature; but it has been blotted out, completely obliterated by sin. Thus man has destroyed himself, as far as happiness is concerned, and has rendered himself unfit for usefulness, and so [illegible] his fallen [illegible], fit only for eternal destruction. This shows that this destruction is not the cessation of existence, but the endurance of positive pain.

The Murphy Movement.

One winter night, near eleven o'clock, the writer having been invited by Mr. Murphy to share his lodging at the Monongahela House until morning, to find opportunity to talk over certain plans for the temperance campaign, on our way we went from the "Old Home" to the press-room of a weekly newspaper, a few blocks aside, to attend to an item of business, perhaps to see by the first impression that all was running well. It was during the January thaw, and the ground was slushy with mud and soot and snow, making some of the minor thoroughfares almost impassable. The wind was blowing fiercely about the eaves and through the courts and lanes of the city. It was altogether a gloomy hour. As we passed down a narrow street, an object was seen moving cautiously but awkwardly into a secluded corner, evidently as if to avoid observation. Mr. Murphy, always alert and ready, saw through the darkness a man. Mr. Murphy's companion saw but a shadow, and nothing more; and even that was so obscure that no curiosity was excited. But what was a mere shadow to the one was a human being to the other; and just as it (he) was about to disappear behind a dilapidated wall, he was accosted by the Reformer.

"Hello! my good friend. Hold on a bit, if you please. I want to see you."

The shadow—the man—stopped, hesitatingly, and yet as if bidden by a voice that he could not escape, and awaited our approach.

"Good evening, my good man; why were you not at the temperance meeting, to-night?" said Mr. Murphy, in a pleasant tone, stepping off the street into the hiding-place, and offering the stranger his hand. "We need you at our meetings."

"D-do you, sir, have r-reference to the M-murphy meetings?" inquired the man—the shadow.

"Yes, the temperance meetings at the 'Old Home,'" said Mr. Murphy. "My dear fellow, we need you there."

"And this is Mr. Murphy himself," ventured the interested third party of the little group, by way of introduction.

The stranger, as if touched by a thrill from some magnetic battery, stared at the one and then at the other of his volunteer comrades, and, bewildered at the situation, questioned.

"W-which one of these r'spect'ble gen'lmen, if I may be s'bold, is Mr. Murphy? I m-must not p-permit myself to be mistaken in this 'm portant m-matter."

On being assured that the gentleman who was at that moment holding him by the right hand, and whose left hand was resting upon his own shoulder, was Mr. Murphy, the poor wanderer pressed up close to the great, warm-hearted evangelist, and put his head in a trusting attitude against his manly breast. The man was partially intoxicated, and, belated at some saloon, was wending his way homeward, fearful of the police and ashamed to be met by his acquaintances. Hence the attempt to hide, when he caught sight of two persons likely to cross his path.

"Mr. M-murphy, s-sir" said he, with the simplicity of a child, "I didn't know I was needed anywhere, by anybody in this world."

"Yes, my brother, we need you at our meetings. We all need you. Your family needs you. The Lord needs you."

This was a new thought. It was like an inspiration. That he, so long and so utterly forsaken, so chained in the bondage of habit, so neglected and avoided and uncared for, and yet, to be needed! And there, standing in the snow, well on toward the midnight hour, in that lonely place, a prayer was lifted to the skies—an audible supplication for the Savior's help, while the temperance apostle held the stranger by the hand, a brother indeed, and the astonished prodigal leaned tenderly and lovingly upon the bosom of the helper who had hailed him in distress. It was a beautiful sight. No crowd of worshipers, on any great day of the feast, in any of the world's magnificent cathedrals, was so worthy of commemoration by artist or poet, as the Reformer, unseen of men, holding precious converse with the sinner in the cold, winter night, and warming his desolate soul with the word of life. The sinner was arrested by love. There was no catechising, no upbraiding, no professionality of service, no formality, no fear. Perfect love casteth out fear anywhere and under all circumstances. It was just about as Christ and the Apostles reached and rescued men. The wayside preaching of the Gospel is the most eloquent of all. No ritual compares in power to the glad new words by the well-curb on the mount, or at the grave-side.—BY ALEXANDER CLARK, D. D., in Frank Leslie's Magazine for March.

Henry M. Stanley.

I send you the following particulars concerning H. M. Stanley's youthful days. They are gleaned from the "Darlunydd," a paper published in the Principality of Wales:

H. M. Stanley was born in Denbighshire, North Wales, in the year 1840. His father's name was John Rowlands, who lived on a farm called "Segrwyd." His mother was the daughter of one Moses Parry, a butcher of Blas Pigott. About the time when Henry was born the family moved to a house in the vicinity of Denbigh's ancient castle. When but very young he was sent to school at Llanelwy, and from there to another at Treffynon (Holywell), and later to another at Wyddgrug as an assistant teacher. From there he came to America, working his way as a cabin boy, and landed at New Orleans with but little money in his pocket. It was not long before he found a situation in the office of a merchant, by the name of Stanley, in the city of New Orleans. This merchant became greatly attached to young John Rowlands on account of his superior excellence and faithfulness, and, being himself without children, resolved to make him his heir, with the understanding that the young man was to adopt his name. From that time John Rowlands, the Welshman, became Henry M. Stanley, the American.

However, the merchant suddenly died intestate, leaving young Stanley to turn in another direction to earn his daily bread. Two years after this, and at the beginning of our late civil war, we find him in the Southern army. In one of the first battles of 1862 he was taken prisoner, but he succeeded in making his escape, and through many hardships and privations he reached his mother's house in the village of Bodelwyddan, near Rhyl, in his native country.

In 1863 we find him again in the heat of battle, but this time a seaman in the United States navy, where he was soon promoted to be the admiral's secretary on board the Ticonderoga.

In 1866 he again visited his mother at Bodelwyddan. At this time he visited Denbigh several times, and though it was well known that his adopted name was Stanley, his acquaintances invariably addressed him by the name, John Rowlands, and he wrote his name as John Rowlands in the visitor's register at Denbigh Castle.

He left Wales the third time and came to New York, where he was engaged to go with General Hancock's expedition against the Indians, in which service he manifested a heroic spirit, and a remarkable discriptive power. After his return to New York he was appointed correspondent for the New York Herald, in which capacity he repaired with the English army to Abyssinia. Returning to London he visited his mother, and remained a short time at Denbigh. From there, as representative of the New York Herald, he proceeded to the Continent, and while in Madrid received a communication from Mr. Bennett, Jr., urging him to go to Africa. From that time forward his history is well known.—Interior.

The grandest operations, both in nature and grace, are the most silent and imperceptible. The shallow brook babbles in its passage, and is heard by every one, but the coming of the season is silent and unseen. The storm rages and alarms, but its fury is soon exhausted and its effects partial and soon remedied; but the dew, though gentle and unheard, is immense in quantity and the very life of large portions of the earth. And these are pictures of the operations of grace in the church and in the soul. —Cecil.

A Call.

In the life of Dr. Nathan Bangs is recorded a striking warning against trusting in impressions. When he traveled in Canada as one of the founders of Methodism there, he was making his way with great difficulty through the snows on the road to one of his preaching appointments, when he saw some distance back from the highway a house almost buried in the snow. Sermons were few and far between in those days in that barren country, and the itinerant evangelist used to stop at the isolated habitations to pray with and exhort their families. Dr. Bangs felt, as he saw this house, that he ought not to pass it without delivering his message. It was important that he should hasten on his course to his appointment; his jaded horse, as well as himself, suffering under the pelting storm; the passage from the highway to the house was obliterated and would be laborious through the drifts; yet he could not get rid of his impression; he attempted to reason it down; he passed the house and was resolute to go on, but the impression deepened momentarily; it seemed an inspiration; it admonished him that he was evading his duty, and that souls in the neglected habitation might be lost through his faithlessness. He had passed it some distance, when he could no long resist the inward impulse; turning his horse back he made his way through the almost impassable snows toward the building; he shouted to its inmates to open, but none appeared; he got nearer, and after straining his lungs in the wintry air to call them out, he dismounted, and, opening a window, saw that it was a deserted house. The only hearers for him there were fasting rats. The veteran evangelist records that this taught him a valuable lesson—never to follow inward impulses that could not be justified by his common sense.

The English Alphabet.

One of the principal difficulties in learning the English language is the inexplicable manner in which most of the words are spelled, the twenty-six letters of the alphabet vieing with each other to represent the forty or forty-two sounds of the language in the most disorderly and bungling manner.

Be the capacity of a child ever so good, yet he must spend years in learning these "curiosities of literature," while a foreigner can only master our noble language by a vast expense of labor, patience and time.

The protean nature of the vowel sounds is familiar to all. A few amusing examples will show that the consonants are nearly as bad:

B makes the road broad, turns the ear to bear and Tom into tomb.

C makes limb; climb, hanged changed, a lever clever, and transports a lover to clover.

D turns a bear to beard, a crow to a crowd and makes anger danger.

F turns lower regions to flower regions.

G changes a son to a song and makes one gone!

H changes eight into height.

K makes now know and eyed keyed.

L transforms a pear into a pearl

N turns a line into linen, a crow into a crown and makes one none!

P metamorphoses lumber into plumber.

Q, of itself, has no significance.

S turns even to seven, makes have shove, a word a sword, a pear a spear, make slaughter of laughter, and curiously changes having a hoe to shaving a shoe!

T makes a bough bought, turns here to there, alters one to tone, changes ether to tether, and transforms the phrase "allow his own" to "tallow this town!"

W does well, e. g., hose are whose, are becomes ware, on won, omen women, so sow, vie view; it makes an arm warm, and turns a hat into—what?

Y turns fur to fury, a man to many, to to toy, a rub to a ruby, ours to yours, a lad to a lady!

National Cemeteries.

When the war closed, liberal provision was made for the disbanded volunteers. Thousands of the maimed were furnished with artificial limbs. The first year after the war nearly seven thousand artificial members were thus supplied.

Multitudes had fallen on many a bloody field. From many a fatal camp and prison in all parts of the South untold thousands had gone to their long homes. Their remains were carefully gathered up and committed to cemeteries, of which there are in all the country three hundred and eight where the dead soldiers lie. Of these, eighty-one are national cemeteries—

> "Where sleep the brave who sank to rest
> By all their country's wishes blest."

In these national cemeteries two hundred and fifty-one thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven brave, honored soldiers are kept by the "bivouac of the dead."

The spot where each lies had a head-board suitably inscribed, which has been or is to be replaced with marble. The grounds are beautifully adorned and carefully tended. They are inclosed and guarded. The mounds are grass-covered and dressed. For their decoration an annual holiday is observed. A grateful people throng the national cemeteries to honor the patriot dead.

> "They deck the turf that wraps their clay,
> And there they dress a sweeter sod
> Than fancy's feet have ever trod."

The national cemeteries are in most of the Southern States. They cover an area of eighteen hundred acres, procured at a cost of one hundred and seventy thousand dollars. When completed they will have cost about three and a half millions of dollars. Thus the dead volunteers are honored, and thus their memory is cherished.—National Repository for March.

The Wife.

It needs no guilt to break a husband's heart. The absence of content, the mutterings of spleen, the untidy dress and cheerless home, the forbidding scowl and deserted hearth—these, and other nameless neglects, without a crime among them, have harrowed to the quick the heart's core of many a man, and planted there, beyond the reach of cure, the germ of dark despair. O, may woman, before that sight arrives, dwell on the recollections of her youth, and cherishing the dear idea of that tuneful time, awaken and keep alive the promise she so kindly gave. And though she may be the injured—not the injuring one—the forgotten, not the forgetting wife—a happy allusion to the hour of peaceful love—a kindly welcome to a comfortable home—a smile of love to banish hostile words—a kiss of peace to pardon all the past—and the hardest heart that ever locked itself within the breast of selfish man will soften to her charms and bid her live, as she had hoped, her years of matchless bliss, loved, loving and content—the source of comfort and the spring of joy.—Chambers' Journal.

A Mother's Influence.

The late Thos. H. Benton who was so long in public life and surrounded by temptations, paid the following tribute to his mother:

"My mother asked me never to use any tobacco, and I have never touched it from that time to the present day; she asked me not to game, and I have not, and I cannot tell who is winning or who is losing in games that can be played. She admonished me, too, against hard drinking, and whatever capacity for endurance I may have at present and whatever usefulness I may attain in life, I attribute it to having complied with her pious and correct wishes. When I was seven years of age she asked me not to drink, and then I made a resolution of total abstinence, at a time when I was sole constituent member of my own body, and that I have adhered to it through all the time, I owe to my mother."

A Dog Story.

The most sagacious dog of all the canine tribe of which tradition tells an authentic history lived and died in China. He was the property of Sin Chun, and dog and master were inseparable companions and greatly attached to each other. Sin Chun fell asleep one day in a thicket and the dog lay watching at his side. The Governor of the province was out on a hunting expedition and ordered the grass of the thicket to be fired to drive the game out of it. The dog saw the fire come sweeping on and tugged at Sin Chun's clothing to waken him. The man slept heavily—probably opium or hasheesh was flying away somewhere with his five senses. The dog knew his duty and did not hesitate to do it. He plunged into a stream near by and came out dripping. Thus he carried water and rolled it off on the grass around his master. This was repeated until the grass was saturated and the billows of flame were stayed at a safe distance from Sin Chun. But the dog was fatally burned. When Sin Chun awoke he found his friend dead at his side. He saw how it was in a minute and told the Governor, who caused the animal to be put in a handsome tomb, which he called the "Tomb of the faithful dog." It was worth a dog's dying for.

Bruce and Lamar.

Senator Bruce has received from the Mississippi Legislature a certified copy of resolutions passed by that body, approving his vote on the Matthews resolution and his attitude toward the Bland silver bill. In the same resolutions Lamar's opposition to the silver legislation was condemned. These resolutions were introduced by an ex-Confederate, and were so unexpected that Bruce is overwhelmed with gratification. The Legislature has passed resolutions instructing both Bruce and Lamar to vote for the Bland bill.

A Capuchin friar in Turin has constructed a large and complicated work of mechanism by which the passion or sufferings of the Savior, from His death on the cross, are marvelously represented. On a constantly receding platform the figures appear and the scenes change. Not only are the movements of the automata life-like, but the figures and scenery are masterpieces of art. The crowd clamoring for His death is represented by a very numerous group of figures, which are wonderfully distinct in action and appearance. The falling beneath the cross on the way to Calvary is painfully graphic. To render quite audible the lashing of the whips of the soldiers is one of the functions of the machinery. The scenes at the place of execution and the death of the Savior are said to be beyond praise, and a writer in a Turin paper declares that the extraordinary mechanism has but one imperfection—the capacity of making the figures artculate intelligibly. This imperfection is chiefly evident when the words are exchanged between the Redeemer and the penitent thief. The sounds emitted from the figures are in this instance ludicrous, but the friar hopes to remedy this defect, and his mechanism will, in all likelihood, be an object of wonder at the Paris exhibition.

Jezebel.

This name is a very noted one, in the bible annals. The whole account of the relation between the rival kingdoms of Judah and Israel, involves the name and character of that gifted but bad woman.

Jezebel was the daughter, of Ethbaal, king of Zidon, whom Ahab had married. The alliance was an unholy one and an unlawful one, for this woman was from an idolatrous country and was herself an idolator.

We do not learn from the Scripture account that her relations to Ahab ever changed her mind or heart. She still remained the same in her belief and practice, using both witchcraft and idolatry. Instead of her conversion to the worship of the true God, she perverted the hearts of the people away from the true God, maintaining within the territory of Israel the currupt forms of Baal worship.

She was not only a strong woman but a rich one, and so she maintained four hundred false or wicked priests, prophets or teachers of the groves sacred to Ashtaroth.

Ahab first sinned in making such an alliance, and his whole life was troubled on account of it. While she fed her four hundred priests of Ashtaroth the king supported four hundred prophets of Baal. Here is the sad spectacle of a people for whom God had done much offending him by the grossest conceivable wickedness. It is said in 1 Kings 16:32, "And he reared up an altar for Baal in the house of Baal which he had built in Samaria. And Ahab made a grove."

But judgment must come. A dearth followed which lasted three years and six months. At this dire visitation Jezebel wreaks her vengeance on the prophets of Israel, committing murder by putting them to death. The wholesale slaughter of the prophets was planned to put to death Elijah, to whom she attributed this calamity. Elijah had successfully eluded her pursuit. A long contest follows between Elijah and Ahab which has about it all the fascination of a romance.

Jezebel was a woman, but she was not a very tender one. She was so enraged at God's prophet on account of the defeat on Carmel and the slaughter of the prophets of Baal that she uttered this threat, "So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as one of them by to-morrow this time." Elijah fled for once before a wicked woman. She meant every word she said.

Ahab, the weak and silly king, desired to possess a certain piece of ground, a vineyard, belonging to Naboth, who could not lawfully sell it; and so Jezebel, in the king's name, proclaimed a fast, set Naboth on high, then had him tried and put to death on a charge of blasphemy. She gained her point, but the prophet of God was on her track. Meeting Ahab in the vineyard of Naboth, Elijah told him that his blood should be licked up by the dogs in the place where Naboth's blood was spilled, and that Jezebel's body should be eaten by the walls of Jezreel by the dogs; which prophetic declarations were literally fulfilled.—2 Kings, 9:33, et seq.

She made an attempt to capture the heart of Jehu when he went to Jezreel in search of her. "She painted herself and tired her head, and looked out of the window." She supposed he would be charmed with her beauty and be induced to take her for his wife. But no; he had come to find her and slay her, and seeing the two men, who were his confederates, looking down from the window, bade them throw her down, which they did. "And some of her blood was sprinkled upon the wall and upon the horses, and he trode her under foot." Orders were afterwards given for her burial, but to their own astonishment they found no more of her than her skull, her feet and the palms of her hands. It was said: "The dogs shall eat Jezebel by the walls of Jezreel." The prophet had said: "The carcass of Jezebel shall be as dung upon the face of the field in the pasture of Jezreel. So that they shall not say, 'This is Jezebel.'" Several things are learned here:

1. Unholy alliances are always dangerous. "Evil communications corrupt good manners." "Where fore separate yourselves, and come ye out from among them and touch not the unclean thing," etc.

2. High station in life does not [illegible] from guilt. A king or [illegible] be as guilty as the humblest [illegible]. All souls are accountable [illegible] sin is sin, whether [illegible] or poor.

3. [illegible] pow- [illegible] she is more dangerous than man. Elijah was not afraid of Ahab, but he fled before Jezebel in dismay.

4. Judgment may be for a time delayed, but it is written, "'Vengeance is mine, and I will repay,' saith the Lord." "Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily therefore the heart of the sons of men is continually set in them to do evil." "Be sure your sin will find you out." "Sow to the winds and reap the whirlwind."

Albert Collier McDonald.

Only a short time since we were enabled to secure the facts of the life and death of our friend and brother, Rev. A. C. McDonald, of Mississippi.

Rev. A. C. McDonald, D. D., was born in Henry county, Indiana. He died March 10th, 1877, in Marshall county, Miss., sixteen miles from his home which was at Waterford, Miss. He was returning from his appointment where he had been to preach and hold a quarterly meeting.

Dr. McDonald was converted when a lad and was licensed to preach when quite young. Like Samuel he was called to his sacred work when but a child. At first he feared that his youth would be against his success, but his earnest spirit gave him many friends. His first purpose was to enter the regular work at once but he became convinced that he ought to take a collegiate course and with his brother James, who went to his rest years ago, he attended the Asbury University, at Greencastle, Indiana. He graduated in 1853, and at once entered the regular work of the ministry; joining the Iowa Conference on trial the same year. His first appointment was at Maquoketa, Iowa. In 1854 he was appointed to Keasauqua. In 1855 he was received into full connection and sent to Birmingham. In 1856 to Ottumwa, and in 1857 he was appointed in charge of the Des Moines City Mission. In 1859 he was transferred to the Missouri Conference and was appointed to the Heading Charge, St. Louis. In 1861 he was appointed to Jefferson City where he remained two years and then entered the United States Army as Chaplain.

Of his services as Chaplain we have no particulars, but we run no risk in saying that his work in the army was such as became and did honor to the christian ministry. The close of the war found him in New Orleans, and he at once entered upon the work of reorganizing and establishing the Methodist Episcopal Church in this State. He connected himself with the Mississippi Mission Conference in December, 1866, which then included Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi. In 1867 Bishop Simpson appointed him principal of the Thomson Biblical Institute, an institution established in New Orleans for the education of young men for the Ministry. He taught and lectured for a year. In 1868 the Mississippi Mission Conference was divided into the Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi Conferences, and Dr. McDonald was made Presiding Elder of the Holly Springs District, which then included the Northern half of the State of Mississippi. The following year the Mississippi Conference was formally organized and Dr. McDonald was elected its Secretary, which office he held every year until his death. In 1872 the Freedmen's Aid Society established Shaw University at Holly Springs, Miss., and Dr. McDonald was made President, which position he held four years, resigning only because of his shattered health, through over work. A large number of the present members of the Mississippi Conference spent more or less time at Shaw University and now testify to the faithful and godly example and instructions of Dr. McDonald. He was twice a member of the General Conference, in 1872 and 1876. While President of Shaw University he also acted as its Financial Agent, besides a good share of the time being Presiding Elder of a District. His multiplied labors would have been too much for a man of robust physical constitution. But Dr. McDonald was not a strong man physically. It was only his unconquerable will to do and succeed for the Master which enabled him to labor as long as he did.

The circumstances of his death were peculiarly sad. He was away from home holding his quarterly meeting. Feeling unwell he started on horseback to go home. He was accompanied by a friend, Rev. Jas. J. Shumpert for a few hours, and he then journeyed alone. He spent the first night at the house of a friend, where a sister of his, who was teaching school in the neighborhood, boarded. In the night his moans aroused his sister, who slept in an adjoining room. On entering his room she found him in great distress, but after bathing his head he slept. The following morning, after a light breakfast, he started on his journey, his thought being that he must reach his home. During the day he was met by some friends and he was preaching aloud while passing along the road. They spoke to him, and coming to himself he told them he was sick, and he assured them that he would go but little further and would then stop for the night. But he rode on. Other friends met him later in the day and he was off his horse kneeling by the roadside as if in prayer. The friends waited some moments for him to arise, but as he did not they went to him and he told them that he was very sick. He was helped on his horse and riding a short distance further stopped at the house of a friend, still sixteen miles from home. Here he rapidly grew worse and the next evening, Saturday, he died. His wife was sent for Friday night. One of the children was very sick and it was supposed could not live. The stricken wife wrapped her, as she supposed, dying child, in her arms and rode that sixteen miles in a rough wagon, through a cold atmosphere, only to reach her husband's dying bed in time to see him breath his last, but not in time to receive one look of fond recognition. The last conscious act of the dying man was to refuse a drink of brandy offered by his friends, who supposed it would prolong his life.

Dr. McDonald died the death of a martyr to the cause of Christ among the colored people of the South. He gave his brilliant and cultured intellect to their education. His work among them deprived him of all social recognition and subjected him to every sort of proscription and at times of persecution from the white people of his state, but in the spirit of his Master he went forward in his mission. His ambition for the good of the people he died to help, was such that no labor was too great which would help them. As college president he would teach all the week and on Saturdays and Sundays travel far and near to preach, holding quarterly meetings, lecturing on education, helping young men who wanted to go to school and raising money to pay the workmen on the University building. Uninvited to, and often spurned from the homes of white people, who professed to be Christians and were prepared to entertain him, he was compelled to seek the hospitality of our colored people. At some points those accommodations were good, but often in the smaller places the accommodations were such as to severely try his delicate constitution. Only those who have traveled through the smaller towns and the country places of the South during the winter, can realize now many privations are suffered by even those who are in moderately comfortable circumstances.

Dr. McDonald was an Associate in the Editorship of the SOUTHWESTERN in 1873 and 1874. He took a very deep and active interest in the building up of the paper.

We shall never forget the Memorial services held in the late Mississippi Conference. The words spoken were few but the feeling manifested was such as could only come from the hearts of those who truly loved and respected the departed brother.

Dr. McDonald was a noble specimen of Methodist preacher. He had culture, piety and holy zeal. His works do follow him. His name will always be held in precious momory in Mississippi. His crown is won, and its many stars will shine forever. May the blessed Master comfort the stricken wife and watch over and care for the bereaved children.

The Louisiana Folly.

Awaiting further developments in the Returning Board Prosecution, we publish the following from the New York Herald as expressing our views on some points involved:

"There is one thing in the persecution of Gen. Anderson in New Orleans more conspicuous than even its cruelty and injustice, and that is its complete folly. That the law officers of Louisiana should feel it their duty to bring Anderson to trial, had he been accused of grave crimes, in the ordinary course of indictment, would not have surprised any one. And if they had then performed their duty with fairness, no matter how firmly, and no matter what the result to Gen. Anderson, the people of the North would have regarded the matter as not concerning them in the least. They would even have approved of the late-born zeal of the Louisiana authorities in executing their laws, and would not have troubled themselves very much with any violation of real or reported understanding about immunity for "political offenses." Indeed, the people of the United States do not, as yet, understand very clearly in what "political" offenses consist, as distinguished from other violations of law, and they do not feel anxious to see any such distinction set up. But they do understand what decency and justice and reason are in criminal prosecutions, and they see a plentiful lack of these features in the proceedings against Gen. Anderson. They see an arbitrary Judge, whose previous political career has badly stained his name; a prosecuting attorney who was the leader of the revolutionary White League; a jury reputed to be packed; a harsh and unjust refusal of bail; a conviction, secured by a trick, deceiving the colored jurors with a useless "recmendation to mercy." All these things they clearly perceive, and they naturally reason from them that the trial is not a legitimate procedure, required by law and resulting in satisfying justice, but a mere piece of political persecution, under the forms of law.

Nothing could be more unfortunate for the South than for its leading State to produce such an impression as this. We are aware that the leaders of Democratic opinion in the South care very little what impression they may make on the rest of the country. But that is only another sign of their obstinate foolishness. In one sense they are independent of the North. They have control of the State Governments of their own section, and under the Federal Constitution they can make and break State laws very much as they may choose. But in another sense they are not so independent. The material and moral interests of their section require that the best feeling possible should exist between the people of the South and of the rest of the country. That feeling is necessary to the steady development of Southern resources, Southern trade, and Southern industry. The first condition of its existence is that the Southern States should be politically at peace; that their Governments should be administered impartially, and that no more prejudice should be felt by a man brought before their courts because of his politics than would be experienced in New York or New England.

Nor this alone, the bitterness of the past within these States has been a nuisance and an evil to their own people. Entirely apart from the feeling of the North, and the injury which its alienation must work to the South, political tranquillity is a prime necessity in that region. There is very little doubt that in nearly all the Southern States, for a long time to come, the Democrats could afford to be not only just but generous toward their opponents. They have a firm hold on public favor. The real convictions as well as the prejudices of the people, bind them to the Democratic organization. But whether the party can or cannot afford to be just, no Southern State can afford to be ruled by a party that is not just. There is a general lack of confidence in the stability of law and order in the South, which nothing will overcome but the convincing evidence of experience. When it is shown beyond question that Republicans as well as Democrats can live quietly, safely, and on equal terms with their fellow-citizens in the South, a new era will commence for that section. Then, and not till then, it will share in the general distribution of capital and labor, energy and intelligence, which has spread over the country in every direction, but which, unfortunately, has been arrested when it passed the Southern border. In many ways, the South is on a peculiarly sound footing. It has natural resources in great abundance; it possesses many more of the advantages of settled communities than did the West, when, forty years ago, it began its marvelous career; its trade is firmly established and its commercial credit good; but it does not make the progress it ought, simply because of the impression made by just such follies as the persecution of Anderson, that there is no settled political order there.

This impression need not exist. It would be a very easy matter for the Southern leaders to break it up in a few years by simply restraining their passionate animosities, avoiding all useless excitement, and managing their political affairs with prudence, good sense and fairness. They lost one golden opportunity after the war was over. With reasonable self-restraint and adroitness they could have promptly taken possession of their own governments, and while giving ample room to Northern men sincerely and honestly identified with their new homes, could have barred out the "carpet-baggers." This they neglected, preferring the gratification of their hatreds and their vanity to the service of their States and their country. The Anderson incident implies that this foolish disposition is not yet overcome; but, until it is the so-called victory of local self-government in the South will prove barren of really beneficial results.

Philip Phillips.

Philip Phillips, the noted author and singer, is now making a tour of the South giving Evenings of Sacred Song. A Richmond, Virginia, paper, in speaking of his last evening of Sacred Song in Centenary Church in that city, says:

"Rarely, indeed, has a Richmond audience so rich a treat. Mr. Phillips was in excellent voice and spirits and sang with soul-stirring power. Wet eyes told plainly that sacred song was doing its work. So wrapt was the attention of the audience, that when the closing hymn was announced with the remark, "The service has occupied an hour and a half," his hearers started with an exclamation of surprise, some affirming it could not have been one-half of that time."

Philip Phillips sings on Monday night, Feb. 25, in Ames Methodist Episcopal Church in this city, and on Wednesday night, Feb. 27, in Union Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church. He sings for the benefit of the churches.

Two Reports.

We place no reliance upon the report that as President Hayes has not as yet by any official act recognized Governor Nicholls, he may yet seek some legal way in which to recognize Governor Packard. The report states that as the United States Senate has admitted Kellogg, it has recognized the Packard government, and the President could make this the basis of action in recognizing Packard as Governor.

But the Nicholls government will remain. No matter if it was, as is claimed, established by murder, bribery and force, there is no constitutional way in which to change it, even if a change would now be considered desirable.

There is another report, however, in which we do place some reliance. It is this: If Republicans are to be persecuted and driven to the wall by Democratic courts and judges under the forms of law in the South, then the leniency of the Administration toward the large number of Southern men indicted for intimidation and murder under the enforcement acts, especially in South Carolina and Louisiana, will cease, and the cases be re-opened and vigorously prosecuted. We have some faith in this report. Perhaps Providence will use the anger and folly of Democratic leaders, even after they have gained complete political supremacy in the South, to rouse the moral sense of the Administration and the nation to do their duty in punishing the murderers of defenseless colored people and their friends, because they were Republicans.

N. W. Ayer and Son.

This enterprising and reliable advertising firm in Philadelphia very justly holds a high rank among the business houses of the country. Their advertising agency is now one of the largest of the kind in America, having thousands of newspapers constantly on file, and extending in its ramifications from the British Provinces to Mexico, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Several years' business experience with this firm enables us to speak unqualifiedly of its reliability in every particular.

Their latest publication is their Manual for Advertisers, an invaluable hand-book for all who desire to advertise in any part or the whole of the United States. Every matter of detail as to locality, name, style and circulation of the papers, and the expense per line for one month or longer, is given, so that at a glance the advertiser can have all the facts he needs in placing his advertisements in such papers and localities as he may select. Estimates are furnished free to all who desire.

Sunday School Conferences.

Rev. J. B. Ford, our General Sunday School Agent for the South, is to spend three weeks in Louisiana soon, holding Sunday School Conferences. The New Orleans Preachers' Meeting last Thursday appointed a committee consisting of Revs. J. H. McCarty, J. Braun and M. Dale to arrange programme, etc., for the conferences to be held in this city. Full particulars next week.

Mississippi Conference Minutes.

The Minutes of the Mississippi Conference will be ready to send to the Presiding Elders this week.

The Publishing Committee, Rev. L. Bradford, and the printer, Mr. E. D. Elliott, have done their work well.

Methodist Hymn Books.

The new Methodist Hymn Book will be published in a few weeks. We will let our people know the exact time, and be prepared to supply promptly the demands of all.

Truly times changes. United States Senator Bruce, of Mississippi, is a colored man and sits in the seat once occupied by Jefferson Davis. His colleague is Mr. Lamar an honored son of his State and of the South. Mr. Bruce voted in favor of the Matthews' silver resolution, and Mr. Lamar against it. As a result the Democratic Legislature of Mississippi passed a resolution thanking the colored man for his his vote and severely criticising Mr. Lamar for his.

The United States Senate has passed a bill appropriating $275,000 to purchase the Freedmen's Bank building in Washington. This will insure another dividend of twenty per cent. to the depositors of the defunct institution.

It seems certain that the bill establishing two lines of mail steamers from the United States to Brazil will pass Congress. One line will start from New York and one from New Orleans, so that there will be one out-bound steamer from the United States the first or fifteenth of each month. The New Orleans line will touch at Galveston.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. J. F. Marshall, Alexandria, La., sends subscribers and adds: "A revival is in progress in our church. Three persons have been converted. Pray for us that the good work may go forward."

C. E. Alexander, Mason, Tenn.: "We are making improvements in our church and expect to give it a new roof. We have a new bell. The family of our pastor, Brother Price, has been much afflicted, but the oldest daughter, who has been sick for some months, is now fast recovering her health."

Rev. N. Calloway, Lovelady, Texas: "We have a great meeting in progress. There have been a number of conversions and accessions to the church. Some of our Baptist friends united with us and are taking an active part in our services, saying they are tired of close communion. The revival influence is extending over this work."

Rev. W. Graves, La Grange Circuit, Texas: "The Lord is blessing our labors on this work. We have ten recent accessions. At one appointment we have commenced building a new church; at that place heretofore we have had no Sunday school for want of a house in which to meet. I expect to send you the names of twenty new subscribers in a few days."

A Chinese Young Men's Christian Association, with a Chinese president, is in full and successful operation in Honolulu.

During the last ten years the Italian government has confiscated and sold at auction $106,000,000 worth of church property.

The Richmond Christian Advocate states as a fact that Bishop Soule read Wesley's sermons once a year while he lived. A fair example for young preachers.

The Mormons are building a magnificent temple on the summit of a high mountain in Manti, Utah. 500 men are at work on it, and it will not be completed for four years.

The Bible Depository in Japan is sending out over 20,000 portions of the Scriptures a year. Acts has just been published. Galatians will soon be ready, and a beginning has been made on the old Testament.

The United Brethren in Christ report for this year 4,067 churches in the United States, with a membership of 148,763, and 2,059 ministers. There are 2,897 Sunday schools and 169,530 teachers and scholars.

The countries in which the Roman Catholic is the prevailing religion are Andorra, Argentine Republic, Austria, Hungary, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Chili, Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, France, Bavaria, Baden, Guatemala, Hayti, Honduras, Italy, Mexico, Monaco, Nicaragua, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, Poland, San Marino, San Salvador, San Domingo, Spain, Uruguay and Venezuela. The Protestant prevails in Denmark and its colonies and dependencies, all of the German Empire except three states, Great Britain, the Netherlands, Orange Republic, Sweden, Norway, Switzerland, Transvaal and the United States. The Greek Church prevails in Greece, Russia, Roumania, Servia and Montenegro.

We wait with no little interest to see what relief is to come to the Christians of Asiatic Turkey, as the result of the late war. They seem to have been left entirely out of the account by the public press in this country as well as in Europe; yet, by a low estimate, they number about four millions, or nearly one-fourth of the entire population, as follows:

Armenians	2,030,000
Greeks	1,130,000
Roman Catholics	730,000
Protestants	40,000

Thus far the war has been only a crushing burden to them, by reason of the greatly increased and terribly oppressive taxation, the stagnation of business, and the outrages, in some sections, of lawless Koords and irregular soldiers. What is to be their condition when the most flourishing portion of the empire is set off under independent governments, and the portion left is called to pay a heavy indemnity?

At the Paris Exposition the exhibition of minerals by California will be exceptionally fine. Their estimated weight is 500 tons. A pyramid twenty feet square at the base and nearly seventy feet high will represent the 7,000,000 of cubic inches of gold which have been produced on the Pacific coast. This mass would be equivalent to a solid piece of gold as large as a room sixteen feet square, and very nearly sixteen feet in height.

In Alabama fifty-three per cent. of the voters are illiterate; even in Kentucky twenty-eight per cent. are illiterate; in Maryland, twenty-two; in Delaware, twenty-four. Secretary Schurz's war upon the timber thieves is showing results. Already 190 civil and 38 criminal suits have been begun, and $873,723 worth of property seized. In Minnesota, the government has won all of the 78 civil and 25 criminal suits, realizing $13,000 in sales and $3775 in judgments. Seventy suits have been begun in Mississippi, and $368,408 of lumber seized; in Florida, 12 suits and $111,800 recovered. The prosecutions in Louisiana have just begun, and promise large results.

The Mississippi Legislature has adopted a concurrent resolution, requesting Senators and Representatives in Congress to apply to the proper authorities for permission to make copies of such portions of the archives of the late Confederacy as relates to Mississippi and its officers and soldiers engaged in the late war. This is for the purpose of securing a memorial, in the language of the resolution, of the ability, courage and constancy of the soldiers of Mississippi, which have become a part of the common but priceless heritage of the American people.

The strait of the Dardanelles connects the Ægean Sea with the Sea of Marmora, and is some distance from Constantinople. The Bosphorus is the narrow channel connecting the Sea of Marmora with the Black Sea. Constantinople is at the junction of this strait with the Sea of Marmora. The Golden Horn is a branch of the strait, or an inlet separating Pera from Constantinople, and is about four miles in length, extending from the strait in a northwesterly direction. The general course of the Bosphorus is a little east of north. The same treaties that close the Dardanelles to war vessels close the Bosphorus.

The True Church.

Zion's Herald says: "Not a little difficulty has been experienced in finding, amid the many Christian names, the true Church of Christ. The Master Himself gave us an infallible sign and criterion. In all ages the genuine Church was to be a mission Church, taking up the great commission, and extending its benedictions till the nations should be redeemed and the whole earth should be filled with the glory of the Lord. Here is the work of the Church. To preach the Gospel in the regions beyond as well as at home, is her whole reason for being. To be without the evangelistic spirit is to be a spurious, and not the true, Church of the Lord. The genuine disciples have heard his last utterance—to go; and with these marching orders they hasten to take possession of the nations that have been given to Him.

Chicago Items.

We have always thought highly of Dr R. M. Hatfield, and the Rock River Conference has gladly received him home again after a full term at Cincinnati, and one at Philadelphia. The Dr is as pugnacious as ever when wrong invades right. And when the infidel Ingersoll flings around his loose assertions about Christianity, Dr. H. is as ready to meet them as he was the proslavery hoard around his church in ante bellum days. The tilt has not really taken place face to face, but the Evanston pulpit has been heard from, and the bugle gives no uncertain sound.

The preachers meeting is a regular young conference. The room holding about seventy is frequently full, and the discussions on future punishment were spirited and interesting. The sermon by Dr H. W. Thomas in his church on "The Cause of Doubt," has doubtless done much damage. Our ministers ought to remember that the world will not read or credit explanations when they can grasp an assertion which will help them in the least. Dr T. is better acquainted with doubt than ninety-nine out of a hundred of his hearers, and it will do no good to increase their defensive alliance.

Centenary Church under his ministrations is full. The interest is rising and we fully believe that the year will be one of great prosperity among that people.

Trinity Church with Pastor Crafts is doing nobly. The $40,000 debt has been reduced to $15,000 and the pew rentals decreased fully a third. That finest of all Methodist audience rooms has a magnificent congregation, and a model Sunday-school with wide awake teachers.

Died.

Near Okolona, Miss., Feby 6th, 1878. Mrs. Melvina Crumby.

In all the relations of life, as wife, mother, friend and neighbor she was loved and honored. She was a faithful, devoted Christian, and Shady Grove Church, of which she was a memeber, suffers a great loss in her death. No cloud was promitted to obscure her Savior from her spiriritual vision when called to die, and she passed peacefully away.

New Publications.

A NEW HISTORY OF METHODISM.

A History of Methodism for the Young People, by W. W. Bennett, D. D., has just been issued by Hitchcock & Walden. It is a book of 273 pages.

The title sufficiently indicates the character of the book. It is a concise history of the origin, growth, and present condition of Methodism told in an attractive manner, for the young. It has several good illustrations. This book should be in all our Sunday-school Libraries, and should be placed in the hands of young converts and all young people who attend upon Methodist services. There is much ignorance concerning the history of Methodism, and every effort made to extend the facts of that history among the people should be encouraged. This is a good book.

ECONOMIC MONOGRAPHS.

These are three pamphlets, 25 cents each, on "Why We Trade," "The Silver Question," and "The Tariff Question." The first two are by David A. Wells, and the last is by Horace White. All are published by G. P. Putman's Sons, and are for sale at Eyrich's, 130 Canal street.

THE MATCHLESS MYSTERY.

The Might and Mirth of Literature, is a treatise on figurative language, by John W. V. Macbeth. 555 pages, Harper Bros., New York. For sale by George Ellis, New Orleans.

The object of this volume is to create and fully equipt a new branch of study; to discuss figures of speech far more thoroughly than ever has been done; to urge upon pleaders, preachers and all who write or speak English, many very important practical advices; to comment specially on Shakspeare, Milton, Demosthenes and the Bible; to present a wide review of American and English Literature; and to make the whole subject as absorbing and laughter-exciting as it is instructive. The author avails himself of his familiarity with the ancient and modern languages. The author has produced a most valuable book, as new in its object as it is complete in meeting his ideal. The reader has before him a complete survey of English and American Literature on an entirely new plan. [illegible] biographical notices of the [illegible] of language, and anecdotes of many authors, besides discussions of fundamental principles of criticism and oratory. The author claims—and we judge rightly—that never before in the study of literature has figurative language been taken as the point from which to study. There are in literature three figures: Figures of Spelling, Figures of Syntax or alterations of the original construction of words, and Figures of Rhetoric, deviations from the original application of words. Beginning with the first Figure, the author pursues his purpose with great success. Take for example The Metaphor treated in Chapter VIII under Figures of Rhetoric, "The Metaphor next introduces itself. Let us take you to hear old Father Taylor preach. He is trying to give his congregation an idea of redemption. He describes a terrific storm at sea, rising to greater and wilder fury; amid the [illegible] waves a vessel is seen [illegible], and driving on a lee shore; the masts bend, break and go overboard; the sails are rent; the helm unshipped; the vessel begins to fill; she sinks deeper, deeper. But what do I see yonder? Through the mist I see it. That flash of lightning has shown it to me. A life-boat!—a life-boat! Christ is that life-boat!

'Christ is like that life-boat,' is a simile, 'Christ is that life-boat,' is the stronger; an expression not of resemblance but of identity; it is a metaphor; shorter, stronger, a flash of thought.'"

Then the chapter opens and, then follow quotations from a great number of authors and orators.

Public speakers and all lovers of literature will find this a most valuable and entertaining work.

HISTORY OF NEW YORK CITY.

The History of the City of New York. From date of settlement to the present time. By Mrs. Martha J. Lamb, New York: A. S. Barnes & Co.

The London Academy of January [illegible] speaks of Mrs. Lamb's history of the American Metropolis: "It was full time that a faithful history of New York should be written, and Mrs. Lamb appears to have had access to original materials, hitherto imperfectly worked. [illegible] is pleasant and remark- [illegible] no reason why [illegible] should not prove com- [illegible] important por- [illegible] to be performed. CREED AND CONDUCT.

Creed and Conduct and other discourses, by O. B. Frothingham. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. For sale by Eyrich.

Mr. Frothingham is one of the gifted pulpit orators of the liberal school of theologians of this country. His theology is defective and is pernicious judged by the revealed word of God, but his intellect is a credit to his age and, as far as we know, he is a man of unexceptionably pure character. This little volume contains twelve discourses, all worth reading, some of them valuable, but all injured by misconceptions of what the Church really believes and teaches. That the Church militant has its defects and has at times run into grevious errors is well understood; but Mr. Frothingham and others of his school err greatly when these defects and errors are magnified so as to be made to seem to be the Church herself in teaching and practice.

SHOW AND SUBSTANCE.

Show and Substance and other Lectures, by Thomas Starr King. James R. Osgood & Co., Boston. Price $2.00. For sale at Eyrich's.

This volume is edited by Edwin P. Whipple, who also contributes an introduction. Mr. King belonged to the Emerson school of thinkers and lecturers. He was a man of great purity of character, a brilliant preacher and a successful lecturer. Mr. Whipple says that "in the course of a few years he did much to emancipate the popular mind from its engraved theological and political prejudices." It is always very strange to us that whenever a man of the type of Emerson or King attains success, it is ascribed by their fellow liberalists to their having revolutionized the theology and moral science of the world. A little less egotism on the part of these gentlemen would render their severe criticisms upon the the orthodox ministers and Churches less offensive. Mr. King was a great success as a preacher and lecturer, because his was a great mind: he had his birth in a land of high moral notions, developed by the Christian Church, to which notions his great soul responded, and among which it grew in love and charity. Had Mr. King embraced fully the religion of Jesus Christ he would have been a much greater man and been perhaps free from the criticism of Mr. Whipple, who regrets his "occasional indulgence in certain caprices and audacities of his individuality." This volume contains twelve lectures, any one of which is worth the price of the volume.

Leedle Yawcob Strauss and other poems, by Charles T. Adams. Lee & Shepherd, Boston. Price $1.50. Pages 160. Illustrated and elegantly printed. For sale at Eyrich's.

This is a collection of comic poems, some of them of real merit. We give the first one, "Leedle Yawcob Strauss:"

YACOB STRAUSS.

I haf one funny leedle poy,
  Vot gomes schust to mine knee;
Der queerest schap, der createst rogue,
  As efer you dit see.
He runs, und schumps, und schmashes dings
  In all barts off der house;
But vot off dot? he vas mine son,
  Mine leedle Yawcob Strauss.

He get der measles und der mumbs,
  Und eferyding dot's oudt;
He sbills mine glass off lager beer,
  Poars schnuff indo mine krout.
He fills mine pipe mit Limburg cheese—
  Dot vas der roughest chouse;
I'd dake dot vrom no oder poy
  But leedle Jawcob Strauss.

He dakes der milk-ban for a dhrum,
  Und cuts mine cane in dwo,
To make der schticks to beat it mit,—
  Mine cracious, dot vas drue!
I dinks mine hed vas schplit abart,
  He kicks up such a touse!
But nefer mind; der poys vas few
  Like dot young Yawcob Strauss.

He asks me questions sooch as dese:
  Who baints mine nose so red?
Who vas it cuts dot schmoodth blace oudt
  Vrom der hair ubon mine hed?
Und vhere der plaze goes vrom der lamp
  Vene'er der glim I douse.
How gan I all dose dings eggsblain
  To dot schmall Yawcob Strauss?

I somedimes dink I schall go vild

Und vish vonce more I gould haf rest,

But ven he vas ashleep in ped,
  So guiet as a mouse,
I prays der Lord, "Dake anyding,
  But leaf dot Yawcob Strauss."

Special Notices.

The Parent of Insomnia.

The parent of insomnia or wakefulness is in nine cases out of ten a dyspeptic stomach. Good digestion gives sound sleep, indigestion interferes with it. The brain and stomach sympathize. One of the prominent symptoms of a weak state of the gastric organs is a disturbance of the great nerve entrepot, the brain. Invigorate the stomach, and you restore equilibrium to the great center. A most reliable medicine for the purpose is Hostetter's stomach bitters, which is far preferable to mineral sedatives and powerful narcotics which, though they may for a time exert a soporific influence upon the brain, soon cease to act, and invariably injure the tone of the stomach. The Bitters, on the contrary, restore activity to the operations of that all important organ, and their beneficient influence is reflected in sound sleep and a tranquil state of the nervous system. A wholesome impetus is likewise given to the action of the liver and bowels by its use. feb17tomar1.

DR. PIERCE'S STANDARD REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.

IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Chtarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Tonic.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples, and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagoguge properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver, or "Liver Complaint:" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scroflous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it affects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

The Class-Leader.

His Work, and How to Do It.

With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.

BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,

Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo.............................$1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

STATE

RegUlation of Vice.

Aaron M. Powell, of New York.

CONTAINS

1. State Regulation of Vice.

A paper read before the New York Committee for the Prevention of Licensed Prostitution.

2. Regulation Efforts in America.

A paper prepared for the International Congress at Geneva, Switzerland, 1877,

3. The Geneva Congress,

embracing a sketch of the proceedinga, and in full, the conclusions of the several sections of the Congress: 1. Hygiene; 2. Morals; 3. Social Economy; 4. Rescue Work; 5. Legislation.

5. New York Committee's Address to the Geneva Congress.

The author, Mr. Powell, (formerly editor of the National Anti-Slavery Standard), represented the New York Committee as a delegate in the International Congress, at Geneva, to promote the abolition of Government Regulation of Prostitution.

This is a book of great interest and importance to all students of social science; especially to all physicians, ministers, journalists and legislators, and to the intelligent and philanthropic everywhere.

Under the guise of hygiene, and of the public welfare, already several States have broached the question of regulating prostitution by law, and unless the opponents of these movements are wary we shall have in this country laws which will be disgraceful to humanity and oppressive to virtuous women, before we are aware of it. Let every one who favors justice to woman, morality in man, and purity everywhere, buy and help to spread the sale of this book where it will do the most good. Price $1.00

A CHRISTIAN MAGAZINE.

Rev. D. CURRY, D.D., Editor.

Begins Jan'y, 1878. Try it one Year.

ONLY $3 A YEAR.

"The scope and character of the magazine shall be that of a first-class religious and literary monthly, of the brightest character attainable, and pervaded, whether in its general or religious articles, by a thoroughly Christian spirit."—Order of the Committee.

Under these directions, it will be devoted to General and Religious Literature, Biographies and Travels, Criticisms and Art.

A sufficient number of the best writers for the press are employed to furnish all the variety in the several departments which their scope and importance require to make them rich and instructive.

The editorial department will be a feature of the magazine. Rev. Dr. Curry, both experienced and successful as an editor, brings to his duties the purpose of giving his whole strength to the work before him.

Each number will contain one or more articles illustrated with Wood Engravings, in the best style of this art, adding beauty and value to the pages.

The twelve numbers for the year will contain 1,152 pages of reading-matter, which, published in book form, would make not less than fifteen volumes, worth $1.50 each, and will comprise a variety that will be more interesting and valuable to the general reader than can be procured in books for many times the yearly price of the magazine.

We earnestly request you to take the National Repository for 1878—to give it one year's trial, and thereby determine for yourselves whether it is worthy of a place in the Christian home.

Perseverance.

One step and then another,
And the longest walk is ended;
One stitch and then another,
And the largest rent is mended;
One brick" upon another,
And the highest wall is made;
One flake upon another,
And the deepest show is laid.

So the little coral-workers,
By their slow but constant motion,
Have built up those pretty islands,
In the distant dark blue ocean;
And the noblest undertakings
Man's wisdom hath conceived,
By oft repeated effort
Have been patiently achieved.

A little—'tis a little word,
But much may in it dwell;
Then let a warning voice be heard,
And learn the lesson well
The way to ruin thus begins,
Down, down like easy stairs;
If conscience suffers little sins,
Soon larger ones it bears.

A little theft, a small deceit,
Too often leads to more;
'Tis hard at first, but tempts the feet
As through an open door.
Just as the broadest rivers run
From small and distant springs,
The greatest crimes that men have done
Have grown from little things.

Charles Simon & Sons.

INTERESTING INFORMATION CONCERNING ONE OF OUR LARGEST DRY GOODS HOUSES—THE LARGEST DRESS MAKING DEPARTMENT IN BALTIMORE.

The delightful shopping weather now prevailing suggests that we can scarcely offer our lady readers a more attractive reading article than a sketch of the old and well known dry goods house of Charles Simon & Sons. This establishment, although controlling a very large patronage, acquired during two generations past, has recently manifested so commendable a spirit of enterprise and liberality that we think even its old friends, who have been long familiar with its system of business, will find something of interest in a plain matter-of-fact sketch of the firm's operations.

This house is the oldest in its line in Baltimore, having been established in 1816 by the late Mr. Chas. Simon. This gentleman continued in business until the time of his death, and the name of the firm experienced no change until 1866, when the present style was adopted. During these fifty years Mr. Chas. Simon had steadily advanced his interest until his house had become the center of a large and prosperous business, drawing its patronage from all classes in society and from all parts of this and neighboring States. Mr. Simon also won for himself a highly honorable reputation, and was recognized as one of our most capable, scrupulous and successful business men.

The firm of Charles Simon & Sons now consists of Charles Simon, Jr., Herman Simon, Adolph Simon, Edmund Simon and August Simon—all sons of the original founder of the house. They are all plain, thorough and experienced business men. They were brought up in the store and have devoted their entire time and abilities to the development of the business. It is seldom that we have found a firm where the members themselves gave such close personal attention to the details of the business, and were so thoroughly acquainted with the condition of their trade and the tastes and wants of their customers. We believe that a large share of the success of the firm is attributable to this circumstance.

The firm does an exclusively retail business, and employs fifty salesmen and operatives. They occupy the entire building at No. 63 North Howard street, which is three stories high and two hundred and thirty-six feet deep. Their stock is very large, and includes all kinds of foreign and domestic dry goods. Their assortment is, in all respects, unsurpassed, and is every way ample to meet the wants of their patrons.

A very interesting feature of the business of this establishment, is their dressmaking department, which has met with great success, considering it was inaugurated only about four years ago. It seems to have filled a very general want, and the public have been quick to appreciate the enterprise of the firm in supplying it. Their unlimited facilities for the purchase of material and for making garments in the latest style have given them great advantages, and these have been liberally conceded to their patrons. The orders for their dressmaking department come from every Southern and border State, and their patronage is increasing largely every season.

Their leading specialty this season is Black Gros Grain Silk Dresses, trimmed with the same material and made in the most fashionable style—polonaise or basque—for the price of fifty dollars. These garments are elegant in material and finish. They are much superior to any ready made suits, for the reason that they are made to order by the most skilled hands, and a perfect fit is always guaranteed. The ladies of this community have Messrs. Simon to thank for the fact that an elegant black silk dress is no longer an expensive luxury, but a most useful article, within the means of nearly every person.

Messrs. Charles Simon and Sons keep on hand a large quantity of Ladies' Underwear, all manufactured of superior material and workmanship, while being very low in price.

The business of this house is the outgrowth of a strict adherence to a few simple, old fashioned, honest business principles. In the first place, their purchases are based entirely on the cash principle. This principle is never deviated from, and enables them to fix the prices upon the very lowest scale of profits and to give their patrons the utmost value of their money. From the earliest days of the existence of the house Mr. Charles Simon made this a rule to give his customers the full value of their money and to make them permanent patrons. This policy has been continued by [illegible] and is one of the fixed rules of the house.

Then, again, the expense of the house are comparatively light, for every member of the firm is an industrious worker as well as an accomplished business man. They have devoted their lives to the honorable work of extending the business [illegible] the reputation of [illegible] and they are proud to [illegible]

Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth st., Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease itching piles, had consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the Ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. I deem it my duty to give you this well merited testimonial of so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit. Very respectfully, seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered, with night sweats, burning fever pains and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.

Dr. Swayne—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs; in short it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me at the factory.

It has made some remarkable cures in this section, and I consider it the best remedy with which I am acquainted.

Can I Not Trust?

I cannot see, with my small human sight,
Why God should lead this way or that for me;
I only know he saith, "Child, follow me."
But I can trust.

I know not why my path should be at times
So straightly and so strangely barred before;
I only know God could keep wide the door.
But I can trust.

I find no answer often, when beset
With questions fierce and subtle on my way;
And often have but strength to faintly pray.
But I can trust.

I cannot know why suddenly the storm
Should rage so fiercely round me in its wrath;
But this I know, God watches all my path:
And I can trust.

I may not draw aside the mystic veil
That hides the unknown future from my sight;
Nor know if for me waits the dark or light:
But I can trust.

I have no power to look across the tide,
To know, while here, the land beyond the river;
But this I know, I shall be God's forever:
So I can trust.

How to Get On amid Depressing Circumstances.

OUTLINES OF A SERMON BY REV. WAYLAND HOYT, D. D., BROOKLYN.

And Daniel continued even unto the first year of King Cyrus.—Daniel I: XXI.

The Bible is largely the record of human lives. And though the men that figured in it are dead ages ago, they, in those ancient lives, disclosed and illustrated spiritual principles and forces as needful now as when they lived. Abraham and Moses and Elijah are dead, but the need in you and me for the faith of Abraham, the patience and meekness of Moses, and the bravery of Elijah, is not dead.

The life fullest of advantages is still a life, on some sides and in some sort, hindered It is the doom of life that it must contend with obstacles. We must refuse to be overcome by circumstances, but determine rather to compel, from even adverse surroundings, a richer and larger growth of character.

The vital question for you and me is, how to carry one's self when such circumstances surround him? Since nothing helps life like life, for answer let me show you a life thrust amid hostile circumstances for all its allotted time on earth, yet, though surrounded thus, achieving the noblest sort of character, and rendering the worthiest service.

Nebuchadnezzar the Great came up against Jerusalem. It was in the declining days of the Hebrew monarchy, and the city fell.

I suppose it is impossible for us to understand the then passionate devotion of a Jew to his own Jerusalem. That city, and that temple which was its jewel, held for the Jew all that was best of earth, and all that was most like Heaven. Exile from it was the heaviest of curses.

But it was the custom of those Oriental conquerors to carry captive to their own country some of the best blood belonging to the conquered land, and to train them for service in their own courts. Nebuchadnezzar did not forget this custom. Among the well-favored children, in whom was no blemish, skilful in all wisdom, and understanding science, carried off thus captive for a compelled service in a foreign and hated heathen court, was Daniel.

Difficult circumstances stood around him now with rocky front, if ever round any man. His fairest hopes for life were dashed. If any man's place was ever hard, his was. How the love of home and friends, and the love of his dear Faith, must have risen up and [illegible] itself against the unyielding [illegible] of his captivity!

I [illegible] know a more inspiring [illegible] out of Scripture, than [illegible] in which Daniel [illegible] his difficult [illegible] been use- [illegible] and fret; he might have been moody and despondent, losing interest in everything about him, doing what he must like a slave; he might have weakened himself with a vague hope of escape, heedless about present duty, because, fastening his eye upon that distant chance, he had no vision to spare for any possible alleviation which to-day might bring him. But there is no hint of anything like this in the record. He is rather the master of such circumstances even. He is the conqueror of evil destiny.

Now, the vital and helpful question for you and me is, how was such result achieved? And here the record is full of suggestions for us, when we stand, as did Daniel, surrounded with desolate and depressing circumstances.

First: Daniel was constantly careful to comply with the demands of a personal rectitude.

Daniel was a Hebrew. The religion of the Hebrews was much occupied about the food they ate. Certain articles God had specified in His law as clean—they could be eaten; others were unclean—these might not be eaten. It was the command of Nebuchadnezzar that Daniel be supplied with food from the king's table. But now the meat furnished from the table of a Gentile king was, doubtless, much of it gathered from what, to the Hebrew, were unclean sources. To partake, then, of such food would be direct treachery to his religion; would be deliberate fracture of personal rectitude. Also, there was another element involved in this eating or not eating of the king's meats. Daniel's future—whatever that might be—hung upon scrupulous obedience to the king. Disobedience to that despotic will meant death. It was the extreme of temerity to withstand that will in the least particular. And so the question of eating or not eating was a question between thorough personal rectitude on the one hand, and personal worldly advantage on the other. It was apparently, in itself, a very little thing whether Daniel should allow himself to be nourished by food from the king's table or by some other food; but really, it was a question involving a principle which went down into the very roots and springs of moral being. But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank. You know well enough the method by which it was arranged that he should be fed on pulse instead. Daniel would be loyal to his God? Daniel would preserve his personal rectitude unfractured.

And now, in this scrupulous resolve and action of Daniel, I am sure there is very profound suggestion for the right carriage of one's self in difficult and depressing circumstances.

We have had experience enough of such circumstances to know that in great danger there is a tendency toward moral carelessness, a relaxing of the moral tone. Faith grows feeble; moral purpose weakens in the close air of hostile circumstances. A kind of despair settles down and paralyzes. We are apt to say, "What's the use; God has forgotten us; our hopes are blighted, our prospects darkened. Why keep up the difficult strain toward personal purity and righteousness? Why fight against temptation? Why not allow one's self in the evil thing which seems to promise, at least, some mitigation of our misery? Why preserve integrity when everybody seems flourishing in dishonesty? Why not drown disappointment in sensual indulgence? Why not let the current drift us devil-ward, when, with our utmost effort we have made such slight headway up the stream?"

I commend to you this example of Daniel, so anxiously careful of a personal rectitude, though now he was nothing but a slave. If ever you needed the power of a pure rectitude you need it now, hedged in as you are by difficulty. In that only is the clear vision, the sustained energy, the deft skill which can extricate you. Do not add an accusing conscience to your other troubles.

3. What was given Daniel to do, even in these circumstances he did with the utmost thoroughness.

Was it the acquisition of the Chaldean learning? When the three years of tutelage had passed, and the time arrived for him to stand the examination of the king, no man was better versed than he. In all matters of wisdom and understanding that the king inquired of him he found him ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers that were in all his realm. Was it the interpretation of the king's dream? To that he gave his best resource of prayer, his intense expenditure of knowledge and of skill. Was it his, afterward, to administer a department of the government? So thoroughly exact and just was he that though his enemies, rendered lynx eyed by envy, searched through all the records of his administration, they could find no least occasion for fault. Oh, there is no solvent for difficulty like the exact doing of daily duty; like the taking hold of the thing next us. It will surely lead us outward—upward.

4. This slave, Daniel, never lost his faith in God. Evermore God was his resource. Evermore toward God he turned.

So Daniel continued even unto the first year of King Cyrus. Opportunity opened for him on every side. He was the mainstay of his captured countrymen. Notwithstanding the severity of his early surroundings, he achieved a life how splendid! He was the master of his circumstances. They were not his master.

Personal integrity, conscientious attention to daily duty, though it be the lowly duty of a slave, constant faith in God, these will triumph anywhere.—Metropolitan Pulpit.

Letter from West Texas.

DEAR SOUTHWESTERN: Your enlarged borders, improved health and continued visits are a pleasure and a delight to us. We only wish it in our power to send you fifty paid up subscribers with this letter—we shall move toward this end before long.

You will see by the inclosed circulars that we are planting a Christian colony in Western Texas. While on a visit recently to the sunset end of my district, some three hundred miles distant, I took occasion to attend to this little matter also. Such hundreds of people continually coming here, and such thousands of letters also, that I became perfectly overwhelmed and bewildered. We now think we have the questions cornered at least.

We fixed our location in Donley county, the only spot left available where vacant State lands could be found, and perhaps no spot in all Western Texas more to our hand in all respects than this. By a kind Providence this tract of two or three hundred sections has been kept or left for us. The soil is of a dark sandy loam, well watered, rolling and level, with wood enough for fuel, and an abundance of building stone. We ran our lines of survey and laid out our town near the center of the county and named it "Clarendon." A party of about a dozen men, and several families started this week with teams, plows, merchandise, tools, etc., to commence operations. A larger company will go out May 1st. It is a golden opportunity for everybody to secure a home cheap. For the first time we are able to accommodate our people by selling in tractions of 320, 160, 80 or 40 acres. We make this auxilliary to our Conference work. Next year an "appointment," flanking everything known in ecclesiastical records will appear upon our roll, and a man on horseback be commissioned to occupy every settlement and opening as fast as they appear. We are in the midst of territory large enough for a State and for an annual Conference. The outlook is grand beyond my power to portray. We will send circulars and information to any who will forward their names to us at Sherman.

Bro. Daugherty, of Denison, will dedicate his church next Sunday, the 17th, "a thing of beauty and a joy forever." Doubtless we are building finer churches for less money, in Texas, than in any other portion of our great field. It is wonderful how much church five thousand dollars will build when handled with severe economy. This church is ample in size, of brick, frescoed, carpeted, and in every respect well finished. Of this more anon.

At Sherman we are building a really better house than we have at Dallas. As to the arrangement, it is of brick, the roof is on, and in about one month it will be ready for use. On the whole the most quickly executed church enterprise of its magnitude of which I have any knowledge. We now worship in the Opera House. Our Sunday-school and congregations are increasing in size and character, and our membership also. With our friends of the Church South we are on excellent terms, of course, and expect to remain so. We each have our field to cultivate, both having more than we can possibly do.

With district, pastoral and other work, my hands are fearfully full. Your work is similar; we can sympathize. "We are in sympathy, you and I."

Our work in the South part of the State is prospering. Fort Worth, Waco and Austin are putting on strength. Dr. Brush is tenting on the field, and we expect to put matters beyond doubt in this latitude this year.

When can you swing this way? We regard the SOUTHWESTERN as an indispensable factor and a power immeasurable in importance.

Yours, in the work,
L. H. CARHART,
Austin Conference.

Sherman, Texas, Feb. 15, 1878.

The Sunday School our Stronghold.

BY REV. J. B. FORD.

The following words are from one of our Tennessee pastors. He says:

We are working up our Sunday-school cause and its interests. Fifty additions to the Sunday-school the past three months. Expense nearly $50 and all paid but a few dollars. Sunday-school Union collection, $2 20; Church membership, 40. If you can beat that send us the name of the appointment. The Sunday-school is our strong hold. Through it we will win the day. Prospects flattering; we are growing in grace, numbers and influence. Praise the Lord.

I wish all of our preachers felt that the Sunday-school was "our strong-hold." The preacher who takes hold of this important department of Church work with a strong, firm hand and faith in God will, in spite of the world, the flesh and the devil, succeed. One of our prominent German preachers said in my hearing, "We cannot expect to do much with the old people, but we can build up a strong Church if we can only get the children into our Sunday-school. Give us the children and we will win." I fear many of our preachers do not realize the truth of this, or they would give more attention to the Sunday-sshool work. Why it is I cannot tell. If they preach two sermons on Sunday and one or two through the week, then visit a few families their work is done, the Sunday-school is hardly thought of. If I could get the ear of all of the preachers I would speak so that all would understand and say, next to the pulpit God has chosen the Sunday school as a great moral agent to save the world from sin, and if you would succeed give special attention to this department of work; organize and set in operation with all of the appliances you can command Sunday-schools, and urge upon all to attend, gather all in, old and young. Whatever you neglect do not neglect the Sunday-school cause. You, brethren, who are not very active in Sunday-school operations, stop for a moment and think, then enter into your closet and pray over the subject. Read what the Discipline says upon the importance of Sunday-schools and the instruction of children. Some one says, "I am not adapted to this kind of work." Why not? Then pray God to teach you and fill your head and heart with enthusiasm upon this subject. Subscribe for the Sunday School Journal, read it carefully and study the Berean lesson prayerfully. Send to New York, 805 Broadway street, and get the "Church School and its Officers," by Dr. Vincent. My word for it you will, in a very few months, become an enthusiastic Sunday-school worker. Remember you cannot succeed if you spend all of your labor in the pulpit, and neglect the Sunday-school.

Spring is upon us, go to work and at every point where you can get ten scholars organize a Sunday-school and supply it from our own "Union," visit the schools as often as you can, and when there take a part in the exercises.

At all of your preaching places preach at least twice upon the subject of Sunday-schools.

Cope's Tobacco Plant estimates that the tobacco annually consumed in the world amounts to about 2,000,000,000—two thousand millions—of pounds, and that if the leaves were made into a roll two inches in diameter, we should have "a tobacco serpent" which, following the direction of the equator, would wind around the earth thirty times.

Foreign Letter.

Scotland has had a present from the Pope—a practical benediction? shall I call it? At all events a Roman Catholic hierarchy for that country has been appointed. The Archbishop of St. Andrews and Edinburg is Dr. John Strain. The Archbishop of Glasgow is Dr. Eyre. The former will have four suffragans—two MacDonalds, a MacLachlan and a Rigg. These names are nearly all Presbyterian. Of course Scotland is angry and denounces the encroachment, but the hierarchy is a fact.

Stanley, who has just returned from Africa, where he has done a work which will immortalize him, is received with every mark of grateful recognition and honor. The freedom of the city of London will be conferred upon him at an early day. He well deserves every mark of distinction that can be given him; he has opened up a country to civilization—marked out a path for the Missionary of the Cross to carry the Gospel to the teeming population of Africa.

The Archbishop of Canterbury brought the subject of Temperance before the House of Lords, and a most influential committee was formed to assist the benevolent movement, which is becoming very popular and assuming large proportions. All the different denominations are alive to the importance of making special efforts to abate drunkenness.

The disestablishment of the National Church of England is ably advocated by the Liberal Society. Mr. W. E. Foster, however, a leading Liberal statesman, declared his opposition to the measure a few days ago, and he has been severely criticized and censured by clergymen of the establishment as well as by those who supported him at the last general election. The growth of Ritualism will do more to disestablish the Church than all the efforts of outsiders.

The Burial Question must be settled in some way or other. The clergy of the National Church are not willing that nonconformist ministers should bury their dead in the parish Church yards; but sometimes they refuse to read the burial service themselves. Excuse—the deceased had been baptised by Methodist Ministers. The two Archbishops are in favor of a compromise, but the majority of the clergy are opposed to any concession to the Dissenters in this matter.

The Methodist world here is not disturbed by any doctrinal deflections in its ministers as is the case in other bodies. The doctrine, Methodism, is a unit, except in reference to holiness. On this subject ultra and superficial men are doing some injury. The Wesleyan President has just issued a pastoral calling upon his ecclesiastical and religious constituency to pray for peace. The war continues; blood is still in the Eastern sky, and the noise of battle is still soughing through the heavens.

From Our Mission Rooms.

"East China" now ceases to be the designation of our work in the region of Foo Choo. The last General Conference authoized the erection of this mission into an Annual conference and now Bishop Wiley writes to the Missionary Secretaries, under date Foo Chow, Dec 21, 1877, saying: "I drop you a line from the Foo Chow Conference. Yesterday morning we organized the Conference by transferring five foreigners and fifteen Chinese from home Conferences. To these quite a number will be admitted on trial. I am delighted with the work here. It is beyong my expectation and I was expecting much. Besides these who are in the Conference about forty local preachers will be employed during the year. We have Districts reaching 150 miles west and 150 miles South of Foo Chow. The five Presiding Elders are grand men, and a noble class of young men are coming on. The Conference will continue till next Tuesday and close on Christmas day."

In company with Bro. Baldwin the Bishop had been for a week's trip up into the Ku Cheng District. They went seventy miles up the river and then thirty miles into the country to the city of Ku Cheng. This city, of 20,000 inhabitants, is the center of the District. They held a District Meeting. Sunday was a grand day, begining with a six o'clock morning prayer meeting, general Sunday School at 8:30, Love Feast at 9:30 followed by the baptism of four children and two adults. The Love Feast was like a first-rate warm Love Feast at home. Then came preaching from Bro. Baldwin, after which the sacrament, when fifty-two natives communed, eight of whom were women. At 3 p. m. preaching to the public, and at 7 p. m. preaching by Brother Chandler, followed by a warm prayer meeting. How is that for a Sunday in heathen China?

A special meeting of the Missionary Board was held on the 5th of February to consider some important propositions for Mexico, submitted by Bishop Merrill and Dr. Dashiell. Rev. Daniel Wise, D. D., presided. A grant was also made to cover the cost of property secured in Italy.

AFRICA RE-ENFORCED.

Bishop Haven, on February 6th, appointed two new men to Africa—Rev. Melville Y. Bovard, of Indiana, a graduate of Moore's Hill College, was appointed Superintendent of the Baporo Mission in Interior Africa. Rev. Royal J. Kellogg, of the Wyoming Conference, was appointed Principal of the Monrovia Seminary. Brother Joel Osgood, who was appointed also to Baporo, and who sailed January 2, must now be nearing Liberia, and also another brother, a colored man of excellent education, accompanying Brother Osgood, is appointed as teacher in the Monrovia Seminary, and orders have already gone forward for the opening of the Seminary at once. Thus, four men are under appointment to African Mission work.

Book Committee.

EASTERN SECTION.

TUESDAY, Febuary 12th, at 10 o'clock, A. M. the members of the Eastern Section of the Book Committee met in the Preachers' room at the Publishing House of the Western Methodist Book Concern at Cincinnati. Present were: Reverends Thompson Mitchell, Chairman; Sandford Hunt, Secretary; Ami Prince, Jacob B Graw, Lucius C. Matlack, Wm, B. Slaughter, and James H. Taft, Esq. Absent, George J. Ferry and John B. Cornell, Esqs., whose personal illness and family affliction hindered them from meeting with the Committee. The Eastern Section received the report of the Local Committee of New York, and the informal report of the Book Agents, Nelson and Phillips; the interest of the Methodist Book Concern at New York, and its Depositories at Boston, Buffalo, Pittsburg, and San Francisco, was taken into consideration, and the secretary was requested to prepare a report to the Book Committee. After continued sessions the Eastern Section adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman.

WESTERN SECTION.

At another room in the same building and at the same time the members of the Western Section met and held continuous sessions. Present were: Reverends Fernando C. Holliday, Chairman; R. A. W. Bruehl, Secretary; Wm. Brush, John L. Smith, Wm P. Stowe, Wm. S. Prentice, William Koeneke, Amos Shinkle, Esq., and Charles W. Rowland, Esq. The Local Committee of Cincinnati rendered detailed statements, and the Book Agents, Hitchcock and Walden, informal statements of the buiness finances to this Section, and upon them the interest and affairs of the Western Methodist Book Concern and its Depositories at Chicago, St Louis, and Atlanta were discussed; the secretary was also requested to prepare a report to the Book Committe. This Section adjourned to meet again at the call of the chairman.

BOOK COMMITTEE.

The members of the Book Committee assembled February 13th at nine o'clock A. M. in the preachers' room at the Publishing-house at Cincinnati, and held continuous sessions on this and the following day.

The above named members of the Eastern and Western Section, except George J. Ferry and John B. Cornell were present. Rev. John L. Smith in the chair, and Rev. L. C. Matlack, Secretary. Present were also the four Book Agents, Rev. R. Nelson, John. M. Phillips, Esq., Rev. L. Hitchcock, J. M. Walden, and the following editors: Revs. C. H. Fowler, O. F. Warren, Alfred Wheeler, Daniel Curry, F. S. Hoyt, W. Nast, H. Liebhart, A. Edwards, B. St. James Fry, and E. Q. Fuller. All were invited to attend the sessions and to participate in the discussion. The secretaries of the two sections made at the first meeting a full report of all the facts relating to the buisness and financial standing of the two Publishing-houses based upon the reports of the respective local committees at New York and Cincinnati, of whom it was said, that they had faithfully performed their duties by making through examinations of the books and accounts and all finaces of the two Concerns. The secretaries reported further such recommendations as the two sections judged proper for consideration.

These reports opened up discussions and free questioning of the Book Agents, who gave every information needed by the Book Committee, and every thing was sifted to the bottom. The Eastern and Western Book Agents rendered full and formal reports. The sales of books and perodicals at New York have been $630,705,37; at the Eastern Depositories, $205,207,95; total, $835,913,32. The net capital above all liabilities is $974,192,01. The Publishing House at New York printed and distributed not less than 47,669,892 copies of weekly, semi-monthly, monthly and quarterly periodical publications for adults and the youth, and issued 25 new books, containing 5,211 pages, and 71 tracts, containing 1,018 pages.

The Western Methodist Book Concern sold at Cincinnati books and periodicals for $391,622,09, at its Depositories for $266,852,31; total, 658,474,40. The net capital above all liabilities of this Concern is $129,474,63. The Publishing House at Cincinnati and its depositories printed and distributed not less than 34,411,974 weekly, semi-monthly, monthly, and quarterly periodical publications for adults and youth. It issued 15 new books in the English and German languages, containing 4,339 pages. The total capital of the two Concerns is $1,403,666.64; the total book and periodical sales were during the last year, $1,494,387.72; and the total amount of periodical publications were 82,111,866 copies; what an amount of good these latter have to the hundred thousands of old and yound readers only eternity will reveal.

The following committees were voted to be appointed by the Chairman:

To fix upon the amount to be assessed the conferences in behalf of of the Episcopal Fund: W. P. Stowe, J. B. Graw, W. S. Prentice, J. H. Taft, W. B. Slaughter.

To report on salaries: F. C. Holliday, W. Brush, A. Prince, S. Hunt, A. Shinkle.

To inquire into the condition of Depositories: C. W. Rowland, T. Mitchell, W. P. Stowe, S. Hunt, W. Koeneke; the Book Agents and members of the Local Committees were added for the purpose of answering inquiries.

To prepare a report for publication in the Church papers: L. C. Matlack, S. Hunt, R. A. W. Bruehl.

To prepare the report to the Annual Conferences: L. C. Matlack, R. A. W. Bruehl, S. Hunt.

Drs. Hunt and Walden were appointed official reporters for the daily papers. The several committees did their work thoroughly. The reports on Episcopal fund and Depositories when presented were adopted. The Committee on Salaries made a report, which was discussed, amended and then adopted. To the Committee to prepare reports for the Church papers and to the annual conferences, time was granted to make their reports, and they were instructed to publish them when ready.

The report of the receipts for the Episcopal Fund shows that the entire support of the bishops can be confidently expected from the people at an early day. The collections thus far reported for the current year are very largely in advance of the previous year. May the preachers and members of our church see the importance of raising the assessed amounts more and more, and may all cheerful givers be bountifully blessed!

The general business of the Book Concerns, as conducted at New York and Cincinnati, has been profitable during the past year, the most of the Depositories, however, have been unprofitable, and some losses have been sustained. The general policy of the Church in regard to depositories was carefully considered.

Resolutions were adopted expressive of sympathy with brothers Ferry and Cornell, whose personal illness and family affliction have detalued them from our annual meeting.

The editors represented their respective papers, which were reported as gaining subscribers without almost any exception. May the editors realize their hopes for still larger increases of subscribers! All the interests of the two Concerns received the most considerate attention. May the Concerns prosper and be the medium to bring forth much good to the readers of their publications, and may the latter be a great help to the brethren of the ministry to spread the Gospel truths over our beloved country!

The greatest harmony existed among the members of the Book Committee. After the important business intrusted to them had been finished, the doxology was sung and the Book Committee adjourned sine die. All the members bid each other a hearty good-bye, and most of them went to their homes by the evening trains. May they all safely arrive at their homes and join their families in good health; and may the Lord prosper their work every where.

Secretary Sherman says there can be no immediate bad effects from the introduction of silver. There can only two and a half millions a month go out from the mints, and there would be no appreciable effect even on customs receipts for the first few months. He has an idea that paper will go up to premium immediately, but that no premium can stand because there will be no further use for it if the silver can be used.

The Canvass.

Push the canvass, brethren.—These are the weeks and months which count. Send in your lists. Send for specimen copies whenever you need them. tf.

Rev. Graham Bell has been appointed the special agent of the SOUTHWESTERN for the city of New Orleans. He is authorized to take subscriptions and make collections.

United States Senator Eustis has introduced a bill to re-open the U. S. Mint in this city, and appropriate $60,000 to defray the expenses. It is thought the bill will pass.

The New Orleans Times says: "For seventeen years New Orleans has longed for quiet and prayed for peace. At last we have it, but strangely enough times were never so hard and distress never so great.

Captain Eades proposes the improvement of the Mississippi River, by his jetty system for a distance of 1,300 miles. He says that for $50,000,000 a depth of twenty feet could be attained and that then the stream would, being much narrower and straighter, keep its channel clear.

As seen in our news columns Judge Whitaker sentenced General Anderson to the Penitentiary for two years. We have already expressed our opinion of these prosecutions. They are simply persecutions for political offences under the forms of law.

A walking match is arranged to take place in this city, at Grunewald Hall, commencing March 5th. Miss Ellen Wickers, of Chicago, is to walk 250 miles and Mr. Henry Schmehl 400 miles; the one accomplishing the feat in the shortest time to be the victor.

We give the text of the Silver Bill, in another column, as it has passed Congress and goes to the President. It is probable that the President will sign the bill, but should he not do so there will be a two-thirds majority in Congress to pass it over his veto.

We trust all our readers will read the entire document. It contains many important facts concerning our publishing interest.

A very good judge of such matters, residing not far from New York City, in a note accompanying his subscription for 1878, says: "I like your paper firstrate, and find the ladies of my household consulting the notes on the Sunday school lesson in the SOUTHWESTERN in preference to those in the New York Advocate."

Cardinal Pecci has been elected Pope, as successor to Pius IX. In the language in which he conducts his religious service, the Latin, the verb pecco means to sin. The Galveston News pronounces the persecution of the Returning Board members in Louisiana a signal instance of political inexpediency and says: "To inflict legal punishment upon Anderson and Wells for political crimes of the Returning Board would be well enough abstractly considered, but to do so with deliberate recklessness, at the cost of reviving sectional frenzy and [illegible]ting the infinite mischiefs [illegible] sectional politics, would look like a supreme freak of madness."

The New Pope.

The successor of Pius IX was elected by the Sacred College in Rome, February 20th. The successful candidate was Cardinal Pecci, who, for a short time, was chamberlain to Pius IX. The circumstances of his election are thus described by a despatch from Rome. In the morning ballot Cardinal Pecci received thirty-six votes, which was five short of the requisite two-thirds majority. When the voting was finished and the papers were burned, Cardinal Franchi and those holding the same views with him advanced and knelt before Cardinal Pecci. This example being followed by others, Cardinal Pecci's election was accomplished by the method known as "by adoration."

Count Legur immediately informed the Pope that he purposed to present him with 1,000,000 francs, as the first donation of Peter's pence from the French Episcopate.

As soon as the result of the election became known, the bells in all the churches of Rome were rung, and the diplomats went to the Vatican to congratulate the new Pope.

The Ultramontanes are furious at the result of the election. Cardinal Pecci, when he was Camerlengo, ordered the Pontifical carriages to be prepared for the new Pope and drive out in a solemn progress. The correspondent adds that the myth of the Pope's captivity is thus exploded.

A Paris dispatch says the election of Cardinal Pecci as Pope has made a favorable impression there.

A correspondent at Berlin says Prince Bismarck considers Cardinal Pecci's election to the Papacy the most suitable one possible at the present time.

The Rome correspondent of the London Times, in a letter to that journal, under date of the 14th of the present month, spoke as follows of Cardinal Pecci, to-day elected Pope: "Pecci is tall, with fine head, high forehead, narrowing at temples; long face and straight features. He has a large mouth, prominent chin, cheerful, open countenance, and large, well-shaped ears. His face reminds one of Consalvi, the renowned minister of Pius VII. He has a fine, sonorous voice, great dignity, even austerity, of manners in public life, but privately is affectionate, unassuming, sociable and witty. As Camerlengo, he has been at the head of that party which, without formally renouncing the right to the Holy See, acknowledges the wisdom of submitting to the decrees of Providence, accepting what seem to be irrevocably accomplished facts. The general opinion is that, for learning, tact, energy, dignity, amiability, real moral worth and sincere piety, the Sacred College could not find a more deserving Pope than Cardinal Pecci. At Perugia he followed the same policy recommended by the late Cardinal Riario Sforza. At Naples he advised good Catholics to fulfill their duties as citizens at the municipal and provincial elections, even when the clerical press, professing to interpret the wish of the Vatican, enjoined the policy of abstention. Cardinal Pecci spoke with great effect against the proposal for the removal of the Conclave from Rome, and other measures advocated by the Reactionary party. He enjoys the confidence and support of the Liberals, or at least a reasonable majority of them, in the Sacred College, and plays the same part as was sustained by Cardinal Gizzi in the Conclave of 1846. Cardinal Pecci's private life at all periods is above reproach. He has considerable literary talent and has written poetry. He never has had intercourse with functionaries of the present Italian Government, but is esteemed by them all, and those with whom the necessity of his duty brings him into contact are perfectly charmed with him."

The new Pope assumes the title of Leo XIII. Being an Italian there was great joy over his election in Rome. The indications are general that the new Pope is much more in harmony with modern ideas than his predecessor, and does not regard the advance made in science and secular government as unmixed evils. He also seems ready to accept the destruction of the temporal power of the Pope as settled. But we remember that Pius IX began his reign with a similar announcement of liberal ideas, and in a few years became, and continued to be until his death, the representative and tool of Jesuitism.

Pope Leo XIII will enter upon his career at the head of the Roman Catholic Church simply as the Pope of a Church. All semblance of temporal authority was stripped from his predecessor, and the Roman Catholic Church stands now on a footing with Protestant Christianity, with no right or power to wield the sword in its defense.

The Returning Board Prosecution.

The prosecution of General Anderson, Governor Wells and Messrs. Casnave and Kenner of the celebrated Louisiana Board has awakened a profound feeling throughout the entire nation. The sentiments expressed in the SOUTHWESTERN last week is a fair representation of the sentiment all Republicans and, as far as we can judge, of fair-minded Democrats. Among Republicans, including the Administration at Washington, the proceedings are universally denounced as in direct violation of the pledges made by the Nicholls Government when the State was given up to them. Among fair minded Democrats the proceedings are either condemned on similar grounds or as unwise and tending to re-open questions sure to revive and perpetuate sectional strife and hostility.

Much indignation is felt over the fact that the trial should be conducted before a man of the character of Judge Whitaker. It is a well-known fact, greatly regretted by the leading members of the bar in this city, that he is an habitual drunkard, and thoroughly reliable gentlemen state that they have seen him drunk while on the bench during these trials. He is also a defaulter to the United States Government for the large amount of $600,000. He was appointed Assistant Treasurer in this city by President Johnson in 1866. In 1877 there being hints of crookedness a special agent was sent to investigate. The agent found that the cash was $1,100,000 short. The cashier said that the money was in Mr. Whitaker's box, and he was out of town. The box, when opened was found to contain a few papers and an $80,000 certified check from Mr. May on a bank of which he was President, and who was Mr. Whitaker's predecessor. Whitaker acknowledged his deficiency. He admitted that when he took possession of the office he had receipted to May for $500,000 of certificates of deposits on May's bank, calling them so much cash. When orders were sent from the Treasury to transfer money, he used May's certified checks instead of cash. Thus the crooked business was covered up. The bank was taken possession of and from May there was recovered about $500,000, but from Whitaker very little or nothing. He had lost the money by personal speculations in gold. He was indicted, tried, the case proved, as above stated, and the jury being all of that class that were called rebels in those days, he was acquitted without their leaving their seats. Whitaker was Internal Revenue Collector from 1863 to 1865, and is in default as Collector for $11,000. Such is an example of the purity and virtue which New Orleans people demand in their Judges. Mr. Whitaker is a fit person to use in the conspiracy against Gen. Anderson.

But, irrespective of this character of the Judge, the following from Washington indicates the sentiments of the President, his Cabinet, and the great mass of the American people:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Mr. Sherman was asked to-day if it was true, as stated in the morning papers, that he, Matthews, Garfield, Hale and White had sent a dispatch to Anderson. He said it was true, and, as that fact had been made public, he would furnish a copy of the dispatch, and they meant all they said.

Mr. Sherman then said that he regarded the arrest, trial and conviction of Anderson as a great outrage, under the color of the forms of law. Anderson was not indicted; the Grand Jury had refused to indict him; the proceedings against him is called an information, and is expressly prohibited in cases of felony by the Constitution of the United States and most of the several States, but is provided for by the laws of Louisiana. The Judge who tried the case is a public defaulter for over $600,000.

When Anderson was arrested he was the acting Collector of the Port of New Orleans, and the arrest was made while he was in the discharge of his duty at the Custom House. He was hurried to a prison, required to give excessive bail, and failing to do so, was kept in custody, denied all postponement, forced to trial and convicted, and is now held for sentence without benefit of bail.

The jury was packed to convict. The panel had been selected almost exclusively of one political party and from one race; the examination, so-called, showed the deepest and strongest prejudice against the defendant, and in any tribunal he (Mr. Sherman) knew nearly every one would have been rejected on his oath, and yet, though challenged, they were sworn in.

The cause of this excitement against Anderson and his associates is, that in the performance of a public duty, in plain pursuance of law and upon ample testimony, they eliminated from the election returns in Louisiana the results of violence and intimidation.

Though this was not alone in the information, yet everybody knew that this was the gravamen of their offence, and without it no man on the jury would have convicted Anderson. It is this that excited this populace, heated with passion, to the highest state of resentment.

The pretense set up for the prosecution was that Anderson had participated in a forgery or alteration of the Vernon parish returns, but there was not one particle of evidence to connect him with this act.

The whole matter had been thoroughly examined by the commissions of Congress, and all the records and returns had been spread before them, and even Littlefield, who made the alterations, had exculpated Anderson from knowledge of it.

The truth is, the Vernon returns were opened by the Returning Board, before hosts of witnesses, on the ninth day of the examination; were printed promptly as they were in the papers and in both houses of Congress, and the subsequent alteration was done there as a put up job by him in the interest of the local candidates, having no effect upon the general result. There does not appear to be a single scrap of testimony showing that Anderson participated in it in the slightest degree.

There was no motive for such an alteration by Anderson. The true returns being printed in so many forms it was absurd to think he would utter it, and yet upon this false pretext he was convicted.

I still hope that this conviction will not be carried into execution, but if it is, as a matter of course the deepest feeling of resentment and hostility will exist in the minds of the great mass of our people, who believe that these Returning Board officers did but their simple duty. Nothing has been done pending the trial to interfere in any way with the course of judicial proceedings.

But if Anderson is imprisoned under this sentence it will be a mockery of public justice, and will bring into contempt all efforts at peace and conciliation. It is an unlooked for and terrible commentary upon the efforts of the President to quiet the turbulence and violence of Louisiana politics, and seems to me an act of folly and madness.

The following is a copy of the dispatch referred to:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4, 1878.

To Gen. Thomas C. Anderson, New Orleans:

The undersigned feel it due to you under the present circumstances, to assure you of our unhesitating belief that in the matter wherein you stand charged, you are altogether guiltless of any offense against the law. That you are falsely accused and maliciously prosecuted. That the proceeding against you, though in the form of law, is without the substance of justice. That we hereby tender our earnest sympathies, and express our hope that the sense and love of justice of the people of Louisiana will protect you, and not permit the best interests of the whole country to be disturbed by a revival of sectional animosities.

In any event we are confident that the American people will redress any injustice of which you may be made the victim.

General Anderson's Counsel made a motion for a new trial, but on Saturday, 23d inst., the motion was denied. A motion was then made to arrest judgment. On Monday, 25th, at 10 a.m., this motion was also denied, and General Anderson sentenced.

The Court having asked the prisoner if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon him, the latter, with much excitement, answered:

Sir—You are about to act upon the finding of twelve persons. I am in your power. God knows that I am innocent of the charge. This is a cruel persecution under the forms of law. I am ready to receive your sentence.

Judge Whitaker replied as follows:

I think the action of the Grand Jury and the law officers of the State, and of the jury who sat on your trial, and the court that presided upon it, was fully justified by the evidence, and I have seen no indication of any attempt at persecution. I think the verdict rendered was in accordance with the evidence adduced on the trial; that you had a fair trial by a jury impartially selected from the good people of the State. Considering the verdict of the jury, and their recommendation to the mercy of the Court, under section 833 of the Revised Statutes I sentence you to two years at hard labor in the State Penitentiary, and to pay the costs of this prosecution.

The New York Witness says:

The Methodist Ministers of the Louisiana Conference (Northern Church) who lately held their annual session at Baton Rouge bore united testimony to the present settled condition of society in that State.

By "Northern Church" we suppose the Witness means the Methodist Episcopal Church, and refers to the late Annual Conference. That body took no active bearing on the political condition of society in this State. A correspondent writing from the Conference to a Northern paper said: "We have peace in all our borders. The laws have been rigidly enforced. Criminals are brought to justice as fast as possible. All classes of citizens are respected in their rights." We wish the remarks of that correspondent were true. The are no doubt true in his immediate sphere, but a wider observation would, we are sure, convince him that in his anxiety to state the favorable side of affairs in Louisiana he has been over sanguine.

Boston Letter.

The season for popular lectures has closed, but the literary attractions of this city are by no means exhausted. Cook still reigns in Tremont Temple, and sways a scepter whose influence is becoming omnipresent despite the vigorous attacks which it meets on every side.

James T. Fields is drawing a large audience to hear his lectures on the literary men of America. His sparkling style and inexhaustible store of personal reminiscences of the subjects of his lecture make him one of the most entertaining and attractive speakers of the modern platform.

In the field of Theology courses of unusual interest have been delivered to the students of Boston University by Prof. Bowne, Dr. Robinson and Dr. Dorchester. Dr. Bowne occupies the chair of Philosophy in the College of Liberal Arts, and is frequently quoted as the most acute philosophical critic in America. He stands in direct opposition to John Fiske, of Howard, and the materialistic school of Durrison and Clifford in England. His critique of Herbert Spencer philosophy is yet unchallenged as the most able expose of the subtle fallacies of materialism which has ever been written. He is withall an earnest believer in the truth of the Bible and an able exponent of the most advanced Christian Philosophy of the day.

Dr. Robinson, of Brown University discusses the subject of the relation of Theology and Ethics, and asserts the necessity of a type of Christianity which looks squarely in the face of the moral law. His sword is unsheathed when he speaks of that experience which has a maximum of gush and glory and with but a minimum of sturdy character. He characterizes many of the songs of the modern camp meeting and social service as so much doggerel which, to an alarming degree, obscures the true Bible ideal of a Christian life. The Doctor speaks without notes, and in this and the imposing presence which he presents, wins his audience at the start. Very much attention has been given of late to the subject of eternal punishment. Mr. Cook was heard from last Sabbath in a masterly answer to Cannon Farrar. Dr. Dorchester in a recent course of lectures presented the concessions of Liberalists on that subject, while almost every pulpit has given it attention and it seems likely that the views of the Church are destined to have a restatement of the Bible doctrine, in which the harshness of the Edwardian theology will find little place. The Unitarians and Universalists are at one in the fight. The former are universally restorationists and thus parallel with the more moderate Universalists. The interest increases and the war is but begun.

The Missionary field is receiving an unusual degree of attention upon the part of the theologians of the University. Two or three are expecting to join Taylor in his South American work the coming Spring. Another goes to join Thompson at Buenos Ayres, while others are looking to India as their prospective field. The Church has an increased financial duty before her in providing for those who are waiting to represent her cause, on the world's frontier. Major Whittle is holding evangelistic services in the Tabernacle, and with good results, but the interest awakened will not compare with that of last year.

Mr. Moody is expected to take the leadership again about March 1st, and his coming is awaited with no less expectancy than that which greeted his first appearance in 1877. His hold on Boston seems to have lost none of its tenacity during the months of his absence. W.

Boston, Feb. 20th.

Shaw University.

The first quarterly conference of this district was held at this place on Saturday. The members of the conference are fully awake in regard to the educational interests of the Church, and have unanimously agreed to double the apportionment imposed by the Annual Conference, and to exert every effort to raise an average of one dollar per member, instead of fifty cents, to aid in the erection of a new building for our University. If the same efforts are made in all parts of the district by the presiding elder, preacher in charge and official members, Holly Springs District will do a grand work this year. We have heard from several points and are glad to learn that our preachers are suiting their actions to their words by following the resolutions passed at Conference.

Actions are what tell, brethren. Let there be a uniform effort all along the line, in every district, circuit and charge. Let it no longer be said of us that we promise many things and do but few; pass stirring resolutions but never think of them after leaving the Conference room.

We have made good promises, passed fitting resolutions, and it is possible for us to keep them. Let us do it. Some members may not be able to pay fifty cents but many can and will give more if properly instructed and influenced. Much also may be obtained from parties not members of the Church, so that an average of fifty cents per church member may be obtained on every circuit and at every charge. Many who have not money will gladly give labor; turn that labor into money by making it productive.

The offer that we now have of receiving a dollar from abroad for every dollar raised in our Conference may soon be withdrawn, and it certainly will if we do not show wisdom by diligence. Only those who make faithful efforts to help themselves are worthy to be aided.

Be in earnest, brother, be in earnest and let the Church and the world see what you can do.

This work of Christian education is God's own work and absolutely necessary to the existence of his Church; and those who neglect it will not be held guiltless. Dr. Wentworth says: "A Church which ceases to educate its people can no more exist than a Church which ceases to practise charity or to observe the Ten Commandments." You are not now called upon to support the teachers of your school but to give only one-half of the money that is to be put into permanent improvements to be used by your children and handed down to posterity. Now, brethren, if you wish to succeed in this work you must begin now. Do not wait till the last months of the year before you commence, and then expect to do a year's work in a few weeks. If you wished to fail this would be the way to do it. But you do not want to fail, so now, to-day, begin and continue faithfully to labor through the whole year. God says; "Now, to-day." Let these words be in your hearts, and let your deeds ever be in harmony with them.

We have now a large number of new students, and when those who are teaching come in we shall have the largest number and best class of students that have ever been at the University.

Respectfully, W. W. Hooper.

From West Virginia.

Rev. David Cunningham, Mannington, West Va., renews his subscription for another year and adds: "My ancestors from away back of the Revolutionary war were Southern people. I voted the Democratic ticket until less than 300,000 slaveholders, with John Bull and the Pope at their back, undertook to bulldoze the only truly Democratic Government on the face of the earth. Ku Kluxism and like forms of Devilism seem to have had their day. The ghosts of Chisholm and of Rev. Lewis Davis will not "down" at their bidding.

Here sin is defiant but is checkmated by revivals of religion. There is a glorious outpouring of the Holy Ghost all through West Virginia, and hundreds are being converted. Being in my seventy-fifth year I had concluded that my labors, after forty-two years public service, were well nigh closed. But, blessed be God, I have worked and enjoyed more this winter than for years before.

Forty five years ago my wife and myself were converted. Since then we have had nine children. Four of them died happy, after being converted, one died in childhood, the mother passed over the River of Jordan triumphant, Oct. 30th, 1876, singing,

There's room enough in Paradise,
For us all a home in glory.

and the other four children are on their way to meet their mother on the Shining Shore. My own experience is that we may, as parents in the Lord, be as instrumental in bringing our children to Christ as into the world. God is all he promises.

The Methodist Advocate says: "Dr. Rust spent a few days in Atlanta last week, looking after the interests of Clark University. On his way he visited Bennett Seminary, at Greensboro, N. C., and reports prosperity in that school. The new Seminary building is under cover, will be completed in about two months, and will be one of the handsomest and most commodious school buildings in North Carolina. It occupies a commanding site overlooking the whole town. It is a donation from Lyman Bennett, Esq., of Troy, N. Y. We learn that it will be dedicated in June, by Rev. Dr. Thayer, of Boston, the father of the Principal. Bishop Haven and Dr. Rust also expect to be present at the dedication."

A Boston preacher roused a sleepy audience by a solemn assurance that though the times were hard, very hard indeed, the wages of sin had not been cut down in the least.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. J. W. Hilton, Fairfield, La., reports that the outlook on his work is good; that the people are in good spirits and church and Sunday school doing well.

Rev. J. R. Carnes, Giddings, Texas: "In a protracted meeting just closed there were six conversions, and thirteen united with the church on probation. We have a missionary society now in successful operation. Our people are united and in good spirits."

Rev. I. Hayward, Baton Rouge, La., sends money for subscribers, and adds: "The Lord has been recently preaching some effective sermons to this community. Two men who had neglected the salvation of their souls were called to die. They fully realized their condition, and their words of terror and despair upon their dying beds have made a profound impression upon all who knew them. Their companions in wickedness have no desire to experience the death of the Infidel."

Rev. M. Dale, of Wesley Chapel, in this city: "We commenced a protracted meeting on the 11th inst. Twenty persons have been converted, and forty-two are at the anxious seat desiring the prayers of God's people. The attendance is very large. There is a mighty outpouring of God's Spirit. All Christian's are invited to participate; the meeting is still going at this date, Feb. 25th."

Anatole Panally, Thibodeaux, La.: "A very gracious revival is attending the labors of our pastor, Rev. G. B. Lynch, on this work. For the last three weeks the church has been thronged with people, night after night. Some have come out of darkness into light, while others fill the space by them made vacant around the altar. Oh! that they may all come to the fold of God, for there need not one be left behind; to this end may all lend us their prayers. Our interest is alike in the great cause of Christ."

Rev. J. H. Dozier, Belton, Texas: "We have just closed our first Quarterly Meeting at this place and we are now in the midst of a glorious revival of religion. The first Quarterly Conference for Belton convened on the 9th inst. The old church having been burned down nearly three years ago, by request of the Conference and Trustees the Elder and myself were appointed to make sale of the old church lot and purchase another on which to erect a house of worship. On Sunday, at 2.30 p. m., Elder Gregory preached, and administered the Lord's supper, and preached again at night. At the Love Feast the Lord did abundantly pour out his blessings upon us all. Monday morning we proceeded to sell the lot and closed the sale on Tuesday. On Wednesday the Elder carried a subscription paper around among the citizens and raised seventy odd dollars. The people are still subscribing largely to the church, saying they will do all they can for us. We want to have the church ready for dedication by the next Quarterly Conference."

Rev. W. L. Molloy, Presiding Elder, Houston, writes from Houston: "I returned last night to the city from Richmond, where I have been engaged for the last week in holding revival services. The preacher, Bro. Nobles, and Rev. S. Hardwell rendered efficient help. The Lord was with us at every service. The altar was filled with mourners and several were converted. The Church at Richmond is gradually and surely gaining, and is in better condition than it has been for several years. Twenty or twenty-five have united with the Church this year. The pastor, Bro. Nobles, is very much loved by the people. The Lord has been with us at all our Quarterly meetings since Conference. All the brethren are at their post and doing good work for the Master. I have resolved to give a talk at every meeting I hold this year on the subject of Christian perfection, and I find that God is blessing me in it. If this doctrine is true, then it is our duty to talk more to the people about it. Pray for us."

General Religious Items.

It is said of the 6,000,000 Catholics in the United States, 1,237,000 are Germans. These are served by 1,373 priests.

The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions has, since its organization, spent $938,000, or an average of $23,000 annually, among the Indians of this country.

In 1870 the Episcopal Church had 2,803 ministers, exclusive of bishops, for 208,000 communicants, or one minister for every seventy-five communicants; in 1877 she had 3,216 ministers for 280,000 or one for every eighty eight.

The average number of baptisms by Baptist ministers in the United States last year was eight. The average number by Baptist missionaries in foreign lands was fourteen.

The Reformed Episcopal Church is gaining ground in England. Bishop Sugden and five ministers have seceded from the Free Church of England to join it. Bishop Sugden has been declared coadjutor bishop with Bishop Gregg.

Of the ten Catholic Archbishops in the United States four are Irish; of the 56 living Bishops, 29 are of the same nationality; of the 5,200 priests, no less than 3,000 belong to the Irish race. The same proportion holds good in the laity, who who are officially returned at 6,500,000, and of these 4,000,000 have been supplied by Ireland.

The Seventh Day Adventist are the only Adventist body in this country that have a complete and efficient organization. They have 16 annual Conferences and a General Conference. Each annual Conference has a Missionary and Tract Society. The past year these societies reported that 5,165 families were visited and 1,000 tracts distributed, not including periodicals and other literary matter.

General News Items.

Only one of the six court judges recently elected by the South Carolina Legislature is a Republican.

Prof. Reiley states officially, as chairman of a United States commission, that the country will not in 1878 be troubled by grasshoppers.

In the investigation of the wrecking of the Metropolis a number of witnesses from the ship's crew testified that the Captain said that he had been ordered by the owners to make "a good wreck of it," meaning that she was worthless and that they desired to obtain the insurance money by sinking her.

Ample provision for the educational future of Nebraska has been made by the General Government. The public schools of the State are endowed by a vast landed estate, 1,280 acres in a township, amounting in the aggregate to 2,500,000 acres. The sale of these lands forms the principal of a school fund which the Constitution of the State guarantees against diminution, and the income will eventually be sufficient for school purposes. Hence the State furnishes the best facilities for the free education of her youth, and taxation for school purposes will soon be unnecessary.

The Florida Sun and Press announces that Rev. J. L. Lyons, of Jacksonville, has received a letter from parties in the Turkish Empire, who, weary of Turkish tyranny and oppression, desire to emigrate to the United States. They are from the ancient and interesting city of Damascus, Syria. They represent that they have a few thousand dollars in gold, and several thousand in Turkish consols, which they deem worthless. They would like to go to Florida, as the climate is similar to that of their own native land. They are not of the nomadic tribes called Bedouin, but belong to the better class, and are connected with the Greek Church. The writer of the letter received by Mr. Lyons says: "I loathe and dread living in the Turkish Empire, and desire to take my children to America—that land of happiness and security. I desire a place of civilization and education; of peace and safety; far from this wretched land and its religious and political despotism. I therefore entreat you, by the name of the Lord, to listen to this plea, and give the benefit of your advice and counsel to the strangers."

Sec. 2. That immediately after the passage of this Act, the President shall invite the governments of the countries composing the Latin Union, so-called, and of such other European nations as he may deem advisable, to join the United States in a Conference to adopt a common ratio as between gold and silver, for the purpose of establishing the internationality of bi-metalic money, and securing a fixity of relative value between those metals, such conference to be held in such place in Europe, or in the United States, at such time within six months as may be mutually agreed upon.

The executives of the governments joining in the same, whenever the governments so united, or any three of them, shall have signified their willingness to unite in the same, the President shall, by and with the consent of the Senate, appoint three commissioners, who shall attend such conference on behalf of the United States and shall report the doings thereof to the President of the United States and Congress.

Said commissioners shall each receive the sum of $2500 and their reasonable expenses, to be approved by the Secretary of State, and the amount necessary to pay such compensation and expenses is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Sec. 3. That any holder of the coin authorized by this Act may deposit the same with the Treasurer or Assistant Treasurer of the United States, in sums not less than ten dollars, and receive therefor certificates of not less than ten dollars each, corresponding with the denominations of the United States notes. The coin deposited for, or representing the certificates, shall be retained in the Treasury for the payment of the same on demand. Said certificates shall be received for customs, for taxes, and all public dues, and when so received may be reissued.

Sec. 4. All Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed.

March 10, 1878—HEZEKIAH'S GOOD REIGN.
SCRIPTURE—2 Chron. 29: 1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"And in every work that he began * * * he did it with all his heart and prospered."—31: 21.

TOPIC—"Return unto the Lord and He will have mercy."—Is. 55: 7.

(Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.)

THE SANCTUARY OPENED (1-3) —Ahaz, the worst of all the kings of Judah, was the father of one who turned out to be the best of her kings. "After him there was none like him among all the kings of Judah, nor any that went before him." So rare is it for the son to present completely the reverse side of the father's character that, when it does happen, it always is a constant surprise.

The childhood and youth of Hezekiah were passed amidst scenes the most demoralizing. He lived in the most corrupt times. Though evil surrounded him upon every side, the influences for good seem to have been specially concentrated and intense. It is altogether probable that the instructions of a mother, the grossness of the evil of his times, and the contrasting purity of the worship of the true God, all had something to do with forming the character that has excited the admiration of the centuries.

He was an energetic king. He commenced his reformation "in the first year of his reign, in the first month." He put off nothing either on account of laziness or of policy. For a young man he exhibited unusual nerve and readiness to cope with the gigantic evils that faced him on assuming the reins of government. Evidently he was a man unusually matured, to move forward so confidently on the very threshold of his career. His first act was to open the doors of the temple that had been shut by his father. He both opened and repaired them.

SANCTIFICATION ENJOINED (4, 5.)—While that work was going on, most likely, he assembled the priests and the Levites, who by the act of [illegible] had been scattered throughout the land. They had been over[illegible] by that wicked king, and [illegible] him into cowardice. The [illegible] the call does not appear [illegible] general or prompt. [illegible] specially, were back[illegible] Levites were more [illegible] sanctify them[illegible] 34. The king, in this instance, rebuked the priests, instead of the priests rebuking the king. He exhorted them, first, to sanctify themselves, and then to sanctify the temple. It was long since either had been done.

SINS ACKNOWLEDGED (6-9.)—To get at the cause of public calamities is to ensure their cure. When Hezekiah came to the throne, and saw the prostration and the poverty of the people, the diminished kingdom and the calamities that had made the nation an "astonishment" and a "hissing" in the eyes of the nations round about, he did not lay the blame of the defeats that Judah had suffered on a defective military organization, nor ascribe the invasions to a wrong foreign policy, but leaped boldly to the truth, and declared the real cause for all their troubles was that they had forsaken the Lord and turned their backs upon his sanctuary. His idea of the true method of a return to prosperity was a return to the Lord.

SERVICES ORDERED (10, 11.)—The first service to be rendered was a service of the heart. Hezekiah says: "Now it is in mine heart to make a convenant with the Lord God of Israel." When it is in the heart of any one to make a convenant with him, God is ready. It is the sinner only that hangs back. The Lord is ready to make one that shall last through time and through eternity. But the convenant which Hezekiah desired to make, in order that the fierce wrath of God might be turned away from Judah, was not one in which God and himself were to be the only parties, but was to be like the one made by Jehoiada, the priest, "between him, and between all the people, and between the king, that they should be the Lord's people." 23: 16. Having seen the cause of all these evils, Hezekiah, with equal clearness, saw the way out of them. And that was through repentance and return to God. How many statesmen would be willing to urge in Congress that method out of our difficulties?

My sons be not now negligent. Literally, "withdraw not yourselves." "For the Lord hath chosen you," etc. That was a rebuke for having abandoned the services of the temple at all. No matter if a king did say that the temple should be closed, the Lord had given them the command to keep it open. They ought to have answered as sturdily as did Peter and John before the Sanhedrin: "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye." Acts 4: 19. The priests had withdrawn, and, apparently, still felt like withdrawing. The king spread before them their divine commission. They were appointed of God to do their work, and they must not let it stop.

The hearts of the fourteen Levites were set on flame by this appeal. They made their names immortal by gathering their bretheren, and pushing on the work till its completion. Out of all the crowd that was in "the east street," there were only these fourteen that enthusiastically entered into the work—and they were not priests.

Hezekiah did not stop in his good work with the opening of the temple and the resumption of its services. Next he summoned the people to a celebration of the neglected passover, which, in the imposing extent of its sacrifices, had nothing to equal it since the days of Solomon.

Neither did the work end here; for the multitude that had been gathered at the passover, seized with a spasm of just indignation, went throughout the land, and even into Manasseh and Ephraim, breaking in pieces the idols cutting down the groves, and throwing down the high places and the altars, until they had utterly destroyed them all. Other kings unavailingly tried to exterminate the high places or left them altogether untouched. Hezekiah extirpated them and their kindred abominations off from the face of the earth with one magnificent sweep of his arm. In his conscientiousness, he did one thing at which he might well have hesitated. He broke in pieces the brazen serpent which have been preserved for over seven hundred years, and which had become an object of idolatrous veneration to which the people were in the habit of offering incense. 2 K. 18: 4. Although it must have cost him some pain to destroy so sacred a relic, yet he did not waver. With the contemptuous expression that it was "Nehushtan," a mere piece of brass, he put it out of the power of the people longer to make an idol out of that. What Hezekiah did, he did thoroughly. For once the land was pure. "And in every work that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the law, and in the commandments, to seek his God, he did it with all his heart, and prospered."

Card to the Public.

The second International Sunday School Convention will meet at Atlanta, Ga., April 17-19 ensuing. The Executive Committee have issued a call asking a report from delegates—representing the various States. Texas is entitled to sixteen delegates. No delegates were appointed at our last meeting at Houston, and our next, in May, will be too late. We therefore issue this Card to our State Sunday School workers, asking for personal or voluntary nominations for Atlanta.

Texas is too large and too grand to be defeated by technicalities, and too much in need to be neglected. We will arrange credentials, railroad commutation, &c. Who will go? Names must be reported to me by March 20th, to assure entertainment, and recognition in Convention. Let us go! Will the press of the State please pass this along the line?

Address, L. H. CARHART,
Member Inter. S. S. Com.
Sherman, Texas.

The Louisiana Trials.

The following we quote from Harper's Weekly:

There is no doubt that the prosecution of the members of the Louisiana Returning Board is largely due to partisan passion. All the facts as reported indicate this, and especially the total failure, so far as appears, to connect Mr. Anderson with the fraudulent action charged. The spirit of the prosecution is shown, moreover, by the universal expectation that the accused persons would be convicted. But the crowning proof that the object is political revenge, and not justice, that the purpose is not to ascertain the truth of the election, but to punish prejudged offenders, appears in the fact that there is no proposition to investigate the crimes that were unquestionably committed by Democrats to terrorize the colored Republicans. In the face of the testimony that was furnished during the canvass of the votes in Louisiana, to avoid an inquiry into the facts is morally to satisfy every candid man that the vote as thrown was in no just sense whatever an indication of the popular will; while, if the general inquiry into attempted frauds in the election of 1876 should be made, nothing so flagrant and startling would be found as the reply from No. 15 Gramercy Park, New York, to the dispatch from Oregon, stating that money would be advanced to buy one Republican elector if the obligation were made contingent upon success.

The prosecutions in New Orleans are in every point of view unwise. There is probably not a well-informed person in the country who believes that the trials are honest and impartial, and the moral value of the result, therefore, is wholly lost. The prosecution merely deepens the distrust of many men in the Northern States toward the South, and plays into the eager hands of those who would carefully nurse sectional hostility as the basis of national politics. But it is absurd to suppose that such is the true policy. In the present situation of the country a truly wise statesmanship will constantly labor for a better mutual understanding. If each party is to follow the leadership of its most malignant instead of its most enlightened sentiment, we may expect to see such spectacles as the trial in New Orleans become universal. Good citizens must not permit the tone of politics in this country to be determined by the fire-eaters on either side. The present performance in Louisiana is but one of the noxious results of the war, and of the long angry period that preceded it; and if the intelligent and patriotic sentiment of the country should refuse generosity and magnanimity as long as the fierce passions bred of ignorance and slavery showed themselves anywhere and in any degree, it would be only because the sagacity and courage of our race had failed us. Under the American system—a system which is approved by reason and experience—such troubles as this in New Orleans must be worked out in every State for itself. It is mere folly to expect of a community like Louisiana, with a population of mixed races, with the traditions of slavery, and with the consequences of emancipation by war and immediate enfranchisement of the slaves—a State in which education has been imperfect, and industry long prostrated, and race and party passions infuriated, and corruption notorious—the order and peaceful proceedures of States like New York and Michigan. Such a situation is, indeed, the misfortune of good people in that State, but we must make our account with it; and since we have no power to govern other States as we in New York might wish to see them governed, it is our plain duty to do what we lawfully and morally may do to strengthen the better sentiment in those States.

This will certainly not be accomplished by wholesale denunciation, and by showing the intelligent and patriotic people of such States that we are eager to seize every blunder or crime as decisive evidence of the hopeless treachery and malice of "the South." All truly honorable Americans in Louisiana and in every State do unquestionable deprecate the revival of sectional animosities. Yet, as they are sensible men, they expect, of course, that they will be occasionally revived, and they do not wish, with every outbreak, that an army could march and establish martial law. Those who wish that this could be done are essentially disunionists. They hold, in fact, that the association of the Northern and Southern States upon equal terms is impracticable. The New Orleans trials may show vividly that a malignant spirit is still powerful in Louisiana. But they do not discredit the action of the Administration, which was not ignorant of that spirit, and which deliberately discarded the old methods of dealing with it that had utterly failed. Nobody out of a lunatic asylum could have supposed that because, all things considered, the action of the Administration was wise, there would be no further trouble or indication of bad blood in the Southern States. But the most intelligent men in those States must see that when the malignant spirit of which we speak is seen absolutely to control local affairs, all resolute and right-minded citizens in the country will combine to take care that it does not control national affairs.

The National Sunday School Teacher, for March, as usual comes fullfreighted with information for the teacher. Its several departments of "Chronological," "Historical," "Nationalities," "Antiquities," are replete with the very facts that a teacher, who desires to instruct his class intelligently, needs to know. The expositions, too, are equal to the best. The Notes, Chitchat, News, etc., are as pleasant reading as ever. The Scholars' Weekly is rapidly growing into popular favor. It is for intermediate classes. The Little Folks exactly suits the little people. Chicago: Adams, Blackmer, & Lyon Pub. Co.

The Parent of Insomnia.

The parent of insomnia or wakefulness is in nine cases out of ten a dyspeptic stomach. Good digestion gives sound sleep, indigestion interferes with it. The brain and stomach sympathize. One of the prominent symptoms of a weak state of the gastric organs is a disturbance of the great nerve entrepot, the brain. Invigorate the stomach, and you restore equilibrium to the great center. A most reliable medicine for the purpose is Hostetter's stomach bitters, which is far preferable to mineral sedatives and powerful narcotics which, though they may for a time exert a soporific influence upon the brain, soon cease to act, and invariably injure the tone of the stomach. The Bitters, on the contrary, restore activity to the operations of that all important organ, and their beneficient influence is reflected in sound sleep and a tranquil state of the nervous system. A wholesome impetus is likewise given to the action of the liver and bowels by its use. feb17tomar1.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. Sherer, Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. jan24-1m.

The Class-Leader,
His Work, and How to Do It.
With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.
BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,
Author of "Garden of Sorrows."
12mo........$1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

STATE
RegUlation of Vice.
Aaron M. Powell, of New York.
CONTAINS

1. State Regulation of Vice.
A paper read before the New York Committee for the Prevention of Licensed Prostitution.

2. Regulation Efforts in America.
A paper prepared for the International Congress at Geneva, Switzerland, 1877,

3. The Geneva Congress,
embracing a sketch of the proceedings, and in full, the conclusions of the several sections of the Congress: 1. Hygiene; 2. Morals; 3. Social Economy; 4. Rescue Work; 5. Legislation:

5. New York Committee's Address to the Geneva Congress.

The author, Mr. Powell, (formerly editor of the National Anti-Slavery Standard), represented the New York Committee as a delegate in the International Congress, at Geneva, to promote the abolition of Government Regulation of Prostitution.

This is a book of great interest and importance to all students of social science; especially to all physicians, ministers, journalists and legislators, and to the intelligent and philanthropic everywhere.

Under the guise of hygiene, and of the public welfare, already several States have broached the question of regulating prostitution by law, and unless the opponents of these movements are wary we shall have in this country laws which will be disgraceful to humanity and oppressive to virtuous women, before we are aware of it. Let every one who favors justice to woman, morality in man, and purity everywhere, buy and help to spread the sale of this book where it will do the most good. Price $1.00

National Repository,
A CHRISTIAN MAGAZINE.
Rev. D. CURRY, D.D., Editor.
Begins Jan'y, 1878. Try it one Year.
ONLY $3 A YEAR.

"The scope and character of the magazine shall be that of a first-class religious and literary monthly, of the brightest character attainable, and pervaded, whether in its general or religious articles, by a thoroughly Christian spirit."—Order of the Committee.

Under these directions, it will be devoted to General and Religious Literature, Biographies and Travels, Criticisms and Art.

A sufficient number of the best writers for the press are employed to furnish all the variety in the several departments which their scope and importance require to make them rich and instructive.

The editorial department will be a feature of the magazine. Rev. Dr. Curry, both experienced and successful as an editor, brings to his duties the purpose of giving his whole strength to the work before him.

Each number will contain one or more articles illustrated with Wood Engravings, in the best style of this art, adding beauty and value to the pages.

The twelve numbers for the year will contain 1,152 pages of reading-matter, which, published in book form, would make not less than fifteen volumes, worth $1.50 each, and will comprise a variety that will be more interesting and valuable to the general reader than can be procured in books for many times the yearly price of the magazine.

We earnestly request you to take the National Repository for 1878—to give it one year's trial, and thereby determine for yourselves whether it is worthy of a place in the Christian home.

An Aim.

Give me a man with an aim,
Whatever that aim may be.
Whether it's wealth or whether it's fame,
It matters not to me.
Let him walk in the path of right
And keep his aim in sight,
And work and pray in faith alway
With his eye on the glittering height.

Give me a man who says,
"I will do something well,
And make the fleeting days
A story of labor tell."
Though the aim he has be small,
It is better than none at all:
With something to do all the year through,
He will not stumble or fall.

But Satan weaves a snare
For the feet of those who stray,
Who've never a thought or a care
Where the path may lead them away.
The man who has no aim,
Not only leaves no name
When this life is done, but ten to one
He leaves a record of shame.

Give me a man whose heart
Is filled with ambition's fire:
Who sets his mark in the start,
And keeps moving it high and higher.
Better to die in the strife,
The hands with labor rife,
Than to glide with the tide in an idle dream,
And live a purposeless life.

Better to strive and climb
And never reach the goal,
Than to drift along with time—
An aimless, worthless soul,
Ay, better to climb and fall,
Or sow, though the yield may be small,
Than to throw away day after day,
And never strive at all.

Good Society.

Many parents who have sons and daughters growing up are anxious for them to get in good society. This is an honorable anxiety, if it interprets good society after some lofty fashion.

Parents, your daughter is in good society when she is with girls who are sweet and pure and true-hearted; who are not vain or frivolous; who think of something besides dress, or flirting, or marriage; between whom and their parents there is confidence; who are useful as well as ornamental in the house; who cultivate their minds, and train their hands to skillful workmanship. If society of this sort is not to be had then none at all is preferable to a worthless article. See to it that you impress this on your children, and above all, that you do not encourage them to think that good society is a matter of fine clothes, or wealth, or boasting to be somebody. As you value your child's soul, guard her against these miserable counterfeits; and impress upon her that intelligence, and simplicity, and modesty, and goodness, are the only legal coin.

The same rule holds for boys as for girls. You would have these enter into good society. Do not imagine that you have accomplished it when you have got them in with a set of boys whose parents are wealthier than you, who dress better than your boy can afford to, and who pride themselves upon their social position. Good society for a boy is the society of boys who are honest and straight-forward, who have no bad habits, who are earnest and ambitious. They are not in a hurry to be men. They are not ambitious for the company of shallow, heartless women, old enough to be their mothers, and are not envious of their friends who fancy there is something grand in dolling all the edge of their heart's hope upon such jaded favorites.

There is nothing sadder than to either young men or women priding themselves upon the society which they enjoy, when verily it is a Dead Sea apple that will choke them with its dust, when they need some generous juicy fruit to cool their lips and stay the hunger of their souls.—Christian Register.

"The Ninety and Nine."

On the Aletnsch Glacier I saw a strange, a beautiful sight—the parable of the "Ninety and nine," re-acted to the letter. One day we were making our way with ice-ax and alpenstock down the glacier, when we observed a flock of sheep following their shepherds over the intricate windings between crevasses, and so passing from the pastures on one side of the glacier to the pastures on the other. The flock had numbered two hundred all told. But on the way one sheep had got lost. One of the shepherds, in his German patois, appealed to us if we had seen it. Fortunately, one of the parties had a field-glass. With its aid we discovered the lost sheep far [illegible] a tangle of brushwood, on the rocky mountain side. It was beautiful to see how the shepherd, without a word, left his hundred and ninety-nine sheep out on the glacier [illegible] (knowing they would stand there perfectly still and safe,) and went clambering back after the lost sheep until he found it. And he [illegible] put it on his shoulder and "returned rejoicing." Here was our Lord's parable enacted before our eyes; though the shepherd was all unconscious of it. And it brought [illegible] Lord's teaching home to us with [illegible] which none can realize [illegible] who saw the incident.

The Sovereigns of Christendom.

There are at the present moment thirty-six reigning sovereigns in christendom, from the Queen of England, to whom 237,000,000 of human beings owe allegiance, to the Prince of Monaco, whom 5,742 subjects acknowledge as their leige lord. Of these princes, ten are nominally Roman Catholic, namely, the emperors of Austria and Brazil, the kings of Italy, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Bavaria, Saxony, the princes of Lichenstein and Monaco. Of the remaining twenty-six, two belong to the Greek Church, though the Czar and the King of the Hellenes belong to the different branches of it. The other twenty-four are Protestants, sixteen being called Lutherans, four (including the German Emperor) belonging to the "Evangelical" confession, three to the "Reformed" Church, and one being the "supreme head on earth" of the Church of England, but the vast majority of Queen Victoria's subjects (139,000,000,) are neither Protestants nor Catholics, but Hindoos, while the Mohammedans, 40,000,000 in number, are themselves more numerous than the Protestants of all denominations in the empire.—Northern Advocate.

How to be Miserable.

The best recipe we know, if you want to miserable, is to think about yourself, how much you have lost, how much you have not made, and the poor prospects for the future. A brave man with a soul in him gets out of such pitiful ruts and laughs at discouragement, rolls up his sleeves, whistles and sings, and makes the best of life. This earth never was intended for Paradise, and a man who rises above his discouragement and keeps his manhood will only be the stronger and better for his adversities. Many a noble ship has been saved by throwing over board its most valuable cargo, and many a man is better and more humane after he has lost his gold.

When Abraham Lincoln was a poor lawyer, he found himself one cold day at a village some distance from Springfield, Ill., and with no means of conveyance. Seeing a gentleman driving along the Springfield road in a carriage, he ran up to him and politely said: "Sir, will you have the goodness to take my overcoat to town for me?" "With pleasure," answered the gentleman. "But how will you get it again?" "Oh, very easily," said Mr. Lincoln, "as I intend to remain in it." "Jump in," said the gentleman, laughing, and the future President had a pleasant ride.

At a celebration of the first anniversary of the Inauguration of the Murphy movement at Wheeling, W. Va., a speaker said: "There has not been a man or woman of the Murphy movement who has yet been obliged to beg for bread; there has not been one of those who signed the Murphy pledge sent to prison; there has not been one that has lost the confidence or spect of his fellow-men, and there is not one of the six thousand who signed the pledge in this city that is not happy in the consciousness of a happy home."

REMEDIES

Natural Selection.
Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.
IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.
ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.
MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would snuff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.
Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples, and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver, or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.
Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flashes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

Contagion.

[illegible] tions have no [illegible] for their financial [illegible] the years that have [illegible] disastrous tides [illegible] The gale [illegible] of almost [illegible] in the work of [illegible] churches, by [illegible] built, and [illegible] in process of [illegible] of dollars had [illegible] large debts [illegible] swept away bes [illegible] thousand, very [illegible] been lost. So [illegible] concerned, you [illegible] on your fingers [illegible] instances, the [illegible] the con- [illegible] and who [illegible] paid, [illegible] the people [illegible] and negotiate [illegible] to the rescue, [illegible] Church [illegible] thereof, [illegible] caused the [illegible] by [illegible] than [illegible]

[illegible] But, best of all, the pastors themselves are moving in the matter, and there are evidences of a great uprising among the people to save all that is in peril. The probabilities are that the monetary stringency will pass away, and the danger with it, with the loss of very few houses of worship. And when the next welcome wave of commercial prosperity strikes the country even these will be rescued. It is safe to say, judging the future from the past, that many more moneyed corporations than churches will fail to meet their monetary obligations.

The Church, like the nation, is immortal. Individuals may die, but the Church lives on. Men may fail and be discouraged, but a company of Christian people who have the "form and power of godliness," no matter how poor they may be, can be inspired to most heroic deeds of self-denial and liberality. Often the death of a rich man, upon whom the Church has greatly depended, and whose loss seemed to be an irreparable calamity, has had the effect to unify the host of givers and make every member feel that now he must do his best. Small offerings no longer seem insignificant.

Whatever congregation, from whatever cause, executes a well-devised plan of universal giving, has reached the source of financial plenty. A congregation of 500 members of plain, working people, if thoroughly united and disciplined, need not despair of paying any Church debt, however great. The one problem of the pastor is "how to get all at work." Before the united efforts of such a company of courageous and harmonious Christians a debt of $10,000 or $20,000 will melt away like snow before the sun. The possibilities of such activity, which can always be brought about under the leadership of an earnest, hard-working and consecrated pastor, are real and available assets of the Church. Men estimate the value of silver mines upon the probabilities of the case. They reason upon the theory that what has been will be. No probabilities of financial success in mining so nearly approximate the boundaries of the absolutely certain as that a church of Christian people can be inspired to determined, persistent and victorious effort to pay every dollar of just financial obligation resting upon it. It may be that a want of candor upon the part of the official members, or a failure to make thorough financial reports, may have produced an ill-defined impression upon the minds of the congregation that there has been carelessness, to say the least, in the administration of the financial interests of the Church; and the official body may find that, insensibly, from want of thorough, open-hearted dealing, they have lost the confidence of the people; but, when this impression is removed, if it can be, and when a "clean breast is made of it," the people will rally to the call of their chosen leader. How often upon the eve [illegible] effort to pay off a Church [illegible], some faint-hearted business [illegible] who never believes anything [illegible] what he can understand, [illegible] therefore, has a very small [illegible] will say to his pastor, "I [illegible] see where the money is to [illegible] from?"

[illegible] course not. Nor can we see [illegible] the next year's missionary [illegible] is to come from. It will [illegible], at the call of con- [illegible] of God. The banner [illegible] not be lowered at [illegible] Zion. It is this [illegible] Church that makes [illegible] and trustworthy [illegible]

[illegible] raised, [illegible]

[illegible] the full amount of the claim.

The Social Effects of Tobacco.

1st. Its uncleanliness. If any one can see the uncleanliness of this vile habit without considering it a vitiation of society, he must have the credit, if credit it be, of being blind to the rules of decency, and unconscious of the keen senses that inhabit other men. To go into a store or depot, a railroad car, or a church, and see the filth produced by this habit, is enough to make a well person sick. It is said there was a valley outside of Jerusalem into which dead animals and other filth of the city were carried. It was called Gehenna. Such is the supposed necessity of the railway train—the smoking car. It is the Gehenna of the railway train. Here, as in some other places, are puddles of Tobacco juice, in which the garments of inoffensive men and women may be draggled, or by which some unfortunate one may be thrown to the floor and injured; quids of Tobacco, nauseating and disgusting; or, it may be, the matron of a house defiling not only her own garments and brains, but the food of which others are to partake. Surely these are no slight evils to society.

2d. Its disagreeableness. This is also an injury to good society. The fumes of tobacco smoke, choking and strangling to some; the effluvia, nauseating to others; the poison taken up into the system of all, to a greater or less extent poisoning the very life-blood, are no benefit, but a great evil to society. Gov. Morris was asked by a smoking divine if gentlemen smoked in France. He replied, "Gentlemen, sir, gentlemen smoke nowhere." In a depot a young man, well dressed, smoking a cigar, thought the depot agent very ungentlemanly because the latter referred him to the sign on the wall, forbidding smoking. Which was the gentleman?

3d. Diminishing of Physical Power. The power in a community, judiciously used, the more productive is that community, and the richer it will be. The lazy, weakened Tobacco lounger is an unproductive incubus.

4th. Diminishing of Mental Force. The more thought the more vigor in society. "The time spent by a single individual in taking chews, and lighting and puffing pipes and cigars, would, if properly improved, in many instances be sufficient to acquire a thorough knowledge of several useful sciences. Multiply this by the whole number of Tobacco-users, and it will amount to centuries of precious time consumed not only in useless but degrading practices." The deranged tobacco mind can be of little use, but a burden to others.

5th. Financially. In this respect it is a great evil to the world. Whatever is spent in society for a useless, or a hurtful article, is so much loss. If a flour store of a million of barrels be consumed by fire, there is so much less in the country, and, consequently, if it be worth ten dollars a barrel, the country will be worth ten million dollars less. Flour is a useful article while Tobacco is worse than useless. If millions of dollars be consumed in this article, this value might be invested in something useful, and so much added to the productive interests of society. Some may say that the money paid for it is still in the country. So it might be in the case of the flour, yet no one will deny that the burning of the flour is a loss. Though the money remains, it must be paid for flour, because the price must be proportionally higher; but the money spent in this useless article might otherwise be spent for useful articles, so benefiting somebody; whereas, now it is a positive injury to society.

Look at some facts concerning the amounts expended on this noxious weed. For the single item of [illegible] there is more expended in [illegible] United States than for the [illegible] the children in all its [illegible] Would it not be [illegible]

[illegible] Tobacco and its appendages cost Great Britain [illegible] a year. This would pay quite a heavy tax. The total amount of tobacco produced in the world is estimated as follows: Asia, 300,000,000 pounds; Europe 281,844,500 pounds; America, 245,290,300 pounds; Africa, 24,300,000 pounds; and Australia, 714,000 pounds; making a total of nearly a billion pounds. The human family spend enough every year, for this useless article, to build two railroads around the earth, or sixteen railroads from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Such a drain upon the value of the products of the world cannot be otherwise than injurious in its social influence. With this value, how many poor might be fed and clothed, how many Bibles might be sent to the heathen; how many churches might be built; how many benevolent institutions sustained; how many schools supported?

"The labor of producing Tobacco and preparing it for use, is amazing. Five and a half millions of acres are cultivated in this soil-impoverishing crop throughout the world. In a great tobacco factory in Seville, Spain, five thousand young girls are employed in a single room. In the city of Hamburg, ten thousand persons are engaged in the manufacture of cigars."

The following facts are taken from official statistics, received from Washington, and embrace the year ending June 30th, 1875:

The whole amount of Revenue received on Tobacco was $37,303,461.88. This vast amount does not come out of the raiser, or the manufacturer, or the merchant, but ultimately out of the consumer. The estimated number of consumers in the country is 8,800,000. The estimated annual amount to each of these is 15 pounds of Tobacco and 246 cigars. The number of pounds of Tobacco on which revenue was paid, was 128,815,190, and the number of cigars 1,967,959,662. The average expense of these, as now sold in the market, is 80 cts. per pound for Tobacco, and 4 cts. each for cigars. This gives us, reckoning the imports and exports about equal, the vast sum of $102,892,152.00 consumed in the country for the use of this filthy weed. Besides this, there is a large quantity consumed not embraced in the revenue report, so that, probably the amount will reach $200,000,000.

Taking the average for each consumer, we find it to be about $23.00.

There are employed as manufacturers and salesmen over 450,000 men who might be engaged in a more profitable industry.

There is an increase in the revenue, but this does not positively indicate an increase in the consumption, though, doubtless, the latter increases every year.

"In New York city alone, there are 200,000 smokers, and nearly as many chewers of Tobacco, to say nothing of snuff-takers. It is estimated that its citizens spend daily $10,000 for cigars, and less than $9,000 for bread. Many fashionable ladies smoke cigarettes, and a cigar dealer in Boston makes the astonishing announcement that he sells an average of 300 cigars daily for the use of the fair ones in New England."

People complain of hard times. If this waste was stopped, the hard times would be greatly softened. The panic has not lessened the consumption of Tobacco. Some church members use seventy-five dollars worth a year. A young man confessed to smoking ninety-one dollars' worth of cigars in a year.

If these are facts, of which there is no doubt in the minds of those who have investigated the subject, there is no great sin to society by this foolish waste of land, time and money.

How are we to get rid of this evil? The following fable will illustrate: "The rats once assembled in a large cellar to devise some method of safely getting the bait from a steel trap which lay near, having seen numbers of their friends and relatives snatched from them by its merciless jaws. After many long speeches and the proposal of many elaborate but fruitless plans, [illegible] It is my opinion that, if with one paw we can keep down the spring, we can safely take the bait from the trap with the other. All the rats present loudly squeaked assent. When they were startled by a faint voice, and a gray rat with only three legs, limping into the ring, stood up to speak. 'My friends, I have tried the plan you propose, and you see the result. Now let me suggest a plan to escape the trap. Let it alone.'" That was a sensible rat. If you wish to escape the Tobacco trap, let it alone.

Another means of getting rid of the evil may be used by the ladies as suggested by the following stanzas:

"May never lady press his lips,
His proffered love returning,
Who makes a furnace of his mouth,
And keeps its chimney burning;
May each true woman shun his sight,
For fear his fumes might choke her:
Let none but those who smoke themselves,
Have kisses for a smoker."

Mother Comfort.

The Rev. Dr. Deems, in Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine, for February, says:

This beautiful expression occurs in Isaiah lxvi. 13: "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you."

It was Luther who spoke of God as being our father and mother.

Whatever there is in the universe has been first in the mind, in the heart, in the nature of God. Even sex seems to be there. He calls himself our Father, and now he speaks of himself as our mother.

All human relationships seem to be intended to show us God. We could never reach to the conception of the fatherhood of God if we did not have human fathers, and there are loves in the recesses of the nature of God which we can only reach through our knowledge of the heart that is in our mothers.

The study of mother-love gives us an idea of God's love for us. Nothing is so close to a man as his mother. His first life is a life hid in her. His first sustenance taken by his own action is drawn from her. And so it is of the soul and God. In him we live, and move, and have our being. We are his offspring. Each one of us is his offspring. It is important to recollect that.

Her many children never become confounded in a mother's heart. She not only knows all; she knows each; she knows his peculiarities of bodily constitution and of temperament, and his mental peculiarities. She knows how to reach him, and what to do for him. The wife may be as fond as wife can be, but she does not know what kind of babe or boy her husband was; but his mother knows it all. So the Lord "knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust."

In its little hurts, disappointments, and distresses, no one can comfort a child like its mother; for no one will allow for it and be tender to it, even when it is naughty and bad. So God comforts us with the comfort which each one needs.

He can comfort us all the more if we will recognize that he is verily our spiritual mother, if we can call him, as the Psalms do—"Our own God." Another man's mother may be best for him, but my own mother is my best comfort.

A mother's love never fails her child. Ordinarily, as long as he lives, though he himself should become an old man before his mother dies, she is tender toward him. In his infancy, in the night when others weary, she wakes and watches and yearns over him, and that yearning goes out to him through his career of life. She loves him with an everlasting love, and the Lord says to each one of his children, "I will love thee with an everlasting love."

A mother sacrifices ease, comfort, pleasure, for her child; devotes her days and nights to the wearied, the sick or disabled child. Just as she fondles, consoles, forgives and cheers her child, so the Lord does his child. You will readily recall a passage of Scripture to suit each word in the preceding sentence. But nothing can make you over think too tenderly of God, nor feel too fondly toward him who has said to you, "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you."

Congress and President Lincoln.

When the late civil war was beginning, Alexander H. Stephens, in a [illegible] speech, warned the people of Georgia of the [illegible] of the struggle. [illegible] A little later, as Vice President of the Confederacy, Mr. Stephens made another speech, declaring that [illegible] government was established on the corner-stone of slavery. A few days since, in the presence of both Houses, and as a Representative from Georgia, Mr. Stephens, on behalf of the House of Representatives, spoke at the reception by Congress of Carpenter's picture of the signing of the proclamation of emancipation. The picture contains portraits of President Lincoln and all his cabinet. All but one who appear in the picture are dead. The room, carefully studied from the fact, is remodelled. The Union is regenerated and renewed, and it is Mr. Stephens who says: "I can say for myself, and for those of my immediate circle of acquaintances, and for the whole Southern people, that there is not one who would now change the condition of things, re-subjugate the colored man, or put him in the condition he was in before." Mr Stephens did not assume to forecast the result of emancipation, nor even to say that the act was wise. But he declared it to be irreversible, and he begged that sectional strife might end. It is for him and his associates to preach this gospel constantly and zealously at home, and to take care that sectional hatred of the North is as vigorously reproved at the South by Southern men as a similar feeling at the North is reproved by Northern men.

Mr. Stephens spoke of Mr. Lincoln in the most cordial tone. He knew him well in Congress, and honored the simplicity and rectitude of his nature, and felt a pang at his unnatural taking off. His words are the most striking and touching tribute to Mr. Lincoln that we recall from any Southern man, and it is a singular vindication of the deep earnestness of Lincoln's solemn words in speaking of the Southerners that Mr. Stephens should say that he knew that in Mr. Lincoln's heart there was malice toward none, and charity for all. What he says brings out again and strongly the "providential" character of Abraham Lincoln. The country might well believe itself to be the peculiar object of Divine favor which in its hour of extremity found that it had chosen such a man to be its leader. The great act of emancipation, which, as General Garfield truly stated in his admirable speech, was passionately demanded by a powerful public opinion before it was approved by the President, seems to have proceeded from him more fitly than from any other man then living, or from any other President since Washington.

Whatever incident vividly recalls the truly great men in the nation's history is a public benefit, and this simple ceremony of receiving the memorial picture, by uniting the voices of a brave Union soldier and of the Vice-President of the Confederacy in affectionate reverence for Lincoln, reminds the country of his noble character and of his immeasurable services. As the orators and the occasion vividly renewed the recollection of the contest and its mighty result, did some musing listener, thinking of that sore extremity of the nation, of the great cost of the sacrifice for its life, and of its solemnly pledged faith to repay that cost, doubt for a moment what Abraham Lincoln would have said of a proposal to break that faith and dishonor the nation? Did he doubt that the war President would refuse to believe that in the very moment in which both friend and foe were proudly praising him, the honor of the nation for which he died lay trembling in the balance?—Harpers Weekly.

The Baldwin Locomotive Works, Philadelphia, completed on the 13th ult., the last of forty locomotives ordered by the Russian Government, which has two large steamships now on the way to receive them. A force of men to put them up will be sent along. The order was received Dec. 17th, and in eight weeks all were ready. The same firm has filled two orders for Australia and is expecting another shortly.

The First Successful Steamboat.

The experiment was sufficiently successful to induce Fulton and Livingston to order an engine of Messrs. Boulton and Watt, directing it to be sent to America, where Livingston soon returned. In 1806 Fulton followed, reaching New York in December, and at once going to work on the vessel for which the English firm sent the engine, without being informed of its intended use.

In the spring of 1807 the Clermont, as the new boat was christened, was launched from the ship yard of Charles Brown, on the East River, New York.

In August the machinery was on board and in successful operation. The hull of this boat was one hundred and thirty-three feet long, eighteen feet beam, and seven feet in depth.

The boat soon afterward made a trip to Albany, making the distance of one hundred and fifty miles in thirty-two hours running time, and returned in thirty hours. The sails were not used on either occasion.

This was the first voyage of considerable length ever made by a steam-vessel, and the Clermont was soon after regularly employed as a passenger boat between the two cities.

Fulton, though not to be classed with James Watt as an inventor, is entitled to the great honor of being the first to make steam-navigation an every day commercial success, and of having thus made the first application of the steam-engine to ship-propulsion which was not followed by the retirement of the experimentor from the field of his labors before success was permanently insured.

The engine of the Clermont was of rather peculiar form, the engine being coupled to the crank shaft by a bell crank, and the paddle wheel shaft being separated from the crank shaft, but connected with the latter by gearing. The cylinders were twenty-four inches in diameter and of four feet stroke. The paddle wheels had buckets four feet long, with a dip of two feet.

An old drawing made by Fulton's own hand, showing this engine as it was improved in 1808, is in the Stevens Institute of Technology.

The voyage of this steamer to Albany was attended with some ludicrous incidents, which found their counterparts wherever subsequently steamers were for the first time introduced.

Mr. Colden, the biographer of Fulton, says that she was described by persons who had seen her passing at night, "as a monster moving on the waters, defying wind and tide, and breathing flames and smoke."

This first steamboat used dry pine wood for fuel, and the flame rose to a considerable distance above the smoke pipe, and, when the fires were disturbed, mingled smoke and sparks rose high in the air.

"This uncommon light," says Colden, "first attracted the attention of the crews of other vessels. Notwithstanding the wind and tide were averse to its approach, they saw with astonishment that it was rapidly coming toward them, and, when it came so near that the noise of the machinery and paddles was heard, the crews (if what was said in the newspapers of the time be true), in some instances, shrunk beneath their decks from the terrific sight, and left their vessels to go on shore; while others prostrated themselves, and besought Providence to protect them from the approach of the horrible monster which was marching on the tides, and lighting its path by the fires which it vomited."—Popular Science Monthly.

The ratifications of the treaty between the United States and Samoa were exchanged by Secretary Evarts and the Samoan Ambassador on the 11th ult. A survey of the harbor of Pago Pago, voluntarily ceded to the United States for a coaling station, will soon be made. This harbor, according to Commodore Wilkes, is the best in the South Pacific. The Samoan Islands are in the direct line from San Francisco to Australia, and the Pacific mail steamers, which now pass in sight of them, will probably soon touch at them for delivery of mails. The United States and the Sandwich Islands are the only governments that have yet recognized Samoa as a nationality. Its annual revenue is $100,000.

They numbered six men and two women, and were traveling in a wagon, on their way to a border settlement. Seeing the approach of a band of hostile savages, they decided to select a favorable position in which to defend themselves, and soon found a spot that was bounded on two sides by a deep gorge. They hastily built a barricade of the wagon, stones and earth, working all of one night at it. In the morning the Indians made an attack, but the men in the fort, armed with breach-loading rifles, repulsed them. During two days fighting was kept up, and then a rescuing party of soldiers arrived. Eight Indians were killed, and one of the white men was injured.

A writer in Nature says that by combining the telephone with the kinesgraph he can produce a talking picture which will move and gesticulate as a man does when he is earnestly engaged in speaking. This he proposes to do by taking instantaneous photographs of the speaker at intervals of a quarter or half a second, and these, after fixing, are to be placed one below another on a strip of ribbon or paper wound from one cylinder to another. As each picture passes before the eye it is to be lighted up by an electric spark, and the man will thus be presented to us at successive moments, while the recording phonograph speaks the words which the man uttered. It may be years before producing the form, motion, and natural voice of the original. Who dare say now that the time will not come when whole dramas will be produced ad libitum from actual performances, with such fidelity that they cannot be distinguished from the original?

New Orleans has no reason to be ashamed of the business she did last year. In cotton receipts we are 180,023 bales ahead to date, although the total receipts at all the ports are still behind those of 1877. From Red River we have received 59,192 bales more than last year, from the Ouachita 52,417 more, from the Arkansas river 31,027 more, and from Mobile 33,927 more, while our cotton seed receipts are almost double those of 1877. Nearly 40 per cent. of the cotton receipts of Mobile had been shipped to New Orleans. It is not in cotton, however, but in grain that New Orleans makes the best showing. The increase of grain receipts is unprecedented. These have sprung from 327,950 bushels of corn last year to 2,830,644 bushels, wheat from 93,725 to 530,074 bushels, and oats, rye and other cereals in proportion. Even in sugar and molasses, although last year's crop was a failure, we are fairly ahead of the receipts last year at this time.—Democrat.

"Principles not Sections."

Some time since the Pacific Methodist, a Southern Methodist paper published in San Francisco, Cal., published an extended editorial on "The Two Methodisms; they are not and cannot be one body." The N. O. Christian Advocate of this city copied it in full and editorially commended it. The article gives various reasons why organic union between the Methodist Episcopal and the Methodist Episcopal Church South is impossible. The Pacific Methodist is right. Organic union between these churches, for the present at least, is neither desirable nor possible. They are rapidly coming to hold the proper relations to each other. Fraternity, as a fact, between these churches is growing slowly it is true, but thank God, it grows, and in a few years these two Methodisms will operate side by side, mutually recognizing and helping one another, wherever either in the providence of God may be called to plant itself.

The reasons assigned by the Pacific Methodist forbidding organic union are mostly of the type which Southern Methodist editors usually present, but which with thoughtful, disinterested parties can have but little weight. Their general animus consists in accusing the Methodist Episcopal Church of sectionalism, and yet their every word betrays an intense Southern sectionalism around which every argument centers. This style of argument is having less and less force as the liberal minded people, North and South, are coming to know each other better. To such arguments it is useless to reply. They are founded in prejudice, and if fully answered their authors will at once retort that they are misrepresented and, assuming the role of injured innocence, proceed at once to reiterate the same old statement.

But in the course of three columns the Pacific Methodist gets in a paragraph which does give good and valid reasons for the continued separate existence of the two Methodisms. Here it is;

"The words Northern and Southern, when applied to Methodism, mean not merely the regions in which each body is centered and domiciled. These geographical terms stand for principles, not sections. Here in California, we are geographically neither North nor South, and yet the principles represented by Northern Methodism suit some, and the principles represented by Southern Methodism suit others. The differences are real, not imaginary."

Principles, not geographical lines, separate "Northern" and "Southern" Methodism. On this ground we shake hands with every Southern Methodist whether he be in Oregon, New York or Louisiana.

It was a matter of principle which separated the Church in 1844. The Methodists of the North said slavery was wrong; the Methodists of the South said slavery was right. The annual conferences of the respective sections had administered the discipline in the light of these different beliefs, and the General Conference of 1844 brought the two great sections face to face on opposite sides of this great question. The result was division. The Methodist Episcopal Church forbade slaveholding, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, while slavery lasted, had slave holding bishops, [illegible] and laity, and incorporated with its accepted book on Moral Philosophy a chapter in which slavery was held to be an institution of God himself. The division of [illegible] then was upon principle. But a Southern Methodist brother will say, slavery was the occasion not the cause of the division. The [illegible] this brother says, was the [illegible]tional way in which [illegible] Andrews, in 1844, was proc- [illegible] deposed without a trial. [illegible] Bishop had slaves and the General Conference asked him to [illegible] from his episcopal functions until that disability was removed. The Southern delegates protested [illegible] the General Conference had no [illegible] to do this, claiming that the [illegible] is a co-ordinate branch [illegible] and not subject to the authority of the General Conference [illegible] when constitutionally deposed [illegible]. The principle involved is [illegible] important one in church [illegible]. It bears directly upon the [illegible] as "high" or "low" [illegible] in Episcopal Church [illegible] Church, Bishops are [illegible] General Conference [illegible] general sense [illegible] E. Church [illegible] tendency [illegible] church [illegible] their stead. Not so in the M. E. Church South: the tendency is to "high churchism" in the sense of establishing an exclusive co-ordinate order in her Bishops as in the Episcopal and Catholic Churches: she ordains her Bishops, and they are subject to the General Conference only in matters of morals and administration. To the casual observer this difference of principle in Church polity is slight, but to the student of Church history it is of vast importance and marks the point of departure of the ancient church from her purity of doctrine and church polity. We make no such charge on the Southern Methodist Church, but make the point that, if for argument sake, we admit that the deposition of Bishop Andrews in 1844 was the cause of separation, there is in this cause a principle of no small importance.

In the late war these churches were on opposite sides. The war involved principles respecting slavery and the purity of the Republic. The South claimed to fight for what it termed its "constitutional right" to secede and establish its own government: and this meant the perpetuity of slavery. The North said the Republic should live, and to this the M. E. Church said, Amen. The South said, "The privilege of maintaining and extending our 'peculiar institution' is more to us than the Republic, and rather than have slavery interfered with, we will destroy the Republic;" and to this the M. E. Church South said, Amen. In saving the Republic slavery was destroyed, and then our Church said it was the providential way of wiping out the "sum of all villainies" from American soil, and the other Church said, as stated by one of its chief ministers, "It was the culmination of mad fanaticism enforced by the bayonets of an organized mob."

We shall return to this subject again.

How shall we Govern the Family.

As we look at this question in an impartial light there are, we think, two general methods in vogue, first that which is unduly strict—severe—unyielding, and that which is characterized by criminal leniency. Extremes are always dangerous in everything. The medium is generally the best and safest, and no where more so than in the government of the family.

It must not be forgotten that the tendency of human nature is to swing to extremes. Too severe a family discipline may banish the child from home, and make it dislike everything good. We once heard a Catholic priest say, in answer to the question; "Why are there so many Irish Catholics in our jails?" that it was due to the bad government of Ireland by the English; that hatred of the law was an Irish inheritance, and hence so many of them come to the jail. We can see how a home may be so destitute of the softer and better side as to make the child grow up with a disrelish of home and parental government, and come to have a dislike to all restraint and government. The family must have law, that law must be enforced, there must be rule, there must be government, but it must be tempered with mercy; the nature of the child must not be lost sight of. We should not want our child to recollect us, in all its after life, simply as a stern, inflexible governor; such a memory cannot be a pleasing one.

Then, on the other hand, there is often so great an absence of law and government that the child grows up without ever learning what law is, and actually disrespects the parent through a want of the right kind of training. To find out just what is right, and then to be able to do the right, will require careful study and constant watchfulness and prayer.

We are not going to try to lay down rules for mankind in general, but to consider the attitude of christian parents in respect to certain duties toward their children.

We conceive it to be the very first duty of every parent to bring up the child in the paths of Godliness. We cannot specify every act which shall be performed or every deed left undone, but we must instill into their minds such moral principles as shall ever enable them to determine the true course of life. They must be so taught as to be self regulative. So teach the child that its conscience shall not be lost. If you are anxious that your daughter shall know grammar and philosophy and bear away the diploma of the high school, be equally anxious that she should know the difference between right and wrong. There are two points which we wish especially to note. The first is this; you must not attempt to force religion upon the child. As a parent, you have authority which, within the limits of right, is absolute, and so long as your child is under legal age you have a right to prohibit any course which you deem wrong, and you are [illegible] true to yourself nor the child if you do not enforce your authority; but religion is something which cannot be legislated into any body. You can compel the children to attend church and sabbath-school and you should do so, but then if you wish them to be religious lead them, lure them to it by a becoming life of your own.

Secondly; Do not be discouraged if you do not see immediate results. A sermon preached to-day may bear fruit ten years hence. A child taught in the Sunday-school of to-day may from that teaching ripen into a beautiful christian a score of years hence. God says, "My word shall not return unto me void." So the prayers, the pious example, the kindly admonitions of parents may long years hence, become the means in the hands of God of saving your children from all the sad consequences of sin.

Go, then, to your task with a firm reliance upon God, and with a watchful eye and tender heart. Seek, as your very first and highest duty, to lead those whom God has committed to your trust to him. And he will smile on you and your labors and you shall have great satisfaction and a glorious reward in the end.

Guard well the little sins of life for their numbers swell into mountains of guilt which lie heavy on the soul.

"Little by little," the tempter said
As a dark and cunning snare he spread
For the young unwary feet,
"Little by little and day by day"
I will tempt the careless soul away
Until the ruin is complete.

"Little by little, sure and slow
We fashion our future of bliss or woe
As the present passes away.
Our feet are climbing the stair-way bright
Up to the regions of endless light
Or gliding downward into the night
Little by little, day by day."

Philip Phillips.

This celebrated author and singer of sacred song gave three evenings of his unique entertainment in this city last week. He was here several years ago and sang to a large audience in Ames M. E. Church, and his coming again was looked forward to with great pleasure.

The first of the three services of song was in Ames Church on Monday evening. The large auditorium was filled with people. The second was in Carondelet Street Church, on Tuesday evening, where a very large audience again greeted the singer. On Wednesday evening Mr. Phillips sang in Union Chapel, on Bienville Street, which is one of our largest colored churches. There was a large audience, which gave every indication of high appreciation.

The success of Mr. Phillips has been truly wonderful. During the past ten years he has traveled over 220,000 miles, passing entirely around our globe. His evenings of sacred song have been given in all parts of this country and Great Britain, also on the Continent, in Australia, India, Ceylon, Palestine, Egypt, and the Islands of the Sea. Everywhere he has gone christian hearts have yielded the same ready response to the sacred song of the sweet singer, and he has been accorded a hearty welcome. We say that this success is wonderful, but it is not so more than the triumph of the Gospel by any other means. For the song of this singing evangelist is but that "Old, old story" of salvation that will never die, but be changed at last into the "New song" of the redeemed in Heaven.

Are Popular Amusements Sinful?

We answer, amusements are right and amusements are wrong. There is a time when they are right and a time when they are wrong. The wrong and the right in every thing are to be determined by the spirit and by the circumstances of the case.

Dancing, in itself, is a perfectly harmless act. Keeping time with the feet to music is natural—that is dancing, and we sometimes have it in our prayer meetings. We often hear the measured tramp of the feet of good Christians on the floor while they are singing a lively hymn. That is a species of dancing, though we question if the persons in the habit of it ever thought of it in that light. We say then, that in the sense of simply keeping time to music, there is no more harm in doing it with the feet than with the hands or head. So we say of theatre going; in itself there is no harm in it, for there have been religious theatres, where Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress has been played. There is no harm in drinking whisky, in itself, for the physicians often prescribe it, and it may be used as a medicine with propriety. So a man may work on the Sabbath day in the face of an absolute command not to work, and yet be guiltless, when he is doing a work of necessity, or of mercy. Thus we see the spirit and the circumstances must enter into the discussion. Here is the province of the conscience to determine where the right ends and where the wrong begins. Now we say no man can work on the Sabbath day without doing violence to the law of God as well as to the law of human nature. No man can drink strong drink without inflicting an injury upon himself and others. No man can attend the theater as a practice and be true to christianity as the theater is. So no man or woman can dance and yet preserve in his or her heart the true spirit of christianity. Thus we may see that while certain things in themselves are not wrong, in their spirit, in their associations and in all their tendencies they are wholly wrong and inconsistent with the life of the true child of God.

Whenever Satan tempts us to go where we ought not to go, let us say "get thee behind me, Satan," and let us pray "lead me not into temptation." We must abstain from even the "appearance of evil."

Meharry Medical School---Central Tennessee College.

The second commencement of the Meharry Medical Department of the Central Tennessee College took place on Friday evening, Feb. 22, 1878. The graduates were three in number L. D. Key, of Mason, Tenn., delivered an address on Malaria, in which he treated the entire subject in a manner which showed a very thorough acquaintance with what had been written on that subject. John C. Hullaere delivered an address on the "Duties and Responsibilities of Physicians." If he succeeds in reaching the standard he exhibited for doctors to attain, he will be very successful. John S. Bass spoke on "Our Aim as Physicians." He said that all who had enjoyed such privileges as the members of the class, should impart their knowledge to those who were still in ignorance. The colored people are dying for lack of knowledge of the laws of health, and for the want of proper medical attention when sick. Colored physicians who are thoroughly educated would soon correct this evil, and prove a blessing to the people. These three graduates have been educated in this college, and have been in attendance from seven to nine years. Their examination, which was entirely written, showed that they had not been idle. After these addresses Dr. G. W. Hubbard, who is in charge of this department, delivered a very interesting address on Practical Hygiene. He was followed by Bishop Haven, the President of the Board of Trustees, who alluded to his own sickness, as a result of his visit to Africa, and his experience with the physicians; every one consulted approved the prescription that had been given by the previous physician, yet was almost certain to recommend a change in the remedy he was then taking, which would improve its curative properties. The changed prescription, however, "seemed much like the same old pill." He urged the graduates to continue to study, and deserve success by working for it. They were entering a profession where knowledge and skill gave character to its members, and where color would avail nothing in setting limbs or saving life. On behalf of the Board of Trustees he bade them go forth and labor, and by their fidelity to their studies and their interest in the people among whom they labored prove a lasting good.

The President of the College then addressed the graduates, and conferred upon them the degree of Doctor of Medicine. These are the first graduates who have completed the full course of study in this school. This Department has been aided by the two brothers, Samuel and Hugh Meharry, of Indiana, who came to the help of the Trustees in a time of need, and have, by their generous aid, conferred a lasting benefit upon the colored people of the South. The College has had a year of unusual prosperity, in which all departments have shared. Over two hundred and eighty students have been enrolled during the present year. The present session closes on the 16th of May. The next year begins Sept. 2d, and the Medical Department Oct. 1st, 1878. The different departments of Theology, Medicine and Law are fully organized, as well as the regular College classes, Academic and Normal courses.

New Orleans University -Medical Department.

The Medical Department of New Orleans University was organized under management of the Board of Trustees, at University Chapel on February 26, with J. T. Newman, M. D., as Dean of the Faculty, and a medical class was formed.

The inaugural address of the Dean was a scholarly production in which he contrasted the progress of medicine with other scientific developments of the age, and depicted in glowing language the various stages of its career. The address was a good production and deserves more extended comment than we can give in this communication.

Dr. G. Kietz, Prof. of Chemistry, delivered a brief but spirited address in the chaisest of English language.

Hon. E. Heath, member of the Board of Trustees, made congratulatory remarks and spoke with great hopefulness of the future prosperity of the Department.

President Bean reminded the class that while the expenses of the student were less, no lower grade of scholarship or medical attainments would be demanded of him who should seek a Diploma, than was required in other and similar institutions. Here colored men would be treated as white men, and their success depended entirely upon their application. C.

Florida Letter.

Cookman Institute has more pupils than at any time in its history. The classes are in a decidedly better trim for their work. Another teacher has been added for persons wishing to devote themselves to the ministry, besides taking the former biblical studies.

Our young men of the Conference, and others who intend joining after their studies are complete, are showing signs of improvement very gratifying to those who witness the recitations.

Rev. C. R. Hartranft of the New Jersey Conference, has been South for his health, and with the sprit of his Master striving to sow beside all waters, he has been lecturing to our pupils three times a week on the subject of Physiology and Anatomy. They have been of great service—so full of entertainment, instruction and suggestions to the inquiring mind. He has a rare faculty of making occult things shine as the day, using technical names and terms so that they will never be forgotten.

It would be a great blessing if all our Institutions in the South had such a course from such a master in these things.

Our Church ought to take advanced steps for the benefit of the fourteen beacon lights in this Southern country. May God multiply their efficiency and convert all the pupils in their halls. S. B. D.

Missionary Board Meeting.

Bishop Harris presided at the regular meeting of the Missionary Board, Feb. 19. Dr. Reid announced that his colleague and Bishop Merrill had completed their tour of inspection of the mission stations, and were, at the time of writing, about addressing themselves to other important business matters, and that they hoped to be at home about the 10th of March. The Treasurer made his usual monthly statement, which will be found elsewhere. Authority was given to the Secretary to draw on the African appropriation for $200 for school requisites for Monrovia Seminary, and $100 for like purposes for the Bopora mission. Appropriate action was had on the announcement of the death of Rev. J. D. Brown, for fifteen years a missionary of the society, and Henry J. Baker, Esq., for more than twenty years a member of this Board, and also in the case of Rev. Dr. Duff. Action was had looking to the support of Mrs J. D. Brown and covering the cases of supernumerary missionaries transferred to home conferences and continuing disabled from work; and of the families of those who should die while the missionary sustained such relation.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. L. Colloway, Lovelady, Texas, reports the building of a new church on his work, and that prospects are encouraging.

Rev. James Hayward, Franklin, La., sends subscribers and adds: "I was kindly received on my new work and find prospects very encouraging. Some needed repairs have been made on our church building to make it comfortable as a place of worship. Pray for us that the blessings of the Lord may attend us."

Rev. J. M. Shumpert, Holly Springs, Miss., reports the church in that city as prosperous, that the Sunday School, under Superintendency of President W. W. Hooper, is doing well, and that the membership of Asbury Chapel are to contribute one dollar each for the new University building.

Rev. J. W. Robinson, Waxahachie, Texas: "This is the county site of Ellis county, and is quite a flourishing town. It is near the D. H. T. & C. Railroad, and 175 miles north east of the State capital. There are a great many colored people in the county, and they are generally favorable to Methodism. We have a great mission field before us here. We have commenced the work of building a church and will push it forward to completion as rapidly as possible. The great need of this country is a more efficient ministry."

Rev. A. R. Norris, Calvert, Texas, says: "Our first quarterly meeting has just been held by our Presiding Elder, Rev. D. Gregory. The services were well attended, and a deep interest was manifested. At the lovefeast particularly our members were greatly blessed, and several penitents were at the altar for prayers. One of our members, Bro. Lake Ross, has recently died in full triumph of faith. Our Sunday-school is rapidly increasing in numbers and usefulness. We are making preparations to commence the building of a new church—will expect to get it completed by the next annual Conference."

March 17, 1878.—HEZEKIAH AND THE ASSYRIANS.

Scripture—2 Chron., 32: 9-21.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"With him is an arm of flesh, but with us is the Lord our God to help us, and to fight our battles."

TOPIC.—"Whereon do ye Trust."

(Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.)

Speaking Against God (9-16.) There are three accounts of the facts of Sennacherib's attempt to reduce Judah to subjection. The first is given in Kings, the next in Chronicles, and the third in Isaiah. The first and the last are full in detail, and so nearly alike that one must have been written from the other. The one in Chronicles is a condensation of the other two, and is written more with regard to rhetorical effect than chronological sequence. We study the account in Chronicles the best when we study the narrative as it is given in Kings or Isaiah. With the exception of the facts afforded us in the first part of the chapter in which our lesson occurs, we must glean entirely in the other books.

After the departure of Sennacherib on his campaign against Egypt, Hezekiah must have been rebuked by Isaiah for his lack of faith. Perhaps he upbraided him with the folly of expecting any aid from Egypt. "For the Egyptians shall help in vain, and to no purpose; therefore have I cried concerning this, Their strength is to sit still." Is. 30: 7. Promising help to Palestine, they used it as a barrier to their foes, but really gave it no aid. Their strength was "to sit still," and see it sacrifice itself for their benefit. It is quite likely that one of the reasons for the compromise made by Hezekiah was that there was no indication that the king of Egypt was coming to her rescue. Whether his faith was once more reinforced by the confident prophecies of Isaiah, or whether the weight being removed, it, of itself, again rose to its feet, or whether he received assurances that at least Tirhakah was really on his way,—whether from one or all of these sources, certain it is that, even in the crippled condition in which he was left, Hezekiah again declared his intention to shake off the yoke of his Assyrian oppressor. And this time he went to work in a way that showed that he was thoroughly in earnest: He stopped, or, rather, covered the fountains and the brook, built up the wall that was broken, repaired the castle Millo, made weapons and shields in abundance, organized all the people into a garrison of defense, and made them an address whose sublime faith has rung through the ages. "There be more with us than with him. With him is an arm of flesh; but with us is the Lord our God, to help fight our battles." If the child of God could only always feel that, it would nerve his arm to fight and win many a desperate battle, which now, alas, he either loses or tamely surrenders. "And the people rested themselves upon the words of Hezekiah, king of Judah." They were grand words to rest upon. Many many a harassed, discouraged soul rest itself upon them also!

It is one thing to keep a bold front before the enemy and quite another to have no inward trepidation. The commissioners of Hezekiah came before him with their clothes rent, and, when he heard what Rabshakeh had said, he rent his clothes also, covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the Lord, and sent word to Isaiah beseeching him to pray for the deliverance of the remnant that was left. The ground of his hope that God would interpose was that the king of Assyria had reproached the living God. Back came an answer from the undismayed prophet, bidding him not to fear, and answering as in the words of God himself: "Behold I will send a blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumor, and shall return to his own land; and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land." Hezekiah had asked for assurances only in regard to the present, but, lo, he is guaranteed as against the future also!

Railing Against God (17 19.)—Rabshakeh returned from his unsuccessful mission to his master. He found him besieging Libnah having either taken or retired from Lachish. Soon Sennacherib "heard say" that the Egyptian king was indeed on his way to attack him. This was the "rumor" that had been predicted by Isaiah. It was dangerous to fight this foe in front with a foe in his rear, and hence, again, he sought to reduce Hezekiah to submission by another threatening message. This time it was committed to writing, and sealed with the imposing seal of Assyria. The message differs not materially from the other except in one important point: "Let not thy God in whom thou trustest deceive thee." He had given up the fiction that God had laid upon him the duty of destroying Judah! It was, more than the other, a disparagement of the God of Israel. He was characterized as inferior to the gods of wood and stone whose worshippers he had easily subdued. Sennacherib by this message made the conflict a war between himself and Jehovah!

Praying to God (20).—Hezekiah took the letter, and "spread it before the Lord." He had not heard of the rumor which was the cause of its being written. He was not aware that there was any aid approaching from Egypt. He was shut up to his God for help. All the better for him that he was. God helped more in a single night than the king of Egypt could have done in a lifetime. The prayer is the utterance of direct and simple faith. The act of spreading it out before the Lord shows his child-like confidence in God. The prayer is a petition to God to accept the challenge that Sennacherib has thrown down. He prays that God would save, not because of any glory that would accrue to the king, but, all the other Gods having been proved impotent, "that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou art the Lord God, and thou only." He pleads the most strongly with God who pleads for God's honor.

Smitten by God (21).—The prayer was heard. Hardly was it uttered before Isaiah dispatched a messenger with the reply. 2 K. 19: 20-34. God accepts the challenge. He will teach the braggart a lesson. The axe was boasting against him that he was hewing with it, and the saw against him that he was shaking it. Is. 10: 12-15. "Because thy rage against me and thy tumult is come up into mine ears, therefore I will put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way thou camest." That was only a general sort of encouragement but there was nothing left to be desired when he said: "He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shield, or cast a bank against it." That very night the prophecy was fulfilled in such a way as to make it one of the most impressive events of all history. The fact has never been disputed. The Assyrian army was so decimated that the boasting king had to return home with shame of face. An unseen arm, whether it was a pestilence, a simoon, or other natural cause, still, all the same, an unseen arm laid low the best and the bravest of his men. His host had disappeared from before the face of God as dew disappears from before the sun.

The Assyrian came down like the wolf on the fold,
And his cohorts were gleaming with purple and gold;
Like the leaves of the forest when summer is green,
That host with its banners at sunset was seen.
Like the leaves of the forest when autumn hath blown,
That host on the morrow lay withered and strown:
For the angel of death spread his wings on the blast,
And breathed in the face of the foe as he passed.
And the eyes of the sleepers waxed deadly and chill,
And their hearts but once heaved, and forever grew still.
And there lay the steed with his nostril all wide,
Though through it there rolled not the breath of his pride.
And the tents were all silent, the banners alone.
The lances unlifted, the trumpet unblown.
And the might of the Gentile, unsmote by the sword,
Hath melted like snow in the glance of the Lord.

With this compare Psalm 76. The remainder of the prophecy was fulfilled years afterwards, when Sennacherib was worshiping in the temple of his god Nisroch. He was slain by Adrammelech and Sharezer, his sons, who desired to reign in his stead. The result of this signal interference of God for Judah was that Hezekiah was "magnified in the sight of all nations thenceforth." Thus was the city saved, "for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake."

Thirty-seven years ago there were three Protestant Christians in the vast empire of China. Now there are about 13,000. At the present rate of progress the number doubles itself every six years. According to a statement in an English paper, the missionary force now consists of 457 clerical and medical missionaries, of whom 220 are from America.

Prince Leopold, the youngest son of Queen Victoria, will enter the ministry if his health permits. The Queen consents to his studying for the pulpit on this condition.

Getting on in the World.

A SUNDAY SCHOOL ADDRESS.

I want to talk to you about getting on in the world. To "get on" there are four essential things, and all four begin with the same letter.

1. I will tell you a story that will illustrate the first; then, if you are good guessers, you can tell it to me. One day a man said to me, "That coat of yours is well worn; you had better get a new one." Well, I looked at my coat, and concluded that I would buy a new one. Said my friend, "There is a tailor around the corner. He used to do a great business, but some how he has been running down, until now he is very poor. I don't know what is the matter with him. He seems a fine fellow, but he can't get along. Now, let him make the coat." I called on the tailor, and he took my measure and promised to have the coat ready by Saturday. Saturday I called. "Oh, that coat," said the man, "yes, it ought to have been done to-day, but I have been so busy [illegible] things I had to neglect it, but I will have it for sure on Tuesday." I didn't call until Wednesday. The coat wasn't yet done, [illegible] was promised for Thursday. On the Saturday following I went after the coat, and found that the tailor had moved. I hunted him up. Said he, "I have been moving, and have been thrown in such confusion that I could not finish the coat as yet." Well, by that time I began to see why the man did not get on in the world. What was the matter with him, children? What did he lack? "Punctuality." "Promptness." Yes, both are right. He was not prompt. Napoleon was asked why he always beat his enemy. "Because," said he, "I am always on the field of battle five [illegible]

New Publications.

THE WINES OF THE BIBLE.

This is the title of a new pamphlet of thirty-six pages just issued by the National Temperance Society, containing the able and exhaustive address by Rev. C. H. Fowler, D.D., editor of the Methodist Christian Advocate, reviewing the entire question of Bible wines and showing that the Bible gives no sanction to the use of intoxicating wines as a beverage. He proved from able and undoubted authorities that the Bible speaks of two kinds of wines, the fermented and the unfermented. He also furnishes evidence that the drinking of intoxicating wines is the curse of the nations of the earth. The argument is unanswerable and the pamphlet should have a wide circulation. Price ten cents. Address J. N. Stearns, Publishing Agent, 58 Reade street, New York.

TOBACCO; ITS PHYSICAL, MENTAL, MORAL AND SOCIAL EFFECTS.

This book is published by W. B. Mocklow, [illegible] Street and Madison Avenue, New York, and is written by Rev. B. W. Chase, A. M. Cloth, 18 mo., 80 pages, 50 cents. It treats upon one of the greatest evils of the day. As a stepping stone to intemperance its evil is apparent. Those interested to rid the country of intemperance should circulate this book by the thousand. Sunday School Library Committees will find it interesting and useful. Every family should have it lying on the book-shelf or table. It would make a valuable gift book to friends.

The subjects is treated in a calm and dispassionate manner, and the sensationalism [illegible] found in such works is avoided by the author.

WEIGHTS AND WINGS.

Weights and Wengs; by Charles T. [illegible], D.D., LL. D. Published by Wm. B. Mucklow, New York. Rich cloth, 16mo., [illegible] $1.50.

This is a thoroughly practical and religious book. The topics discussed are of every day interest. The chapters are short and each one complete in itself, so that if the reader has but ten minutes he can gather [illegible] and instructive thoughts. The [illegible] writes with clearness and force and [illegible] indicates a desire to do good. In [illegible] preface the author says: "If what is [illegible] recommended should be wrought into the life of all who call and profess themselves Christians," and what is condemned should be avoided, the author believes that [illegible] who are now 'weights' to their pas[illegible] become 'wings.'"

This is a very choice book and none who buy it will be disappointed. Dr. Deems is the pastor of a large church in New York City, and he writes to aid church members to better and holier things."

FACES AND MASKS.

This is a plea for Fidelity in Friendship, [illegible] H. Tyng, Jr., D. D., and published by Wm. B. Mucklow, New York. Dr. [illegible] "What is a friend but one [illegible] sorrow's [illegible] mine; one [illegible] when my [illegible] Dr. Tyng in this li[illegible] the sentiment [illegible] friendships are [illegible] Jesus is all in[illegible] joy and [illegible]

Among the Dead Failures

Of the past, how many bogus nostrums may be numbered! Beginning their careers with a tremendous flourish of trumpets, blazoned for a time in the public prints and on flaming posters, soon, but not too soon, were they relegated to the limbo of things lost on earth. But Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a living and thriving remedy. It goes on, curing and to cure. Neither underhand nor open competition affect it. On the contrary, contrast with inferior rival preparations only increases its popularity. It has been repeatedly imitated, but without success. Counterfeits of it have been surreptitiously introduced, but have fallen flat. Everywhere it entrenches itself in the confidence of the people; and well it may, for it is a thoroughly reliable invigorant of the feeble, banishes dyspepsia and constipation, braces the nerves, cures rheumatic ailments and kidney complaints, and eradicates and prevents intermittent and remittent fevers. mar7-4t.

Storrs Harrison & Co., Painesville, Ohio, offer in another column a very attractive list of plants at surprisingly low prices. The firm have always been found attentive to business, and their plants are first class and just as represented. They are worthy of patronage.

The Class-Leader.

His Work, and How to Do It.

With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.

BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,

Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo.......................... $1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

STATE

Regulation of Vice.

Aaron M. Powell, of New York.

CONTAINS

1. State Regulation of Vice.

A paper read before the New York Committee for the Prevention of Licensed Prostitution.

2. Regulation Efforts in America.

A paper prepared for the International Congress at Geneva, Switzerland, 1877,

3. The Geneva Congress,

embracing a sketch of the proceedings, and in full, the conclusions of the several sections of the Congress: 1. Hygiene; 2. Morals; 3. Social Economy; 4. Rescue Work; 5. Legislation.

5. New York Committee's Address to the Geneva Congress.

The author, Mr. Powell, (formerly editor of the National Anti-Slavery Standard), represented the New York Committee as a delegate in the International Congress, at Geneva, to promote the abolition of Government Regulation of Prostitution.

This is a book of great interest and importance to all students of social science; especially to all physicians, ministers, journalists and legislators, and to the intelligent and philanthropic everywhere.

Under the guise of hygiene, and of the public welfare, already several States have broached the question of regulating prostitution by law, and unless the opponents of these movements are wary we shall have in this country laws which will be disgraceful to humanity and oppressive to virtuous women, before we are aware of it. Let every one who favors justice to woman, morality in man, and purity everywhere, buy and help to spread the sale of this book where it will do the most good. Price $1.00

National Repository,

A CHRISTIAN MAGAZINE,

Rev. D. CURRY, D.D., Editor.

Begins Jan'y, 1878. Try it one Year.

ONLY $3 A YEAR.

"The scope and character of the magazine shall be that of a first-class religious and literary monthly, of the brightest character attainable, and pervaded, whether in its general or religious articles, by a thoroughly Christian spirit."—Order of the Committee.

Under these directions, it will be devoted to General and Religious Literature, Biographies and Travels, Criticisms and Art.

A sufficient number of the best writers for the press are employed to furnish all the variety in the several departments which their scope and importance require to make them rich and instructive.

The editorial department will be a feature of the magazine. Rev. Dr. Curry, both experienced and successful as an editor, brings to his duties the purpose of giving his whole strength to the work before him.

Each number will contain one or more articles illustrated with Wood Engravings, in the best style of this art, adding beauty and value to the pages.

The twelve numbers for the year will contain 1,152 pages of reading-matter, which, published in book form, would make not less than fifteen volumes, worth $1.50 each, and will comprise a variety that will be more interesting and valuable to the general reader than can be procured in books for many times the yearly price of the magazine.

We earnestly request you to take the National Repository for 1878—to give it one year's trial, and thereby determine for yourselves whether it is worthy of a place in the Christian home.

THE SHADOW ON THE WALL.

My [illegible] a stately dwelling is,
With lofty arching doors;
There is carving on the ceilings high,
And velvet on the floors;
A rich and costly building,
Where noiseless servants wait,
And [illegible] the escutcheon's gilding
[illegible] enter but the great.
But a happier home is near it, an humble cottage small,
And I envy its sweet mistress the shadows on her wall.

My pictures are the pride of Art,
And drawn by cunning hands:
But the painted figures never move,
Nor change the painted lands;
Before the poorest window
More gorgeous pageants glide,
Within the lowliest household
More lifelike groups abide;
And I turn from soulless symbols, that crowd my gloomy hall,
To [illegible] the shifting shadows upon the cottage wall.

My stately husband never bends
To kiss me on the lips:
His heart, is in his iron safe,
His thoughts are with his ships;
[illegible] twilight gathers
Adown the dusky street,
The little housewife listens
For sounds of coming feet;
And by the gleaming firelight I see a figure tall
Bend down to kiss a shadow, a shadow on the wall.

My garden paling, broad and high,
[illegible] its costly spoils,
And through the ordered paths all day
The silent gardner toils;
[illegible] neighbor's is a grass plat,
[illegible] buttercup,
[illegible] 's dimpled fingers
[illegible] dandelions up:
[illegible] head all day the sunflower tall,

And watching can but ween,
To see her rock her darlings
Upon her breast asleep,

[illegible] no childish shadow upon my wall.

[illegible] is the talk of fools,
And by the gaslight's glare, ticular persons, there is no motive to worship a Diety, to fear its displeasure or to pray for its protection. I will not enter into any discussion of your principles, though you seem to desire it. At present I shall only give you my opinion, that though your reasonings are subtile, and may prevail with some readers, you will not succeed so as to change the general sentiment of mankind on that subject; and the consequence of printing this piece will be a great odium upon yourself, mischief to you and no good to others. He that spits against the wind, spits in his own face. * * *

"Among us it is not necessary as among the Hottentots, that a youth, to be raised in the company of men, should prove his manhood by beating his mother. I would advise you, therefore, not to attempt unchaining the tiger, but to burn this piece before it is seen by any other person, whereby you will save yourself a great deal of mortification, and perhaps a great deal of regret and repentance. If men are so wicked with religion, what would they be without it? I intend this letter as a proof of my friendship."

The Man Who Thought He Never Prayed.

The Rev. Mr. Kilpin passed a very profans man, and having omitted to rebuke him, he awaited him in the morning at the same place. When he approached, Mr. Kilpin said.

"Good morning, my friend; you are the person I have been waiting for."

"O sir," said the man, "you are mistaken, I think."

"I do not know you; but I saw you last night when you were going home from work and I have been waiting some time to see you."

"Sir, you are mistaken; it could not have been me; I never saw you in my life before, that I know of."

"Well, my friend," said Mr. Kilpin, "I heard you pray last night."

"Now, I assure you that you are mistaken; I never prayed in all my life."

"O!" said Mr. Kilpin, "if God had answered your prayer last night, you had not been seen here this morning. I heard you pray that God would destroy your eyes, and ruin your soul."

The man turned pale, and trembling said: "Do you call that prayer?—I did, I did."

"Well, then, my errand this morning is to request you from this day to pray as fervently for your salvation as you have done for damnation, and may God in mercy hear your prayer."

Why did he not Take his Wife Along?

Take the excuses. There wasn't one that wasn't a lie. The devil made them all; and if the sinner hadn't one all ready the devil was there at his elbow to suggest one, about the truth of the Bible, or [illegible]ng of that sort. One of the excuses mentioned was that the man invited had bought a piece of ground, and had to look at it. Real estate and corner lots are keeping a good many men out of God's kingdom. It was a lie to say that he had to [illegible] see it then, for he ought to have looked at it before he bought it. Then the next man said he'd bought some oxen, and must prove them. That was another lie; for if he hadn't proved them before he bought them he ought to have done so, and could have done it after supper just as well as before it. But the third man's excuse was the [illegible] of them all. "I have married a wife and therefore cannot come." Why did he not take his wife along with him? Who [illegible] to go to a feast better than a [illegible] bride? He might have asked her to go, too, and if she were not [illegible] then let her stay at home. TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth st., Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease itching piles, had consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the Ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. I deem it my duty to give you this well merited testimonial of so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit. Very respectfully,

Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry

Seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered, with night sweats, burning fever pains and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.

Dr. Swayne—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the sids and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood, I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs; in short it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me at the factory. EDWARD H. HANSON.
Engineer at Geo. Sweeney's Pottory, Ridge road below Wallace, Phila.

PHYSICIANS RECOMMEND IT.

Dr. Thos. J. B. Rhoads, Boyertown, Berks co., Pa., writes, "Your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry I esteem very highly; have been selling and recommending it to my patients for many years, and it always proves efficacious. It has made some remarkable cures in this section, and I consider it the best remedy with which I am acquainted.

Price, $1. Six bottles for $5. Describe symptoms in all communications, and address letters to DR. SWAYNE & SON, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia. No charge will be made for advice. Sold by druggists and dealers in medicines generally.

DR. PIERCE'S STANDARD REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.
IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Tonic.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples, and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness; Torpid Liver, or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

no man hath seen God at any time, nor can he see Him, "yet the invisible things of Him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead." While this evidence from nature is clear, yet it is true that the greater portion of the human race have been and still are living in ignorance of God, worshiping all manner of idols. There is no reason for this save they would not believe, and hence are given over to hardness of heart and to reprobate minds. We are lifted out of this ignorance and are made partakers of the revelation of the more perfect will of God. Were not the reason blinded, the existence of God would be manifest. O, brethren, let us never forget that it is through the mercy of God, that the light which shines in and through Christ has dispelled the darkness from our minds!

Now, our belief in God is authenticated by the intuitions of our minds, by the evidence we draw from nature, and by the evidence we draw from history. Our belief is not uncertain but sure.

We know that this God who hath created and who governeth all things is a being who loves us with infinite love. If He gave His only begotten Son to die for us, He will not let a hair of our heads be injured. We can utter the fundamental truth of that earliest confession, "I believe in God, the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth." He is the Maker of all things, and is our Father.

2. Let us remember and realize that no man, of his own power, can come to a knowledge of God. If our hearts are truly open to conviction, we will not need to feel after God if haply we may find Him, but we will know him. We will be able to say, "The Lord is my rock and my fortress and my deliverer; my God, my strength, in whom will I trust."—Metropolitan Pulpit.

We have just dedicated one of the neatest churches in the State, at Denison. Rev. M. A. Dougherty is in the third year of his pastorate, and ought to be permitted to remain another year to enjoy as well as to reap the results of past labor and sacrifice. The church is of brick, in Gothic style, with cut stone trimmings, and a corner tower to be surmounted by a spire. The extreme dimensions are 50x74 feet. The main audience room is 35x50 feet, with a recess for a pulpit and choir in the center of the rear side of the room, 18x26 feet, making a spacious platform, whose circular front projects but a short distance into the room. The seats are arranged in amphitheater or circular form. Opposite the pulpit and in the front part of the building is a chapel 20x80 feet, connecting by sliding doors with the main room and suitable for prayer or social meetings. Opening from the pulpit platform are two good sized rooms, one for the pastor's study and the other for class room. The windows are of beautiful stained glass, and the frescos, designed by Prof. S. S. Steele (now at work on our new church at Sherman) in excellent taste. The carpets are bright and [illegible] the chandeliers and other [illegible] in good taste. The ventilation and heating are perfect. The house and lots cost $6,250. On the day of dedication $1,000 re[illegible] to be provided for, which, [illegible] a surplus of $200, was quickly [illegible] cheerfully subscribed. $800 is [illegible] the Church Extension Society. L. H. CARHART, Austin Conf.

The Resurrection of Christ.

Jesus had died amid the convulsions of nature. It is the third morning and still he slumbers in the cold embrace of death. That body, spent by toil and wasted by loss of blood, lies cold and quiet in the new-made tomb.

Suddenly the heart throbs, the lungs expand, the tide of life moves along its accustomed channels, the eyes open, the limbs move, the countenance beams with smiles and is radiant with unearthly life. He lives. Death is conquered. Immortality is proclaimed in the precincts of the sepulchre. Jesus reigns. He chains death to His own conquering car, and rides forth a mighty conqueror, the world's great Redeemer. He emblazons immortality upon his banner and bears it aloft over the crumbling walls of the sepulchre. Angels, who have rolled away the stone, raise a shout of triumph, that makes every skeleton in the valley of dry bones quiver, and shakes the earth from pole to pole. This work sublime, this victory without a parallel, is at once the assurance and the type of our own resurrection. It is not now a thing incredible that God should raise the dead. The question, "If a man die shall he live again?" has been answered with an emphasis and an eloquence which angels cannot equal, and which mortals may not attempt to imitate. In the one work of the Resurrection of Jesus a deeper impression was made upon the world than ages had made before. It was an impression not only upon the abodes of the living, but upon the silent mansions of the dead. This impression, as it is inwrought in the heart of humanity, teaches us that it is not all of life to live, and that humanity, in its material substance as well as in its immaterial character, shall pass from glory to glory. There is no annihilation. Soul and body are both immortal. As sure as the morning rose upon the dead body of Jesus, and as sure as on that morning, angels and men beheld a risen Lord, so sure shall another morn break in splendor upon a slumbering world. No beauteous morn after a night of cloud and storm ever equaled the glories that shall attend the resurrection morn. Then above all these splendors the Son of God shall be seen, and louder than the peals of clanging trumpets, the voice of the highest shall be heard. Rising from the cemeteries where sleep the dead, millions throng the air and once more are instinct with life. Death is no more, and the grave has surrendered its last victim. Youth and age now mingle on the same level and join in bursts of praise and make the welkin ring with shouts of joy. Like unto His glorious body shall all his children come forth clothed with immortality. Higher than the angels, glorified humanity shines forth in the likeness of the Son of God. With voices sweeter than ever angels uttered, the ransomed of the Lord shall celebrate the sublime theme of redemption. With intellects clear as the sun in the heavens, our glorified humanity shall then comprehend the infinitude of redeeming love. With hearts melted and attuned to praise we shall then respond to all the love that the Father has bestowed upon us, and every pulsation in the heart of God shall meet its responsive throb in ours. Clothed in white robes, associated with immortal spirits around the throne, possessed of keener powers and bearing a loftier impress than earth ever knew, we shall equal the chimes of ocean in the mighty swell of praise that we send up to God.

No marvel, then, that this doctrine of the Resurrection awoke the the world from the sleep of ages and brought thousands of converts to the Cross of Christ. The truth still lives. Its power is as great as ever. Here I unfurl my banner. Here I raise the glorious standard still high advanced. And here I call to the sleeping world, "Awake to your interest, arouse to duty, lay hold of an eternal life, and secure your part in the first resurrection."—Extract from Article by Rev. R. H. Rivers, in Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for April.

[illegible] that nothing was made vain. But how about a fashionable [illegible]? Isn't she maiden vain?

Borrowing Trouble.

But we know not what shall be on the morrow, and on many accounts it is best for us not to indulge in idle anticipations. We have something else to do. Our duties are pressing, solemn, numerous. If we can meet the responsibilities of the present hour, that will be as much as we can reasonably expect. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. When great trials come to true Christians, they have a promise of assistance according to their necessities. "As thy day, so shall thy strength be." Dying grace is seldom given except to dying believers. To them it is never denied. By idle anticipations we greatly enhance our sufferings. Portens says: "He who foresees calamities suffers them twice over." We are positively forbidden to pry curiously into the future. "The secret things belong unto the Lord our God, but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law." Deut. xxix, 29. Our great wisdom is found in entire submission to the sovereign will of God in all coming events. There is no end to the torment we may thus inflict upon ourselves. Seneca was right when he said: "The state of that man's mind who feels so intense an interest as to future events, must be most deplorable." Johnson says: "Many philosophers imagine that the elements themselves may be in time exhausted; that the sun, by shining long, will effuse all its light; and that, by the continual waste of aqueous particles, the whole earth will at last become a sandy desert. I would not advise my readers to disturb themselves by contriving how they shall live without light and water." Sometimes folly seems to have no bounds. A writer says: "Ye may live through to-morrow. Then be prepared for it, prosecute your plans, pursue your business, be industrious and enterprising. But be not unmindful that there is another branch of the alternative. You may not live through to-morrow. Be prepared equally for that. To-morrow may introduce you into the presence of God, may close the account of life, may withdraw the offer of mercy, may cut short the opportunity of salvation. What if it shall? Are you ready for that interview and that reckoning?

One very proper way of disposing of such temptations respecting the future, is to dwell much on the eternity that is before us. What is all time? What are all the trials of time. It will not be long till every living man will look back on the worldly things that made him glad or sorrowful, and see and say that they are things of nought. The wicked and the righteous in a future state will alike wonder that such vanities could ever have engrossed their attention. Let any thoughtful man even here say, "What importance will I attach to this or that event, to this or that profession in a thousand years from this time?" and he will at once see how idle are his intense feelings.

Then let us gird up the loins of our minds, stand in our lot, cheerfully committing everything to the God of all grace and mercy. We see not, but he sees what is coming and has made full provision for it. Let us sing:

I see not a step before,
As I tread the days of the year:
But the past is still in God's keeping.
The future His mercy will clear:
And what seems dark in the distance
May brighten as I draw near.

So I go on, not knowing—
I would not if I might:
I would rather walk with God in the dark
Than walk alone in the light;
I would rather walk with Him by faith
Than walk alone by sight.

My heart shrinks back from trials
Which the future may disclose;
Yet I never had a sorrow
But what my dear Lord chose
So I send the coming tears back
With the whispering words, "He knows."

Satan Put to Flight.

A God-fearing man, in moderate circumstances, having contributed fifty dollars to a religious enterprise, was greatly harrassed with the idea that he had given more than was required of him. He sought his pillow, but sleep departed. "Too much, too much!" was constantly repeated. Twenty-five dolars was sufficient to give, and more was to take the bread from the poor at his door. At last, perceiving it a device of Satan to trouble him, he rose from his bed, fell upon his knees, and in a loud voice exclaimed: "Oh, thou enemy of all righteousness, dare to say another word and I will make it a hundred." It is needless to add that the adversary spread his wings and departed.—Christian Union.

What the Bell Said, and What the People Said.

The quiet of a Sunday morning was broken by the tones of a church bell. Over the town floated its full, rich music, and it came back again in faint echoes.

The bell seemed charged with a message to the people, which it was telling with all its might; and the message ran thus: "Come—come. Come—come. Come-come."

But although well understood, it was not heeded by many, and this is what the people said who did not heed it, and what Conscience said to them:

Bell. "Come—come."

People. "We do not feel very well to-day."

Conscience. "Isn't it strange there are so many sick people Sunday's? Many who are well enough on Saturday night are unable to go out on Sunday, and those who are sick on Sunday recover when Monday morning comes. It might seem as if some weekly epidemic visited the town with a full supply of headaches, colds, fevers, and other disorders."

Bell. "Come—come."

People. "The weather is too unpleasant to-day."

Conscience. "Yes, the weather on Sundays is always wrong—too hot, too cold, too cloudy, or too windy. Sunday heats are so exhausting, Sunday rains are so penetrating, Sunday colds so piercing, that no one but the minister and sexton should go out to church!"

Bell. "Come—come."

People. "We have company."

Conscience. "Isn't there something said about the stranger within thy gates keeping the Sabbath holy?

Bell. "Come—come."

People. "Our garments are not good enough."

Conscience. "There are a great many directions in the Bible about how we should come before our Lord, but the style and quality of our clothes are not mentioned. The church is not a millinery establishment or show room. In old times the rich and poor met together, for the Lord is the maker of them all."

Bell. "Come—come."

People. "We are better than some who go to church."

Conscience. "You may be better than some, but are you satisfied with that? Will it do to tell the Lord so? There is something in the parable of the Pharisee and Publican bearing upon this point."

Bell. "Come—come."

People "We haven't any seats in church."

Conscience. "Yes, there are always seats for all who come. There need be no fear of intruding, for all are welcome; and there need be no fear of wearing out your welcome, for you are urged to come every Sunday."

And so the church bell kept ringing out its message, "Come—come." And some heeded the message, came, thanked God for the privilege of coming, and resolved to come always. Others still refused, and Conscience went to sleep, murmuring ere it slept, "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

The Queen and the Sabbath.

A correspondent writes to the Leeds Mercury: "On one occasion Her Majesty had invited distinguished guests to dine at Windsor Castle. It was therefore necessary that the Court band should prepare itself to perform special selections of music. The pieces chosen were difficult, the time for practice limited, and the leader, declaring that he could not afford to lose a day, summoned the men to meet for rehearsal on the Sunday. There were two Germans in the band, named Schrader and Gehrmann, who were Wesleyan Methodists, and whose consciences would not allow them to spend the Lord's day is a musical rehearsal. They told their scruples to the leader, who, however, peremptorily ordered them to be present on pain of instant dismissal from the band. They did not hesitate a moment. On the Monday morning, on presenting themselves at their quarters, the leader, in violent language, ordered them to be gone. The poor fellows walked sadly away, and not far from Windsor met the Bishop of London driving to the Castle. Stopping the carriage on their signal, he heard their tale, and promised to speak for them to the Queen. Before the day was over the leader of the band was summoned into Her Majesty's presence. The Queen inquired what had become of the two German Methodists, one of whom, as being one of the best trombone players in the country, was a favorite at Court. The leader explained that he could not allow 'absurd religious scruples' to stand in the way of a soldier's duty. The Queen at once gave commands that the men be immediately restored to their posts, and added, 'I will have no more persecution in my service for conscience' sake, and I will have no more rehearsals on Sunday.'"

Overcoming Temptation.

One night at a late hour Dr. Bentley was disturbed at his studies by a rattling sound among some wood, which, sawed and split, had been left by a teamster, the afternoon previous, too late to be housed. He arose, went cautiously to the window, and saw a woman filling her apron with wood, which she hastily carried away. He resumed his seat, and commenced his study. Shortly after the same noise occurred; and on looking out a second time, he saw a similar operation; the woman filling her great apron to the utmost limits of its capacity. When she had gone, he returned to his book with a tender pity in his heart for the destitution which sought relief in this lonely, dreary, not to say sinful manner.

By-and-by he was startled by a heavy crash of falling wood, and hurrying up to the window, beheld the woman casting the very dust from her apron. He remained motionless, his gentle heart filled with commisseration. She swiftly departed, and soon returned with the remaining wood, which she threw on the pile as if it were the "accursed thing."

The doctor's compassion and curiosity were now intensely excited. He followed her retreating figure till he discovered her residence and thus ascertained who she was. What she was, was no mystery to him. The last hour had shown him her virtue's lofty height. He called early the next morning on Mr. B——, the wood-dealer, and directed him to send half a cord of his best wood, sawed and split, to Mrs. ——, but by no means to let her know from whom it came; which was readily promised. Mr. B——'s teamster, who happened to be within ear-shot, though out of sight, was not so bound, and, when he tipped the wood into the poor widow's yard, replied to her eager inquiry, who had sent it, by relating the conversation he had overheard.

The conscience stricken mother, feeling that her sin and repentance in the lonely darkness of that midnight hour, were known and understood by another heart beside her own, hastened without delay to the house of the benevolent man, to express her gratitude and her sorrow, and with deep humility and bitterness, told him the temptation to which her extreme poverty had reduced her, of breaking the eighth commandment.

"Though my house was dark and cold, though my heart was wrung with anguish at the sight of my poor shivering ones, I could not keep it; my conscience would not let me."

"Say no more, my dear madam," said the good man. "I saw you conquer the devil in two fair fights."

A Billion Dissected.

Mr. Henry Bessemer, under the heading "A Billion Dissected," tries to convey to the ordinary mind some idea what a billion—"a modest 1, followed by twelve cyphers"—really is. He does this by means of illustrations drawn from familiar objects of thought and sight. The result is such as will surprise many. Attention is thus called to a billion, as a measure of Time, Distance and Weight. When we speak, for example, of a billion of seconds, we, perhaps, suppose that since the commencement of our era, such a number has long since been measured out. Arithmetic shows us, however, that "we have not even passed one-sixteenth of that number in all these long eventful years, for it takes just 31,687 years, 17 days, 22 hours, 45 minutes and 5 seconds to constitute a billion seconds." A billion of sovereigns would extend, when ranged side by side in piles of twenty feet high, so as to form two parallel walls, a distance of 2,386½ miles; or, if placed on the ground, so as to form one continuous chain by each sovereign touching the one next to it, such a chain would encircle the earth 783 times. The weight of the same sovereigns would be 6,975,447 tons. As to altitude, we are informed that a billion sheets of the Times "superimposed upon each other, and pressed into a compact mass," would reach to the height of 47,348 miles! Most readers who follow such statements as these will be disposed to agree with Mr. Bessemer that "a billion is a fearful thing, and few can appreciate its real value," and that "as for quadrillions and trillions, they are simply words wholly incapable of impressing themselves on the human intellect." And yet, one cannot help suggesting, what are even these baffling conceptions as to time compared with eternity! We may well use such a word with awe. —Christian World.

The Growth of the English Language.

Few scholars even are aware of the great changes through which the English language has passed in successive centuries. Following are specimens of the Lord's Prayer as used at various periods in English history:

A. D. 1158.—Fader ur in heune, hale weide beith thi neune, cumin thi kuneriche, thi wille beoth idon in henne and in erthe. The euryeu dawe bried, gif ons thilk dawe. And vorzif uer dettes as vi yoursifen ure dettoures. And lene us nought into temtation, bot delyvor eus of evel. Amen.

A. D. 1300.—Fadiur are in hevene Halewyd be thi name, thi kingdom come, thi wille be dou as in hevene and in erthe—Our urche days bred give us to daye. And forgive oure dettes as we forgive our dettoures. And forgive us our trespaces oven as we forgive our trespacers. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from yell. For thyne is the king- dome and the power and the gloryo forever. Amen.

A. D. 1611.—Our father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our dayley bread. And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For thyne is the kingdome, and the power, and the glory for over. Amen.

The above is worthy of preservation. It shows very vividly how the English language, as we now have it, has changed and grown in 700 years, until it has reached its present form and shape. All living languages are subject to such slow changes—hardly noticed by one generation of men, but plain enough when we institute a comparison between distant times. The English language is not yet perfect, and will probably undergo as great changes in the future as in the past.

Agreed.

The following is from the New York Observer:

At the late meeting of the South Carolina Conference, Bishop Doggett introduced his old friend, Dr. Plumer, (Presbyterian) and invited him to address the brethren. Among other things Dr. Plumer said:

"The Methodists and Presbyterians sometimes argue on the perseverance of the saints. Whatever differences there may be on that subject, I think we are all agreed thus far:

"1. The saints do well to persevere. It is a good thing to hold on in the way of piety. It is a bad thing to backslide ever so little.

"2. If the saints don't persevere, they will not be saved. 'He that endureth to the end shall be saved,' 'Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life;' 'If any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.'

"3. If the saints do not persevere, it will not be for the want of blessed and glorious promises, and plenty of them; 'As thy day, so shall thy strength be;' 'My grace is sufficient for thee.'

"4. If the saints do not persevere, it will not be for want of a precious, faithful Savior, who ever lives to make intercession for them, and who has said, 'I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee,' There is no need of their falling away."

By this time Bishop Doggett and many of the brethren were in tears, and gave audible response.

It is a whole city within four walls, having more than five hundred sleeping rooms, making its own gas, having its own wells, being fitted up with every known appliance for comfort, and even furnished with a good sized library. It is as comfortable, and apparently as luxurious as a first-class hotel, and the cost of accomodation, while beyond the means of very many of the poorer class of working women, will be easily within the reach of a large class who are much in need of such a shelter.

Hezekiah prayed and death, the mightiest conqueror of all, who had already seized his victim, was overcome, and forced to let go his hold. Hezekiah prayed again, and death, obediant, destroyed a hundred and four score and five thousand of the Assyrians in a single night. Thus even death, which will obey God only has been controlled by prayer. Some Christians prayed, and three thousand persons were converted in a day; they prayed again and dungeon doors flew open, and iron bolts snapped like a spider's web, while angels were the escort and body-guard of the emancipated apostle. Prayer overthrew Haman, brought down rain from heaven, and arrested the sun in its course. All that it has done. How much more it can do we know not. Perhaps in these last days, faith and piety are to make new and grander discoveries of the power of prayer. Ere that great work, the conversion of the world, shall be accomplished, we may see vaster results from prayer than former ages dreamed of.—Perkins.

Our Mexican Mission.

The Methodist Episcopal Church is now thoroughly established—both in the city and country of Mexico. Bishop Merrill during an extended conversation with the editor of the SOUTHWESTERN in this office, gave many facts of interest to the Church.

The Bishop, accompanied by Dr. Dashiel, one of our Missionary Secretaries, and T. W. Price Esq. and family, left New York Dec. 29, and reached Vera Cruz Jan. 10. The Bishop and Secretary went by order of the Church to make a general visitation to all our Missionary stations in Mexico. They were in that country not quite two months and gave a thorough examination of every department of the Mission.

Our readers will be glad to know just what we have in Mexico. At Orizaba Rev. Richard Stevens is pastor and has a circuit of three appointments, with good congregations. At this point we have no church property. At Puebla Rev. C. W. Drees is pastor, assisted by Rev. G. Ludors. Here there is a property which comprises pastor's residence, boys orphanage, school, and a church, all in one. The congregation is very large and already the accommodations are too small. At Pachuca, Rev. Christopher Ludlow is pastor, assisted by two native helpers, Bro. Mendoza and Coronel. The Church property includes residences for all the ministers, a school room and church, besides a residence for the lady missionary, Miss Hastings, a girl's school-house, porter's house, etc. There are three outside appointments. One of the congregations at this point is English. The erection of new church property is contemplated and will soon be begun. At Guanajaunta Rev. S. P. Craver is pastor and is assisted by Bro. Loza, a native preacher. The church property is rented here from Gov. Antillion, who takes a personal interest in our Mission work. We have at this point a well organized congregation, and Sunday school and day school. The congregations are large. This is one of the most fanatical cities in Mexico, and Bro. Craver and his wife have been subjected to great persecutions. In these columns Bro. Craver has given accounts of these outrages, and of the manner of God's deliverance, and of how he raised up friends and blest the work. At Miraflores Rev. Bro. Siberts is pastor, assisted by two native helpers, Bros. Cordova and Lopez. This is indeed is a [illegible] Circuit. There are seven appointments with as many good congregations and Sunday-schools, and also two day schools. On this circuit has been built the first entirely new church ever built in Mexico by Protestants. A church and two parsonages have been built from the ground and dedicated in regular American style. In the City of Mexico are our chief missionary enterprises and work. Dr. W. F. Butler is Superintendent and preaches to a large independent English congregation. Rev. J. W. Butler preaches to our Spanish congregations assisted by Bros. Gam[illegible] and Montera, native helpers. There are two Spanish congregations. The principal one is called Trinity, and worships in the chapel of the splendid property bought by Bishop Haven and Dr. Butler, which has been described to our readers. The other congregation and day [illegible] meet in a rented hall. Our [illegible] property here gives ample accommodations for a church, girls' [illegible], residences for all the [illegible], printing establishment, book store, etc. The girls' [illegible] has been under the [illegible] of Misses Warner and [illegible]. As stated before these [illegible] our schools are supported by the Womans' Foreign Missionary Society.

[illegible] Butler and his associates [illegible] established an initial Book [illegible] Mexico. The most im- [illegible] blication is the Illustrated Advocate. These [illegible] supply all [illegible] Missions in [illegible] Mexico, Arizo- [illegible] translating [illegible] Butler, who [illegible] from the [illegible] this excellent [illegible]. She was [illegible] was [illegible]

Bishop Merrill presided and Rev. C. W. Drees was elected Secretary. This being the first Annual Meeting it required patient and careful inquiry into the details of each Mission. This was done with great care, and the work arranged for 1878 as indicated above. Nine native, one Spanish speaking and one German speaking missionaries were licensed to preach. Brothers Lopez and Ludlow were ordained deacons, and Bro. Cravor was ordained an elder. Bro. Cordova was recognized as a deacon from the M. E. Church South.

Bishop Merrill and Dr. Dashiel had an interview with President Diez. The President assured them of his sympathy with our mission work in his country and stated that ample protection should be given to Missionaries in every part of the Republic. Bishop Merrill showed him our article of Religion relating to governments and stated that our purpose was in no way to interfere with the political matters of the nation. Diaz replied that he wished all ecclesiastics had taken the same course.

Our Mexican Mission gives abundant evidence of God's blessing. The people of that country are everywhere accessible. The moral and social ruin wrought by Romanism is everywhere manifest and impresses thoughtful Mexicans that their nation and people must have new spiritual guides. At the same time, bad as the work of Rome has been, there is a substratum of true doctrine on which to build. The hope of our Mexican Mission is in the youth brought into and trained in our schools and orphanages. The most pressing immediate demand is more church property. We need this to give permanence to the work. This the church will give.

Methodist Episcopal Church South in Mexico.

The Methodist Episcopal Church South has a Mission in Mexico, and Bishop Keener, of that Church, has returned from an official visit to that Mission. In a letter to the New Orleans Christian Advocate the Bishop says:

It is a source of profound joy to me that several branches of Protes-Christianity—that is, Bible Christianity—are hard at work here distributing truth, as best they can, with tears and praying. I am glad to see them magnify their work, and interesting more and more the drowsy multitudes at home in the welfare of their fellow-creatures. Dr. Butler makes a very good array of workers; and the "Conference" just held by Bishop Merrill in Mexico will tell well upon the whole work. The number which Dr. Riley has in the field and those which Mr. Hutchinson, the representative of the Presbyterian Board of New York has, or those of the Congregationalist Churches, I am not exactly able to report. We have, of workers in the Mexican City mission, 6, exclusive of Sabbath school teachers; in the Mexican Border mission, 9—say in all 15 preachers, 501 members, 14 Sabbath schools, 22 teachers, 357 children, 2,950 persons preached to; 3 houses of worship, valued at $16,900, 8 circuits, and 1 station, which includes a number of preaching-places. All these services and sermons are in the Spanish tongue, and the congregations are Mexican. Here is a germ of life which promises an ample return to the church at home for all her zeal and generosity. Six years ago all this was in the spirit and person of a single Mexican, Alejo Hernandez.

Southern Methodist Books and Papers.

Rev. Dr. Haygood, of the Southern Methodist Church has been stating some plain facts relative to the publishing interests of the Church. Coming from such a source the statement will be accepted. Dr. Haygood says:

Let us compare the circulation of four of the leading Advocates of our own Church with four of the Church North.

We leave off the names, but they are leading papers, published in the midst of strong Methodist communities. And two of the four have as large circulation as have any Southern Methodist papers. The four have a circulation of 28,000—averaging 7000 each. Take the four strongest of the Northern Methodist Advocates. What circulation have they? The four reach 111,000—averaging each 27,750—only 250 less than the combined circulation of our four strongest!

The four strongest Baptist papers in the South count up only 24,000; while one Baptist paper in New York reaches 21,000.

The Apologist, published in Cincinnati, for the German Methodists of the M. E. Church, counts 15,000 subscribers—nearly twice as many as our strongest Advocate can show.

Some of our defenders are wont to bring forward the colored population as a set off, when we begin [illegible] comparisons. But this won't [illegible] in this issue. [illegible] we have in our [illegible] ary movement of our times. No wonder our pastors are poorly supported.

But the figures given above tell but part of the sad tale. There is incontrovertible evidence for saying that in the sale of books we are as far behind as we are in the circulation of religious papers. Witness: the annual "exhibits" during the last ten years by our "House" in Nashville and by the "Concern" in New York, Cincinnati, Chicago, San Francisco and Atlanta. Their book-sales are enormous. We cannot escape by pointing to the books sold by friendly or affiliated book merchants in St. Louis, New Orleans, Atlanta, or Richmond. We know something of the business done by these establishments.—These sales do not help us to a vindication. Moreover, our Northern brethren have twenty times as many such stores as we have.

No class has so great an interest in this matter as Methodist itinerant preachers. We belong to that honorable company, and feel distressed in considering facts that can no longer be concealed—facts that are portentous in view of future tests and competitions in this country. Alas! for the country that it does not read!

Mt. Union College, Ohio.

Mount Union College, located at Alliance, Ohio, has been in debt so as to be very much embarrassed. The President, Rev. Dr. O. H. Hartshorn, has issued a circular, setting forth that the reports have greatly exagerated the facts and gives a full and encouraging summary of the condition and prospects of the school. Bishop Simpson is one of the trustees and says;

"Mount Union College, manifestly a creature of Providence, is an eminently needed, live and progressive Institution, where excellent government, high intellectual and moral culture, cheapness and thoroughness, with a sound plan wisely adapted to the enlarging wants of the American people, are happily combined."

The circular before us says:

"The total number of Alumni and regular Graduates in the Baccalaureate Degree, is 611, and in the Master's and other Degrees, 218,—besides the Graduates in the Normal, Musical and Fine Art Departments (without Degree) being 2,716 gentleman, and 1,467 ladies. The ascertained vocation of the Alumni and former Students residing throughout nearly every State and Territory of our country, is as follows: professional teachers, 5,437; merchants, 2,125; farmers, 2,115; ministers, 725; manufacturers, 515; physicians, 254; lawyers, 237; editors, 184; civil engineers, 58; telegraphers, 43; bankers, 25. These are some of the fruits of this College.

Mason, Tenn., Circuit Preachers' Meeting.

The preachers and exhorters of Mason Circuit have organized themselves into a Preachers' Association. At a preliminary meeting there were eighteen present. Rev. J. P. Price occupied the chair: R. R. Anderson and G. N. Johnson were Secretaries. The pastor, J.P. Price, preached a short sermon: subject, "The Call to the Ministry." A committee was appointed on programme for the next meeting, as follows, G. N. Johnson, C. E. Alexander, R. R. Anderson, J. P. Grandberry, James Samuel. The meeting was of great interest to those present.

PROGRAMME FOR NEXT MEETING.

H. Cook, Prayer Meetings; C. E. Alexander, Duty of Local Preachers; P. West, Patience; G. N. Johnson, Ezekiel 37–3; J. P. Grandberry, Church Records; S. Lennings, Sabbath-schools; A. Falk, Denominational Relations; R. Moore, Building Churches; J. Robinson, Exhorters' Duties; F. Goings, Sin; A. Williams, The Marriage Relation; Cyrus Gibbs, Meekness; West Peat, Attendance on Public Worship; Nelson Hill, Cleanliness and Neatness Enjoined by the Scriptures; S. Grant, Pure Religion; R. R. Anderson, Intemperance; J. W. Hall, Romans 5–1.

Adjourned to meet at Pleasant Grove Church on the fourth Saturday in March. All the brethren are expected to be present with their themes well written up.

Our work is progressing. We hope to do much in circulating the SOUTHWESTERN among the people.

The Lord is blessing us.

G. N. JOHNSON.

Bishop Merrill, accompanied by Miss Ogden, of our Mexican Mission, arrived in this city by the steamer City of Mexico, on the 6th inst. Miss Ogden returns on account of impaired health. Miss Warner, who went from this city, is expected to return for the same cause in a few weeks. These two ladies, with Miss Hastings, have constituted the working force sent to our Mexican Mission by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. The ladies who return now will either go back after a few month's rest, or their places will be supplied by other appointees. Dr. Dashiell, who went to Mexico with Bishop Merrill, sailed for New York direct from Vera Cruz.

Sunday School Conferences.

Rev. Dr. J. B. Ford, our Sunday School Agent for the South is now in this city conducting Sunday-school Conferences. To-night (Monday) he speaks in Wesley Chapel and the Conference will be continued Tuesday and Wednesday nights in that Church. On Thursday night Dr. Ford speaks in Ames Church and meetings will be held there Friday and Saturday nights. Next week we will give full report.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Southwestern Presbyterian approve the prosecution of the Returning Board and the conviction of General Anderson. This is consistent. During the years of political reconstruction and excitement since the war, these papers have, on all questions, represented the most ultra sentiments of the Democracy, and we do not remember to have seen a single unfavorable criticism in their editorial columns upon the Democratic men or measures of the State or the nation.

Hon. Benj. F. Wade died of typhoid fever, at his home in Jefferson, Ohio, March 2, after an illness of four weeks, aged 78 years. He was a native of Springfield, Mass., and went to Ohio in 1822. He was chosen United States Senator in 1851, and remained a member of that body eighteen years. He was prominent as a leader of the anti-slavery Whigs, and advocated the homestead bill and the repeal of the fugitive slave law, and opposed the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and the Lecompton constitution.

The case of General Anderson went before the Supreme Court of Louisiana to-day (Tuesday). In deciding the appeal, that Court can affirm the action of the lower Court by which he was found guilty, or order a new trial, or reverse the decision. The counsel of General Anderson have strong hopes of a reversion of judgment. Should this Court confirm the judgment of the lower Court, an appeal will then be taken on a writ of error to the Supreme Court of the United States. General Anderson is still in prison.

There are some indications that the new Pope will pursue a more liberal course that his predecessor and seek to infuse a better spiritual life into his church, by urging his priests to preach Jesus Christ more and the Virgin Mary less. It is also said that Cardinal Franchi and the Pope have determined on a policy of reconciling, as far as possible, the interests of the Church and State, in questions pending with various governments. The new Pope has already aroused the anger of the extreme Jesuits. We hope these reports are true.

A special dispatch to the Democrat from Washington says that vigorous measures are about to be adopted to prevent the use of mails to carry the tickets and circulars of the Louisiana State Lottery, by enforcing the penalties of the laws of Congress on this subject against all guilty parties. The orders issued by the Post-office Department some time ago forbidding the use of the mails for transmitting lottery tickets have been evaded or disregarded. The Federal authorities have decided that lotteries authorized by States come under the same law so far as the mails are concerned. We hope the report of the proposed action will prove true.

Our late trip on Bayou La Fourche to attend Quarterly Meetings, at Napoleonville, Woodlawn, and Thibodeaux gave us much pleasure and greatly encouraged us as to our work in that part of the State. Bro. Kennedy, at Napoleonville, has had great trouble because of a troublesome lawsuit involving a large claim against the Church property. But he is doing manfully the work of a Methodist preacher, and is winning. At Woodlawn Bro. Washington is doing excellent work, and we look for a good year's fruit. At Thibodeaux Bro. Lynch is being greatly blest. More than a score have been converted, and in all respects the work of the church and congregation is being improved under his wise counsels.

The Senate Committee have reported in favor of granting the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, $150,000 for the use of its property during the war at Nashville. The original claim was $450,000. If the Methodist Church, South, should be reimbursed for the destruction or use of its property during the war then all property destroyed by the Federal army in the South should be paid for. The Confederacy had no more potent ally than the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and their Book Concern at Nashville was used in the interest of the Confederacy. In 1862 a Confederate Almanac was issued there, and edited by Dr. T. O. Summers, which contained as much treason and hatred against the United States as language could express.

Southern Methodism.

Rev. B. F. Penny, Pass Christian, Miss.: "We have just closed a meeting in which our people were wonderfully blessed by the outpouring of the Spirit. There were fifteen conversions. We have received into the Church this year twenty-four persons. We bless the Lord for his goodness."

Rev. T. Kennedy, at Napoleonville, La., has begun a good work. His congregation has in past years been greatly discouraged and injured by bad leaders, but it is now united and indications of growth are many, The first Quarterly Meeting was held on the 2nd and 3rd inst., and it was a most interesting occasion. Bro. Kennedy is one of our reliable and successful pastors.

Rev. J. F. Marshall, Alexandria, La.: "As a result of a series of revival meetings there have been fourteen conversions and many others are deeply concerned about the salvation of their souls. Our Sunday School now numbers from sixty to seventy members. My wife has been a great assistance to me in the revival meetings; she also takes an active part in the Sunday School."

Rev. G. Washington, Woodlawn, La., reports that his first Quarterly Meeting was held on the 3d inst. A very large audience was present, to which the sermon and advice of the Presiding Elder was of great benefit. The Woodlawn church was never in better condition, and the prospects for a good year in the Lord's work are flattering. The SOUTHWESTERN is popular.

Rev. G. B. Lynch, Thibodeaux, La., gives a glowing account of his first Quarterly Meeting, held on the 4th inst. Although it was a week night the house was full and the people greeted their Presiding Elder cordially, and listened to his sermon and advice respecting their church interests with attention. A gracious revival has blest the Thibodeaux church. Over twenty have been converted. The congregation has largely increased. The church property is to be improved, and a parsonage is talked of. Not only has all money due him to date been paid, but his people have given him very substantial evidence of appreciation by presenting him a well filled purse of money.

Rev. Mack Henson, Victoria, Texas: "Our Presiding Elder Rev. Geo. W. Richardson, failed to reach his Quarterly Meeting appointment here, owing to a misunderstanding of the Railroad schedule. Our people were greatly disappointed, as they had looked forward to his coming with joyful anticipations. The Quarterly Conference was held, but the administration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was postponed for the present. The improvements in our church edifice go rapidly forward. The ceiling is now completed and gives it a decidedly neat appearance. The ladies have the matter in hand and the work will be finished. Some of the elder ones, sisters M. Ellis, H. Southern, A. Baldridge, and others have raised the means for a beautiful, modern style pulpit and a neat pastor's study. Some of the young ladies, Misses Lizzie Ellis, L. G. Robinson, Mollie Miller, and others have provided for the church an elegant pair of chandeliers. The building is 30x60 feet in dimensions.

General News Items.

The Grand Lodge of Free Masons of England, Lord Carnarvon presiding, has unanimously passed resolutions refusing to recognize as a Free Mason any person initiated in a lodge where belief in God is denied or ignored. This refers to the action of the Grand Orient of France, which recently eliminated the article expressing belief in God from its ritual.

The grand jury of Pike county lately made a report on the affairs in that county, from which, as published in the Summit Times, we extract the following concerning the bulldozers:

We have found but four bills of indictment, as much of our time has been consumed in the investigations leading to the apprehension, and bringing to justice of that mysterious class of people known as the bulldozers. We believe witnesses have been before us who could have given such information as would lead to conviction of some parties, but would not reveal what they knew, through fear, of personal injury; this has been so manifest, that we have refrained from further investigation.

We believe that many of the colored people have left this country on account of the general depression of the times, from a failure to receive full remuneration for their labor, inability to meet their obligations, to procure supplies for the comming year, and to better their financial condition.

These influences, acting together, have created general demoralization among all classes of citizens, and in many instances the consumers are left behind, while the producers have gone to other sections in search of remunerative employment.

Governor Stone, of Mississippi, in his inaugural address said:

"No problem in politics was ever allotted to any people more difficult than that which the State of Mississippi, in common with her sister states of the South, is now called upon to solve. Can a government based upon unlimited suffrage be successfully carried on between two races, the most antagonistic on earth which, while according equal rights to each, shall tend to the common prosperity and happiness of both? The experience of the past ten years sufficiently demonstrates that it cannot be done by governments the controlling influence of which is wielded by the inferior race. It remains to be seen whether one controlled by the superior will be more successful. Upon one point all good men will agree: there must be absolute and perfect protection to life, liberty, and property. If sufficient powers for this purpose are not already lodged in the executive officers of the state and counties, those powers should be enlarged."

March 24, 1878.—MANASSEH BROUGHT TO REPENTANCE.

SCRIPTURE.—2 Chron. 33: 9-16.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"As many as I love I rebuke and chasten; be zealous, therefore, and repent."—Rev. 3: 19.

TOPIC.—"It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn thy statutes."—Ps. 119: 71.

(Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.)

MANASSEH'S SIN (9-11).—Manasseh became to Judah the evil genius that Jeroboam had been to Israel. The latter had sinned and had caused Israel to sin, and his name stands connected with the final destruction of the ten tribes as its infamous cause. In the same way, too, when, patient as he is, God would no longer endure the wickedness of Judah, he sent his prophet Jeremiah to speak unto his people this warning: "And I will cause them to be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth, because of Manasseh, the son of Hezekiah king of Judah, for that which he did in Jerusalem." Jer. 14: 4. His leadership in evil was as marked and as energetic as had been his father's in restoring the worship of Jehovah.

His Warning.—"And the Lord spake to Manasseh, and to his people, but they would not hearken." God always admonishes before he destroys. No one can plead that he has had no intimation of danger—no hint that repentance was necessary. What it was that the Lord spake to Manasseh and to the people is given in full in 2 K. 21: 10–16. By whom it was spoken is a matter of great interest which is, and probably always will be, out of the power of scholars to solve. The warning was a general one, directed to the whole people, and referred to Manasseh incidentally, only as a part is included in the whole. The outlook that was given of the future was that of the coming captivity of Judah, a time when God should wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish and turneth it upside down. He gave them notice that he should forsake them, and give them into the hand of their enemies. "But they would not hearken." Even warnings have but little effect on those who have gone far in evil. Not only did they shut their eyes, but they were exasperated by these faithful admonitions, and put to death the prophets who uttered them and the innocent people who upheld them in their duty.

MANASSEH'S REPENTANCE (12–13)—"And when he was in affliction he besought the Lord his God." Blessed are the uses of adversity when it leads the prodigal back to his heavenly Father! But why did he not in his distress call upon Baal, or upon Astarte, whose image he had carved, or upon the heavenly host whose altars he had set up in the very courts of the temple? Ah! there is much more of a belief in the true God than skeptics are willing to acknowledge! In great adversity, in times of calamity, in occasions of sudden and imminent peril, then the old, stifled belief will assert itself, and those will call lustily upon the name of God who have been in the habit of deriding it. The fact that Manasseh now turned to God for help in his extremity was a confession that he never had had full faith in the numerous other deities that he had been in the habit of worshiping. How many such confessions there are on record! But, after so many years of apostacy, what was it that turned his heart toward God? We have a thought that grasps us like a certainty, that in the silence and suffering of that Babylonian prison, the teaching, example and tender remembrance of a godly father, with all their softening influences, came vividly and appealingly before him, and melted his soul into sweet contrition. In his loneliness he had a good opportunity to contrast his life with the life of his sainted father—his full of failures, his father's always marked by successes; his full of errors, his father's replete with singular wisdom; his full of evil, his father's full of goodness; his full of corrupt devotion to strange gods, his father's full of single-hearted devotion to the God of Israel. Even a prison may be a capital school room. There is no telling in what inconceivable places a father's prayers may be heard, and a beloved boy brought back to his conscience and his God. God can use a prison sometimes better than he can use a sermon. Let parents who have hardened boys look at the case of hardened Manasseh, and have their courage and their faith revived. Like Hezekiah they may not see their sons repentant and renewed, but God will never cease pursuing the lad for whom his parents have besought him with tears night and day.

Manasseh humbled himself greatly. He had need so to do; for he had sinned grievously. One's humility should reach a level as correspondingly low as the depth of his sins. When a man humbles himself God ceases to humble him. In Pilgrim's Progress Christian found that it was "a hard matter for one to go down into the Valley of Humiliation," but, once down, he discovered that the air was pleasanter and the flowers sweeter than he deemed possible. The way up to God is down through the valley. The prayers that ascend to him from this depth reach him more quickly than those that are uttered upon some gratulatory height of Christian experience.

MANASSEH'S REFORM (14–16).—The king showed the sincerity of his repentance by immediately going to work to correct his errors. He had been negligent before relative to the defence of his kingdom. Now, having been taught a severe lesson by experience, he strengthened the walls on the west side of the city, on which side it was the most liable to attack, and raised up the wall about Ophel to a very great height. Josephus says that the walls in Herod's time was 750 feet above the valley of Jehoshaphat, and that one standing upon it, and looking down, "would be giddy, while his sight could not reach to such an immense depth." "Ophel" was the hill tongue just south of the temple, which sloped precipitately into the valley of Jehoshaphat on the one side, and into the Tyropœon valley on the other. But he showed his repentance in a better way than that. "He took away the strange gods, and the idol out of the house of the Lord, and all the altars that he had built in the mount of the house of the Lord, and in Jerusalem, and cast them out of the city." Those who really are repentant will bring forth fruits meet for repentance. Besides that, he repaired the altar of the Lord, which, in the days of his hostility to its worship, must have been abused and mutilated, and "sacrificed thereon peace offerings and thank offerings (the latter in gratitude for his return), and commanded Judah to serve the Lord." Considering the long course of evil in which he had led them, he achieved a wonderful success. But still he was met with the torturing fact that it is a good deal easier to lead people astray than it is to lead them back again. A long example in wickedness is not to be counteracted in a single day. If one sows broadcast the seeds of thistles, he will have many a weary day of work before him when he desires to rid himself of the pests. Although they only worshiped God there, still the people offered sacrifice on the forbidden high places. All his reforms, so far as the people were concerned, were but outward and temporary. The king's command could remove the offence from off the land, but it could not remove them from the hearts of the people. So soon as that restraint was removed, the idols were brought back, and, in a short time, the temple was again filled with them. Manasseh saved himself, but could not save the people whom he had corrupted. His sad experience should arrest many a young man on the threshold of an evil career. For one may come to the time when he will sorrow most for the ruin that he has brought to those who have fallen under his influence, and who have followed his example.

RECOGNITION OF FRIENDS IN HEAVEN.—This is a phamphlet of 18 pages, published by Rev. Maxwell P. Gaddis, of the Cincinnati Conference, and contains a report of Bishop Foster's argument on "The Doctrine of Recognition Established." And also an extract from the sermon of Rev. Wm. Morley Punshon on "Heaven not a Solitude." A fine steel portrait of each author is given. National Repository,
A CHRISTIAN MAGAZINE,
Rev. D. CURRY, D.D., Editor.
Begins Jan'y, 1878. Try it one Year.
ONLY $3 A YEAR.

"The scope and character of the magazine shall be that of a first-class religious and literary monthly, of the brightest character attainable, and pervaded, whether in its general or religious articles, by a thoroughly Christian spirit."—Order of the Committee.

Under these directions, it will be devoted to General and Religious Literature, Biographies and Travels, Criticisms and Art.

A sufficient number of the best writers for the press are employed to furnish all the variety in the several departments which their scope and importance require to make them rich and instructive.

The editorial department will be a feature of the magazine. Rev. Dr. Curry, both experienced and successful as an editor, brings to his duties the purpose of giving his whole strength to the work before him.

Each number will contain one or more articles illustrated with Wood Engravings, in the best style of this art, adding beauty and value to the pages.

The twelve numbers for the year will contain 1,152 pages of reading-matter, which, published in book form, would make not less than fifteen volumes, worth $1.50 each, and will comprise a variety that will be more interesting and valuable to the general reader than can be procured in books for many times the yearly price of the magazine.

We earnestly request you to take the National Repository for 1878—to give it one year's trial, and thereby determine for yourselves whether it is worthy of a place in the Christian home.

THE DEAD DOLL.

You needn't be trying to comfort me—I tell [illegible] dolly is dead!
[illegible] in saying she isn't with a [illegible] that in her head;
It's just like you said it wouldn't hurt much [illegible] my tooth out, that day,
And [illegible], when the man 'most pulled my head off, you hadn't a word to say.

And I guess you must think I'm a baby, [illegible] I can mend it with glue,
As if I didn't know better than that! why, just suppose it was you?
You might make her look all mended—but [illegible] I care for looks?
Why, glue's for chairs and tables, and toys, and the backs of books!

[illegible] perfect little daughter! Oh, but [illegible] crack!
[illegible] makes me sick to think of the sound [illegible] her poor head went whack

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.
IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Tonic.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples, and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Billiousness, Torpid Liver, or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Billiousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it affects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS.

PARIS, 1867. VIENNA, 1873. SANTIAGO, 1875. PHILADELPHIA, 1876.

Highest Honors at all World's Exhibitions of Recent Years.

NOT LOWEST PRICED, BUT BEST AND CHEAPEST.

THE great competition among reed organ makers now, is as to who shall make an organ which will cost the least money. Therefore the strife is to make, by cheapest material and workmanship, the poorest possible organ; and it is wonderful what progress has been made in this direction! The country is flooded with circulars and advertisements representing these cheaply made organs as worth great prices, but offering them, on various specious pretences, at fractions of these.

Into such competition the Mason & Hamlin Organ Company do not enter. From the begining their first endeavor has been to make the very best instrument possible. They have been rigidly careful in the selection and preparation of most choice material, and the employment of the best workmen only, in every department. And they have called to their assistance the best skill the world could afford; having been themselves so fortunate as to effect the most important improvements in such instruments ever made.

And this highest standard they rigidly maintain.

They invented and introduced the instrument, substantially in its present form, being an improvement upon the melodeon, in 1861.

It was Mr. Hamlin, of this Company, who invented the modern system of voicing the reeds, the most important improvement ever made in such instruments, now universally practiced, but carried to highest perfection only in these organs.

Mason & Hamlin Organs have constantly been placed in competition at Principal Industrial Competions in America to the number of hundreds; and in almost every instance have at such been the sole recipents of Highest Honors, for demonstrated superiority.

At all World's Exhibitions of recent years, viz: at Paris, 1867; Vienna, 1873; Santiago, 1875, and Philadelphia, 1876, they have taken first medals or other highest honors.

At the U. S. Centennial Exhibition, Mason & Hamlin Organs were declared by the distinguished jury to excel all others in all important respects. "Every member of the jury," writes Mr. Geo. F. Bristow, one of the number, "heartily concurred in assigning to those of your make, and yours only, the first rank in all important qualities of such instruments."

These are the only American Organs which have ever been found worthy of any award at any European World's Exposition, and they have obtained the first medal at such wherever exhibited.

So well established is the superiority of the Mason & Hamlin Organs that other leading makers now decline to compete with them at Industrial Competitions; entering their organs "for exhibition only."

It is the Mason & Hamlin Organs which, by their great excellence, have given a great reputation to American Organs, and opened a wide market for them in Europe.

Musicians in America and Europe recognize the unequaled excellence of the Mason & Hamlin Organs and do not hesitate to declare it. While they sometimes give recommendations of other organs, mentioning some good qualities in them, it will be noticed by examination and comparison of the circulars of makers containing such recommendations, that the Mason & Hamlin are in almost all cases declared best. Dr. Franz Liszt, than whom no musician in the world stands higher, recently characterized them as "matchless," "unrivaled." Theodore Thomas, than whom no musician is more esteemed in America, or has a wider acquaintance with best musicians, says the Mason & Hamlin Organs "are the best instruments of the class made, either in this country or Europe;" that "they excel especially in richer, better qualities of tone," and that "musicians generally regard the Mason & Hamlin Organs as unequalled by any others."

The testimonials recognizing the superiority of the Mason & Hamlin Organs, which are published in their Circulars, were characterized by the New York Tribune as the Universal opinion of the musical profession," and by the New York World as "The judgment of nearly every organist and pianist of note."

MODERN IMPROVEMENTS.

This Company are not aware of any real improvement yet effected in such instruments, which is not to be found in their organs. In power and smoothness of working stops; variety and attractiveness of solo stops; exceeding refinement of tone; delicacy of soft stops; volume of louder stops; equality and character throughout each stop; smoothness, ease and exactness of action; durability and perfection of workmanship, and elegance and finish of, cases, the excellence of their organs is comparatively greater to-day than ever before, and must be recognized by every competent judge who sufficiently compares and examines.

WARRANT.

Every organ made by this Company is fully warranted, and the warrant will be voluntarily made good if there is any occasion. It should be remembered that the warrant of a maker who wishes to evade it is of little value, because it is practically impossible to enforce it. Hence makers of poorest organs boldly warrant them.

PRICES AND TERMS.

But while it is commonly conceded that the Mason & Hamlin Organs are the best instruments of their class in the world, it is often supposed that the prices are much higher than those of inferior organs. This is an error. The net prices of these organs are but little higher than those of instruments of greatly inferior workmanship and value. Having the largest and most completely furnished factory in the world in this line, with experience, machinery, and facilities accumulated and perfected in the manufacture of nearly one hundred thousand organs, they are able to produce organs at very much less cost than would be possible without such facilities. They are thus able to sell at prices which are not greatly more than those of the most inferior work. Difference in price is small; difference in value very great.

These organs are now sold not only for cash, but also for easy payments; or are rented until rent pays for an organ. An organ of small size, but of best quality, may be obtained on payment of $7.20 per quarter (three months) for ten quarters. Larger sizes at proportionate rates.

CASH PRICES.—Smallest size, $54 each. Five octave double reed organs, $100; with nine stops, $108; in very rich case, $114; new style, polished Jet and Gold Bronze Finish, $135, etc.

Illustrated Catalogues, with illustrations from photographs, and Price Lists, sent free. Persons writing for them are invited to send names of other parties who might like them, to whom they will be also sent free.

[illegible] PARKER, D. D.

[illegible] xxiii.

[illegible] is dead, [illegible] to mourn and to [illegible] was not Abraham [illegible] Yes; but he [illegible] too, and his [illegible] his heart hard. [illegible] old, [illegible] It [illegible] with those [illegible] tion in tears which never came during all the battle. Such an instance as this goes far toward proving that Abraham's faith was as human as his sorrow. If we can join him in grief, why not in faith? If we thought him nearly divine on Moriah, we may see how human he is in Hebron. As for ourselves, we can fight resolutely; we can suffer patiently? We are heroes whilst the sound of the trumpet is maddening the air; what are we when laid up as wounded soldiers? The patient, uncomplaining sufferer, who for months or years has been waiting for her Lord without ever suggesting that His steps were tardy, may have as strong a faith as Abraham had when he held the knife over his son. All the world's faith is not historic. To-day has its chronicles of trust and patience and hope quite as instructive and thrilling as those which are recorded in the Bible. It is too early to read them though, or to comprehend all their sad yet glorious meaning; but every syllable is accepted and honored of God. We often wish that we were as good as the holy men of old; it will be a poor thing, however, if we are not better than the best man in any earlier dispensation. Among all that were born of woman there had not appeared a greater than John the Baptist, yet the least in the kingdom of heaven was greater than he. So may we be greater than Abraham, by reason of Jesus Christ's promise that we should not only have life, but have it "more abundantly." That some of the older generations might have greater gifts is not denied; but none of them had opportunities of having greater graces. They had special inspiration, we have the general baptism of the Spirit; they saw the unrisen light, we see the sun in a cloudless zenith. My opinion is that God never had better children upon the earth than He has at this moment; never was there such force of life, never such loyalty to the kingdom of heaven. We do not, then, set forth Abraham as a divine model; we call up his history to see its points common with our own, to study the unchangeableness of God, and to take an estimate of the development of human destiny.

Look at Abraham buying a grave! True, he buys a field and a cave, and all the trees that were in the field, and in all the borders round about; but expand the list as we may, it was all for the sake of a place to bury his dead. The good man is forced into such commerce as well as the bad; the best man of his age is here bargaining for burial ground. I need not remind a Christian congregation of the advantage which a good man enjoys under such circumstances. To him the place of Christian sepulchre is not a wilderness given over to the desolation of everlasting winter; it is a garden, full of roots, that shall come up in infinite beauty in the summer that is yet to be. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death and hath brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel." The law of mortality will operate until the close of this dispensation; all lower life has been given over to death; but death itself has been devoted by an unchangeable covenant to be destroyed by life. "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." Meanwhile, we require graves. Our houses are overshadowed by a temporary destroyer; we are smitten and impoverished by the angel of death.

"From the stars of heaven, and the flowers of [illegible]
From the pageant of power, and the voice of [illegible]
[illegible] the mists of morn on the mountain's [illegible]
[illegible]'s song, and affection's vow,
[illegible] that o'er which the soul bears
[illegible] one record—passing away."

[illegible] manner in which the children of Heth answered Abraham [illegible] the most apprecia[illegible] "Hear us, my Lord; [illegible] prince among us; [illegible] of our sepulchres bury [illegible] none of us shall with[illegible] his sepulchre, [illegible] bury thy dead." [illegible] strokes of pa[illegible] of the hu[illegible] that the [illegible] is an infal[illegible]

[illegible] built. Never despair of any man who is capable of generous impulses. Put no man down as incurably bad who will share his one loaf with the hungry or give shelter to a lost little one. Poor and crude may be his formal creed, very dim and pitifully inadequate his view of scholastic theology; but there is a root in him which may be developed into much beauty and fruitfulness. For this reason I cannot overlook the genial humanity and simple gracefulness of this act of the Hittites.

Man's final requirement of man is a grave. We may go down to the grave in one or two very different ways. Our grave may be respected, or it may be passed by as a dishonored spot. We may live so as to be much missed, or we may live so as to leave the least possible vacancy; whichever way it be, we should remember that there is no repentance in the grave—the dead man cannot obliterate the past.

Abraham mourned for Sarah. What then? Consecration to God's purposes does not eradicate our deep human love; nay rather it heightens, refines, sanctifies it! Every father is more a father in proportion as he loves and serves the great Father in heaven. We should be on our guard against any system of religion or philosophy that seeks to cool the fervor of natural and lawful love. It may be very majestic not to shed tears; but it is most inhuman, most ungodly. We have heard of Abraham mourning, of David crying bitterly, of the Savior allowing His feet to be washed with a sinner's tears, and of Jesus Christ weeping; but who ever heard of the devil being broken down in pity or mournfulness? Christianity educates our humanity, not deadens it; and when we are in tears it helps us to see through them nearly into heaven.—The Complete Preacher.

What Churches Ought To Do.

There are two great things which a church ought always to have, namely, an arm to gather with, a bosom to carry in. I want to speak to you members of the church now not merely about the Sabbath-school, but concerning every other part of our soul-seeking and soul-saving work. I want you all to try in the name of God, and in the energy of the Holy Gost, to be the arm to gather with. "He gathereth the lambs with his arm." They are scattered now, the blood-bought, the ordained of God unto eternal life, are scattered hither and thither and know not the Lord. We are bounded to gather them from all places into which they have wandered. They will not come of themselves. The mass of them despise even the outward means of grace. We want a strong arm to gather with, so that they may be compelled to come in. The church's arm is partly the ministry of the Word. Preaching should be attractive enough to gather the people together, for how shall they believe on him of whom they have not heard, and how shall they hear if they will not gather around to the preacher? The preacher's voice is to gather, but then amid such teeming multitudes the few preachers can never be expected to be the arm of the Lord to gather alone. We must gather the young by Sabbath-schools, and endeavor to return them by the distribution and sale of good books and other pure literature; the colporteur has, in this respect, his work to do to gather in the villages and hamlets. We must gather them by visiting from house to house; you tract distributors, your city missionaries, your Bible women, these must be the arm of the church to gather many; still the work will not be done unless we have more help than all these. Every Christian must be a gatherer; each one gathering his one. In the power of the Holy Spirit must all seek out the wanderers. If you can not bring sheaves, you must glean ear by ear; if you can not preach to hundreds, you must endeavor to gather individuals by your holy conversation, by your pious lives, by the orderly ruling of your household, and using every occasion that God gives you to speak a good word for Christ. Gather. I give you this word, all of you dear members of the church, as your watchword. Gather ye, gather ye, the people together.

But the church's second work is to carry in her bosom. Those who are brought to Christ need nurture, [illegible], example, edification. "[illegible]," saith He, and yet "Feed my lambs." The [illegible] should try to do this, suiting his discourse to the weakest and feeblest lamb; but since he is but one, and taketh not upon himself the responsibility of others, the whole church should try to be a nursing mother unto those who are born unto her. Beloved, carry the young converts; take the convinced in and pity them, cheer them, fight against their despondencies, battle with their doubts, enlighten their ignorance, and so bear them in your bosom. You will be Christlike if you do so. It is the church's work to imitate her great Lord, and let the beloved of Christ be carried in her bosom of affection. May your arm always have strength to labor, and your heart have love wherewith to cherish; may this church never lack for arms that shall encompass the neighboring population, and lack for a heart that shall be warm toward those who love our Lord Jesus Christ. Hand and heart must go together; by those two our work must be fully done.—Spurgeon.

Little Jean's Letter.

FROM THE FRENCH OF PAUL FEVAL.

Jean made up his mind to write a letter to the good Lord. In France, when the peasants and poor people want something very much, they not only ask the good Lord for it, but they write a letter to Him; and one can often see poor women and children, with pale sad faces, entering the churches and laying a little letter on the altar, feeling that if He sees it there day and night, He will be sure to remember their petition. And I would like to know if, in all the literature of all the ages, there could be anything more touching, and sweet, and simple, than these letters to the good Lord.

Jean was six years old, and he wore a pair of trousers, all worn out at the knees. His hair was blonde and curly, and so thick and beautiful, and there was enough of it to have dressed the heads of two lovely ladies. He had a pair of great blue eyes, that tried to smile sometimes, though they had already wept so often. He had a little jacket quite nicely cut, but all falling into pieces, and on his right foot a girl's shoe, and on the other a boy's, both of them too long and large for him, alas! and too full of holes, and they turned up in front and wanted heels behind. He was hungry and cold, for it was on a winter's night, and he had been fasting since the day before at noon, when the idea came to him of writing a letter to the good Lord.

You are wondering how he could do it, poor little Jean! It is true he could not write any more than he could read.

Far away in the quarter of Gr[illegible] Caillou on the corner of an avenue, and not far from the Park, was the small cabin of a public writer. The "editor," as he was called in the quarter, was an old soldier, rather bad-tempered, though with a good heart—and ah! he was not rich, and besides, was so unfortunate as not to be quite maimed and wounded enough to get admission into the Hotel des Invalides, where all the old soldiers are sent who have no legs or arms to speak of.

Well, Jean saw him through the dirty windows of his cabin, smoking his pipe and waiting for business, so he went in and said:

"Good-day; I have come to have a letter written."

"It's ten sous," replied Pere Bouin; for this old warrior, who was perhaps the hundred thousandth part of the glory of a marshal of France, was called Pere Bouin. Jean, who had no cap to take off, pulled the front lock of his curly hair, and making a bow, said politely! "Then, excuse me!" and he opened the door to go out; but Papa Bouin thought him such a nice little fellow, he said to him:

"Art thou the son of a soldier, little one?"

"No," replied little Jean; "I am mamma's son, who is all alone."

"Ah!" said the "editor," "I know; and thou hast not ten sous?"

"Oh! no; I have no sous at all."

"Thy mother, neither! Ah! one can see that. You want a letter written so as to have something to make soup—eh! little one?"

"Yes," replied Jean, "exactly."

"Advance! For ten lines and a half a sheet of paper I shall not be much the poorer."

Jean obeyed. Papa Bouin arranged his paper, dipped his pen in the ink, and traced in a fine schoolmaster's hand: "Paris, the 17th January, 1857." Then on the next line, "To Monsieur"— "What is the name, bibi?"

"Whose?" asked Jean.

"Why, the Monsieur's of course."

"What Monsieur?"

"Why, the individual for the soup."

Jean understood this time, and replied:

"It is not a Monsieur."

"Ah! well, for a lady, then!"

"No, not for that either."

"Nom de bleu!" cried Papa Bouin, "dost thou not know to whom thou wishest to write a letter?"

"Ah! yes indeed," replied the child.

"Well, then, say who it is, and hurry thyself."

Little Jean grew crimson. The fact is, it is not so easy to apply to public writers for such correspondence as his. However, he mustered up his courage, and said: "It is to the good Lord to whom I want to send a letter." Papa Bouin did not laugh. He laid down his pen and took his pipe out of his mouth. "Little one," said he severely, "I don't suppose thou meanest to make fun of an old soldier of the line. Thou art too little to strike. But wheel! Turn to the left and go!"

Little Jean obeyed, and turned on his heels—I mean on those of his feet, for his shoes had none—and started to go; but seeing him so sweet and obedient, Papa Bouin changed his mind a second time, and looked at him more closely.

"Nom de—nom de—nom de—nom!" he muttered. "There is, after all, no end to want in Paris. What is thy name, bibi?"

"Jean."

"Jean what?"

"Nothing but Jean."

Papa Bouin felt his eyes smarting but he shrugged his shoulders. "And what dost thou want to say to thy good Lord?"

"I want to tell him that mamma has been asleep since yesterday at four o'clock, and I want him to wake her up, for I cannot."

The old soldier's heart felt numb, for he was afraid he understood what was the matter. However, he went on asking: "But what was that thou saidst about soup, a little while ago?"

"Oh! well," replied the child, "because she wants some. Before she went to sleep, mamma gave me the last piece of bread."

"And she—what has she eaten?"

"She has said for two days, 'I am not hungry.'"

"What didst thou do when thou didst try to wake her?"

"Oh! well, I kissed her, as I always do."

"Did she breathe?"

Jean smiled, and his smile made him look so pretty. "I don't know," replied he; "don't mothers always breathe?"

Papa Bouin turned away his head, for two large tears were running down his cheeks. He did not answer the child's question, but he said, in a voice that trembled a little:

"When thou didst kiss her, didst thou notice nothing?"

"Yes; she was cold, it is so cold at home."

'And she shivered a little, didn't she?'

'Oh! no she looked beautifully, beautifully. Her two hands, that did not move, were crossed on her breast, and were so white! And her head was thrown back on the pillow, so that in the opening in her shut eyelids she seemed as if she was looking up into heaven.'

Papa Bouin thought to himself, 'I have envied the rich, I who eat and drink as much as I want; and here is one dead of hunger—of hunger.' He called the child, who went to him, and he put him on his knees and said to him gently: 'Little one, thy letter is written, and sent and received. Take me to thy mother.'

'I will be very glad to do so. But why are you crying?' Jean asked with astonishment.

'I am not crying,' replied the old soldier, who was smothering him with kisses and covering him with tears. 'But thou wilt cry, little Jean, poor dear. Dost thou know I love thee as though thou wert my own son? It is foolish, perhaps. But, ah! I had a mother once, also, a long time ago to be sure, but I seem to see her on her death-bed, where, as she was leaving me, she said: 'Bouin, be an honest man and a good Christian.' There was a picture of our Savior hanging by the side of her bed—a little picture that only cost two sous—which seemed to smile, and which I loved, and whose memory has come back to my heart again. And I have been an honest man; but as to a good Christian—ah! me,' Then he rose, still holding the child in his arms and pressing him to his heart, and added, as though he were speaking to some invisible person, 'Behold, old mother—behold, and be happy. My friends may laugh at me if they like; but where thou hast gone I want to go too; and I will take this little one, poor child, to you; and he shall never leave me till then, because his rascally letter, which was not even written, has received two answers; it has given him a father and found for me a heart.'

* * * *

The poor woman, who had died from want, was never awakened on this earth. Who was she? I never knew, nor what had been the martyrdom of her life.

But somewhere in Paris there is a man, still young, who is an 'editor,' but not in a cabin like Papa Bouin. He writes many eloquent things, and you all know his name. But we will call him simply Jean, as in the old days.

Papa Bouin is now a happy old man, always honest, and moreover a good Christian. He takes great pride in the success of his 'little one,' as he still sometimes calls his illustrious adopted son, and he said, for it was he who told me this little story: "I know not who is the postman who delivers that kind of letters, but I know one thing—they always reach their address in heaven!"—Helen Stanley, in Baldwin's Monthly.

The Law and the Gospel.

Paul uses these words: "The glorious Gospel of the blessed God." Look at the glory of the Gospel as compared with the Law. The divine law is holy, just, and good. Nothing can be said against it. It is worthy of its Author. Its every command is right, benevolent, for man's good. The perfect keeping of it would banish sin. It is never violated in heaven. But thundered in the ears of a world of sinners, how does it appear? What hope does it give? What mercy does it offer? What refuge has it for the guilty? Question its enactments and penalties, and what do you hear? "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them." The law, instead of saving sinners, condemns them. As the measures of sin, it shows its extent. By its holy light the law shows the turpitude of sin. By its restraints it shows the strength and violence of sin.

But, turning from the Law to the Gospel, we see a peculiar glory in the latter. But does the Gospel abolish or supersede the law? Not a bit of it. Nay, it establishes the law, by conceding all that it claims; by making provision in the atoning sacrifice of Christ, for meeting all its claims; by implanting in those who believe, the spirit of true obedience. There is no antagonism between the law and the gospel; they are in perfect harmony. But what a glory there is in the gospel for a world of sinners! It offers mercy to the guilty, hope to the despairing, salvation to the lost, life to the dead! It proclaims amnesty and pardon to every soul that will believe in Jesus. How gloriously, in God's plan of recovering grace, the gospel supplements and fulfills the law, and becomes strong where the latter was weak. Smitten by the lightnings of Sinai, we die; bathed in the crimson stream of Calvary, we live. Salvation is not by the law, but "according to the glorious gospel of the blessed God."—Christian Secretary.

Frozen Kindness.

This world is full of kindness that was never spoken, and that is not much better than no kindness at all. The fuel in the stove makes the room warm, but there are great piles of fallen trees lying on the hills where nobody can get them; these do not make anybody warm. You might freeze to death for want of wood in plain sight of these fallen trees if you had no means of getting the wood home and making a fire with it. Just so in a family; love is just what makes parents and children, and brothers and sisters happy, but if they take care to never say a word about it—if they keep it a profound secret; as if it were a crime—they will not be much happier than if there was not any love among them; the house will seem cold even in summer, and if you live there you envy the poor dog when anybody call him "poor fellow."

Good Advice.

At the installation of a minister, the following advice was given to the congregation. The speaker said;

"Dear brethren, I suggest that you pray for your minister daily; guard his reputation carefully; hear him preach weekly; listen to the Word wakefully; labor with him pathetically, both individually and collectively; support the Sabbath school heartily; subscribe for him liberally; pay him promptly; give him a bit of meat and a ball of butter occasionally; call on him frequently, but tarry briefly; great him cordially, but not rudely; and may the God of all grace bless you abundantly, and add unto your daily such as shall be saved eternally."

The cotton-seed oil business is growing rapidly in the South. There are seven large mills in New Orleans, and others in Baton Rouge, Shreveport, Natchez, Vicksbury, in Arkansas, Louisville, Memphis, Nashville, and even Chicago. The oil mills utilize the short staple which adheres to the seed, converting it into batting, blankets and other articles. The cake, or meal, which remains after the oil has been expressed is valuable as feed for domestic animals and for fertilizing land, and is worth $20 a ton. A ton of seed produces 20 gallons of oil, worth $3 or $3.50.

Despondency.

The most perilous hour of a person's life is when he is tempted to despond. The man who loses his courage loses all; there is no more hope of him than of a dead man; but it matters not how poor he may be, how much pushed by circumstances, how much deserted by friends, how much lost to the world; if he only keeps his courage, holds up his head, works on with his hands and with unconquerable will determines to be and to do what becomes a man, all will be well. It is nothing outside of him that kills, but what is within, that makes or unmakes.

Birds and other animals when collected together have curious technical names. It is proper to say, a covey of partridges, a nide of pheasants, a wisp of snips, a bevy of quails, a flight of doves, a muster of peacocks, a seige of herons, a brood of grouse, a stand of plover, a watch of nightingales, a swarm of bees, a flock of geese, a cast of hawks, a herd of swine, a skulk of foxes, a pack of wolves, a drove of cattle, a herd of buffalo, a troop of monkeys, a pride of lions, a sleuth of bears, a shoal of herrings, and a bevy of school-girls.

It is said that the pulpit needs broadening out. This may be; but we think that in many respects it needs narrowing down, at least until it confines itself within limits concerning which it is written, "Thus saith the Lord." We want the faith preached more, and the opinions of Dr. A., B., and C., preached less; we want, in short, bread instead of stones, facts instead of fancies; truth instead of guesses. The faith once delivered never can grow old. Let the pulpit preach this, and its influence never can wane.—Churchman.

The New York Tribune publishes an exposure of the Colorado stone man, which had been on exhibition as the petrified remains of a human being of heroic size. The "man" was made in Elkland, Pennsylvania, by George Hull, the maker of the Cardiff Giant. The figure was composed of ground stone, ground bones, clay, plaster, blood, eggs and other materials, shaped and baked in a kiln. It is said Hull spent $10,000 or $12,000 in this scheme. P. T. Barnum was at the bottom of the fraud.

Rev. Mr. Henderson, in his Common school Report for the State of Kentucky, says that the colored people of that State have built in three years, at their own expense, 287 school houses, and have raised, by local enterprises, $21,000 for the better payment of their teachers. More than one fifth of their children are in school. He says considering their resources they have surpassed the whites in their school enterprise, and recommends legislation to help them.

The Southern Evangelist says Rev. George Muller, of Bristol, England, spent nine days in Charleston, S. C., recently, giving twelve sermons and lectures. His audiences at the white churches were shamefully small, but at each of his three services in the colored churches, thousands attended, many being unable to gain admittance.

Yes, of course, there always will be a few tape-line brethren, ready to measure the length of a sermon, an exhortation, a prayer, or an editorial; but whether they have any means of knowing the depth and weight of Gospel service, nobody who is busy in the Master's work ever cares to know. Tape-lines are harmless. They can be carried in the pocket, cost but a trifle, and last a long time. Plummets are more expensive.—Methodist Recorder.

Political Justice.

We fear the ethics of politics and reform policy as much as the practices prevailing under them. It is very sad to perceive that a standard of successful cunning, intolerance and injustice is fast superceding the principles of public action instituted by our ancestors. Among these evil innovations, may be classed that of approving or condoning any thing that may be done by ons of our own political partisans, while we denounce as unpardonable the same thing in a political opponent. Of this we propose to offer an example. Mr. Reagan, of Texas, and other members of Congress from the Southern States recently advocated a bill making compensation for certain postal services rendered in the Southern States during the war. It appeared from the citation of confederate records, that Mr. Reagan, then Post Master General of the Confederacy, had addressed a circular to his postmasters, ordering them to take possession of federal post-offices. It appeared farther, that the Confederate government hed made full or partial payment to railroad, and other postal carriers, during the period for which these claims were presented. In reply to these allegations Mr. Reagan said, that he had entirely forgotten his own circular, and, with other Southern members, that the lapse of years had occasioned a general oblivion of the whole matter. They declared themselves incapable of asking compensation, where payment had been once made, and moved that the bill should be recommitted for correction in this respect.

We intend no imputation upon the motives or memory of these gentlemen. We accept this disclaimer of any dishonest purpose, on the part of men whose personal character renders the perpetration of such a wrong improbable.

In the State of Louisiana, there are four citizens, natives or Southern men of long residence in the State. They are surrounded by all the responsibilities which render reputation dear to themselves and their children. They are as reputable in their private life and dealings as Mr. Reagan and his associates. These citizens have been prosecuted, in one case to conviction, upon a charge of having made an official return, in which the poll of a Parish was forged and published as true when in fact it had never been cast as [illegible] them.

These gentlemen declare that this [illegible] they were alike ignorant and innocent of its perpetration. In vindicating this assertion they allege the following reasons:

1st. That it was their duty to canvass and complete the whole vote of the State cast at a federal and State election, and that the validity of their returns has been investigated by Congress and inquired into at various sessions of the Grand Jury, without imputation of official illegality in any particular whatever.

2d. That in the performance of this duty, they examined the polls of some 160,000 votes, cast in fifty-seven parishes, and represented by some seven hundred poll lists, certificates and other vouchers. That they entrusted the custody and clerical compilation of these votes and vouchers to such experts and employees as are necessary for the [illegible] of such services.

3d. That the particular part claimed to have been forged and [illegible] by them or by their order, [illegible] so small a number of votes [illegible] admission or exclusion from the [illegible] compilation could have [illegible] no difference in the National [illegible] result, nor did the returns [illegible] local officer promote in any [illegible] the interests of the Board. [illegible] poll might have been set [illegible] the undisputed [illegible] of the Board, without [illegible] responsibility whatever.

[illegible] while these officials [illegible] interested in maintaining [illegible] integrity of their [illegible] State returns, their [illegible] were interested [illegible] them. That they [illegible] to do so has been [illegible] an offer of one [illegible] dollars to these [illegible] their report, and [illegible] State vote to [illegible] political oppo- [illegible] refused. 3d. [illegible] access to the [illegible] Board. [illegible] the entire report of the National and State elections.

5. That these four citizens of Louisiana were not only bound by the common moral and social obligations already stated, but were under the stress of an official oath which imposed penalties of the most serious character upon any official direlections which they might commit. Their political opponents on the other hand have set up an irresponsible and outside investigation and returns of the same election, which they returned in favor of their own party, without any similar obligations of oath or penalty of derelictions whatever.

These four citizens of Louisiana therefore say:

1. That they were wholly unaware, when they signed the total compilation, of which the alleged error was an immaterial part, that such an error existed.

2. That their political opponents, the prosecutors, were aware of such alleged error, and have sought to employ it to their own party advantage.

They appeal to the public to say whether they should be dishonored by an ignominious punishment, because an error, innocent, insignificant, and injurious to them alone, should have inadvertently come under their official signature. They liken it to the confiscation of a ship and cargo, for some box of segars, or case of brandy, smuggled aboard without the knowledge and against the interest, of the officers or owners of the vessel.

The application of these two cases of alleged wrong may be summed up thus: Hon. Mr. Reagan and colleagues say that they once knew, but had utterly forgotten, the act imputed to them as fraudulent.

The four citizens of Louisiana declare that they were wholly ignorant of the offense attributed to them. That while its commission could have done them no political good, it might have been personally and politically ruinous to them. It is an example of the political ethics of the period, that while the plea of forgetfulness is accepted in the one case, that of utter ignorance is disregarded in the other. Public justice should, in our opinion, admit or exclude both together.

The Holy Spirit.

The Holly Spirit is to men morally what life is to them physically. The body is the instrument of life and the soul is the instrument of the Holy Spirit. How the life-power handles and develops the body we can not tell. No man can tell where the inertia of matter ends and where the activity of life begins. Neither need we expect to understand how the Holy Spirit works.

Walker, in his Doctrine of the Holy Spirit, gives some excellent discussions. We give his thoughts but not his language.

The Holy Spirit is the third person in the Trinity, and his agency and operations are manifest in the kingdoms of Nature, Providence and Grace. In Bible language He is represented as creating and upholding; as speaking and searching; as striving, reproving, convincing, helping, guiding, testifying, bearing witness and working. He is grieved, quenched, tempted, resisted, blasphemed, and sinned against. All this proves Him to be a person. Divine attributes are ascribed to Him. He is represented as eternal, omnipotent, omniscient, and omnipresent. Divine works were performed by Him, divine titles are given Him, and divine worship is paid Him. Therefore He is a divine person. He stands corelated with the Father and the Son in the God-head.

The Church is commanded to baptize "in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost."

The relative place of the Holy Spirit in the economy of the divine mind may be seen by studying the human soul. Man was created in the image of God. Therefore if we rightly study the human soul we shall catch glimpses of the divine mind. Again, all mind is the same, whether finite or infinite, and we rise from what we know to the unknown. Hence we argue by analogy from the known operations of the human mind up to the secret workings of the divine mind.

There is a trinity of forces in the human soul. First, there is the unknowable substance which we call the soul, which can neither be seen nor understood, and yet which is the basis of all life and activity. It is that "in which are all things" of our life. It is the Father-substance of the soul. It is to man what the Father of the God-head to divinity. In the second place the soul has its thoughts and words by which it reveals itself to the world. The soul is known only by its thoughts. [illegible] clothed in language either [illegible] and given to the [illegible] and studied, and [illegible] with God. "In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God and the Word was God. * * The Word was made flesh and dwelt among men." "In Him dwelt all the fullness of the God-head bodily." The divine Logos, or Christ, incarnated the divine mind and represents it to us just as words spoken or written represent the human mind. There is nothing more mysterious in the one than in the other. A man puts his thoughts in words and they are printed and carried to the utmost parts of the earth. Certainly God could as well incarnate his thoughts and character in the man Christ Jesus.

In the third place, the Father-substance of the soul not only has thoughts which may be embodied in language, but we detect another power, namely, that of Spirit. This is not the soul itself, neither is it thought nor a faculty of the soul. It is a power which perceives thought and feeling, and is a knowing personality of the soul. It is to the soul what the observer is to the observed, and sometimes as the agent to the instrument. This personality of the mind is spoken of in the Bible under the name of the Spirit; and is also made to illustrate God's Spirit, (1 Cor. 2: 10). The spirit (man's spirit) searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. For what man knoweth the things of man save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man but the Spirit of God. Man's spirit is the human power by which are all things human; God's Spirit is the divine power by which are all things divine.

Sunday School Conference.

Rev. Dr. J. B. Ford, our Sunday School Agent, for the South, spent last week in New Orleans holding a Sunday School Conference with the pastors, officers and teachers of our Schools in this city. This Conference is but preliminary to similar meetings to be held in this city in the near future.

The Conference began in Wesley Chapel on Monday night, and the evening was occupied by Dr. Ford who gave an interesting and able address. He stated that the Church now fully recognizes the Sunday School as a most important auxiliary in the salvation of the world. The pulpit is first, but he thought and claimed that the Sunday School was next. The Sunday School is not an appendage to the Church but a part of it. The pulpit and the Sunday School labor to accomplish the same work. The text-book—the Bible—is the same, and the common object is the salvation of souls. As the object of the Sunday School is to study the Bible it follows that the entire Church should have a share in the work. The Sunday School work is the most promising in good results, because it has very largely to do with the young, who can be most easily effected for good.

On Tuesday night the first subject discussed was the Home and the Sunday School. Dr. Ford led in this discussion, and he showed that at home the child received its first and most lasting impressions. Nothing can take the place of home. Home influences are the most potent for evil or good. Next to home influences are those of the Sunday School. It is easy to see how home can help the Sunday School. Sunday School work should be a subject of conversation at home. The officers and teachers should be kindly spoken of, the lesson should be studied at home, and encouraging words should be spoken to the children. Rev. Marcus Dale followed with some excellent and pertinent remarks, addressed specially to his congregation, a large number of whom was present.

The next discussion was on the the Pastor and Sunday School. Rev. Christopher Hunt led, and urged that the Pastor's first duty to the Sunday School was to be present at every session, and his next and constant duty was to see that the teachers and officers attend to their works. Rev. Stephen Priestly followed with a few well-timed and earnest remarks, giving his own experience in conducting Bible study in the Schools of his Churches. Dr. Ford spoke on this subject also, giving some good advice to the pastors. The pastor should study the lesson before Sunday comes. He should study how to make his Sunday School a success. He should get the best helps. He should pray for his officers and teachers. He should take his Sunday School into the pulpit, and tell when it meets and urge all to attend. This announcement should be made every Sunday. He should preach on the importance of this work at least twice each year, as the Discipline directs. He should explain fully to the people the object and work of our Sunday School Union and take the annual collection. In his pastoral work he should talk to the parents and children about the Sunday School and invite and urge all to come. He should see that the catechism is taught regularly and systematically in the School. He should see that the right kind of literature is in the libraries.

On Wednesday night the subject of Temperance and the Sunday School was discussed. Bro. Priestly was to have read an essay but he was unavoidably absent. Dr. Ford made some introductory remarks and was followed by the editor of the SOUTHWESTERN who, after stating that intemperance was the most prevalent sin among us, showed how the Sunday School could be made a powerful agency to overcome this great evil. Capt. Kitwood, from St. Louis being present, was introduced and made a stirring address. He said our hope was in God. He told of his own conversion. He was a sea Captain, and was a gambling, drinking and blaspheming infidel and atheist, but in answer to the prayer of his mother God converted him, and when Christ went in, every form of sin, including drinking, went out.

On Thursday night a Conference was held in Ames Church, and Dr. Ford addressed the goodly number of Sunday School workers present on the importance and value of Sunday School work and its relation to the prosperity of the Church. The officers and teachers were especially urged to make the salvation of the children the end of all other work. He urged that it was the duty for all to attend. He was followed by Dr. J. H. McCarty, who dwelt on the great importance of taking hold of the youth and saving them while they can be easily influenced and brought to Christ.

Another Missionary to the Colored People.

Among our visitors this week was Rev. John T. Doescher. This brother is a Lutheran Missionary to the colored people of the Southern States. He is appointed by the Evangelical Lutheran Synodical Conference of North America. This Conference has for many years been sending large missionary appropriations to Germany, as well as to the destitute portions of the Northern and Western States. Of late it has determined to send Missionaries to the colored people of the South, and Mr. Doescher is the first appointee. He began his work in Little Rock, Ark., and having established a mission, a second Missionary was placed in charge of it. There is a large local Lutheran Missionary Society in this city, representing wealth and influence. This Society has appointed a committee to co-operate with Mr. Doescher; and the plan is to establish Sunday and week-day schools. We welcome this new evangelizing force to our city, and shall note with pleasure its advance and rejoice in its success. Mr. Doescher is the guest of Rev. Mr. Ilmenstein, 365 St. Andrew street.

The M. E. Church, South, in the North.

Rev. Dr. McFerrin, Missionary Secretary of the M. E. Church, South, calls upon that Church to stand manfully by its men and work on the Pacific Coast. The work has been injured by the return of ministers who have been sent there. To man that work Dr. McFerrin says:

I make this proposition: Let the whole Church in the West pray God to raise up from among their own people men who shall be called to the work of the ministry. When your delegates from the West reach here next General Conference, their voice will be heard. Don't let a word now and then discourage you. You have legions of friends here who rejoice in your success, and and will still cling to you in your labor of love.

Rev. G. Gilman, of the North Georgia Conference of the Southern Church, makes a like plea for the work of his Church in the North West.

We wish the M. E. Church, South, all possible success in her work in the North.

Sunday Schools.

We publish elsewhere a brief report of the meetings held in this city last week, by Dr. Ford, our Sunday School Agent for the South. Previous engagements made it impossible for us to attend all the meetings. We are pleased to welcome our Sunday School Agent to our city and the Southwest, and hope that nothing will prevent the carrying out of the plan to hold Sunday School Conferences at prominent places in Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas, in the near future.

The following, from Dr. Vincent, calls special attention to our school system of instruction. Read it carefully:

The "school system" is a series of lessons devised to supplement the regular International Lessons, and thus meet a felt want. The system for 1877 was very widely adopted. The system for 1878 comprises, First, the committing to memory of the "titles" and "golden texts" of the International Sunday School Lessons for the current year. Second, a review and written examination on the International Lessons by means of fifty questions, which will be furnished in blanks at the end of the year. Third, the committing to memory of fifty verses of Holy Scriptures (Exodus 20: 1–21; Numbers 6: 22–27; Psalms 15; Matthew 13: 18–23; Matthew 13; 45, 46; Matthew 32: 34–40; Revelation 20: 11–13); lessons in Old Testament history and geography, three doctrinal statements, ten temperance lessons and three church hymns.

I sincerely hope that schools which have not used the "school system" will immediately order Magazine Series No. 57, and No. 80. Forward twelve cents (which will pay for two tracts) to Nelson & Phillips, 805 Broadway, New York—or New Orleans; or Hitchcock & Walden, Cincinnati, Ohio.

To Whom it may Concern.

One Wm. G. Hilton has been in this district exercising the functions of a deacon in the Methodist Episcopal Church. He represents that his wife is dead, and that he is anxious to get into the traveling connection. He has his credentials, signed by Bishop Haven, at Knoxville, Tenn. I presume he is now in Texas. Upon inquiring of Rev. J. R. Hughes, of the Holston Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, I find that the said Hilton was regularly expelled from the Holston Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, and that his wife in not dead.

Local Preachers.

We publish elsewhere the course of study prescribed for our Local Preachers, and trust that the Presiding Elders will bring the matter before each Quarterly Conference. No Quarterly Conference ought to grant or renew a Local Preacher's license without the studies laid down are mastered. Local Preachers are valuable helpers in the ministry, provided they prepare themselves to instruct the people. The time has passed in our Church when men can expect to occupy our pulpits who will not study.

The United States Minister to Japan, sends to the Department of the State a budget of despatches showing the steady progress of Japan in modern civilization:

The third annual report of the Ministry of Education for 1875 shows that within an area of 114,000 square miles, with a population of 34,000,000, there were 24,275 elementary schools, employing 44,000 teachers, and having an attendance of 1,926,000 scholars, of whom only one-fourth were females. The income of the public school fond for the year was $6,238,096, of which $140,000 was by voluntary contributions, and the expenditures were only $4,210,473, leaving a handsome balance. An agricultural college was inaugurated at Tokio on the 24th of January last, under the auspices of the Mikado, who pronounced the opening address. The college boasts of a staff of foreign teachers, of whom one, Dr. J. A. McBride, delivered a short address in reply to the Mikado. Another significant illustration of the readiness of the Japanese to adopt foreign discoveries is found in the fact that after a series of highly successful experiments, the telephone has been introduced into practical use under direction of the Japanese government.

The New York Christian Advocate gives pen sketches of the members of the Book Committee, which held its late meeting in Cincinnati. Of Dr. Brush, the representative from the Southwest, it says:

The Rev. Wm. Brush, D.D., who now resides in Texas, and represents the Seventh District, is a native of Connecticut. He received a fine academic course at Amenia Seminary, New York, and completed his education at Yale, graduating with honor; entered the New York Conference in 1857, and the next year was transferred to Upper Iowa Conference, filling important charges, and representing that body at the General Conference of 1868 and 1872. The doctor is a man of fine parts, highly cultivated mind, spiritual, full of persistent energy, and genial. He has been eminently successful as a pastor, presiding elder, and at the head of a college. He is now doing valuable work for our Church in the far-off Texas, and, though distant, is not forgotten.

Rev. C. W. S. Woods, Pastor of the M. E. Church of Brownsville, will deliver a lecture at Mason, Tipton county, Tenn., on April 12th. Subject: Place of the Colored Man in American History.

J. P. PRICE.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. Stephen Priestley, of this city: "Our first quarterly love-feast, at Pleasant Plains Church, was held on the 20th inst. Quite a large congregation was present and the members are much encouraged by the prospects of the year before them. The Sunday-school, which is one of the largest in the city, has a Missionary Society in successful operation."

Rev. Isaac Hayward, Baton Rouge, La.: "Our church and Sunday school are both doing well. The Missionary Society organized in the latter is a success. There has been one recent conversion. May the Lord direct and bless us."

Rev. E. P. Albert, Houma, La.: "We have commenced a protracted meeting with most encouraging prospects. There have been so far four conversions, and thirty seekers are at the altar, and many other persons indicate that they are under deep religious conviction. We pray that the Lord may carry on the work gloriously. Truly the harvest is great, but the laborers few."

Rev. P. E. Bardwell, Fayette, Miss.: "The Church here, which has long been in a lukewarm state, shows signs of reviving. There have been several recent accessions and other indications of religious interest in the congregation. Rev. Dr. Shields, from Lynchburg, Va., preached for us on March 10th a most acceptable sermon to the large audience, both white and colored, who were present."

Rev. R. Anderson, Evergreen Circuit, Miss.: "There is much spiritual interest manifested at different points on this work, and there have been in all nine recent conversions. Until recently the people of this vicinity have felt much uneasiness and many have left the country, some going to Kansas; but a new and better feeling prevails and they are giving better attention to their interests, both temporal and spiritual.'

First Street Church, New Orleans, under Pastor Green, is enjoying a revival. Several have been converted, and the meetings continue. The first Quarterly Conference was held last Friday night, and the pastor's salary was estimated at $600 and his fuel. Sunday night the house was packed full to hear the quarterly sermon. After the sermon more than enough was promptly laid on the table to pay the $10 assessed quarterly by the District Stewards' meeting, for the Presiding Elder. After the collection four united with the Church. The choir—led by Bro. Campbell, in this Church—has just bought a $250 Smith organ, and the music Sunday night was splendid.

A bed of soft soapstone has been uncovered at Johnstown, R. I., which proves to have been an old Indian pottery, where basins, pipe bowls, and ax-heads were made in immense quantities. It is a sad fact that Mrs. Abraham Lincoln, the widow of the late President Lincoln, is living a secluded life in an interior town in France, and declines to return to America lest she may again be placed in a lunatic asylum. An audience of unusual intelligence assembled at Masonic hall, last night, to listen to the lecture of Hon. George R. Wendling, in reply to Robert G. Ingersoll's attacks on Christianity. The lecturer, speaking from a secular standpoint, argued the necessity of religion to the welfare of a people, characterizing Ingersoll's attacks as a crime against civil government, the security of property, and a profanation of the ties of home and kindred. He declared that it is necessary to growth and progress that men should have an ideal, and after painting the condition of society under pagan philosophy, gave as a marked contrast the history of 18 centuries of Christianity. He believed that Mr. Ingersoll's attacks upon Christianity would result in good, by causing a crusade against the hypocrisy in the church, which has furnished infidelity with its sharpest weapons.—Indianapolis News.

Ben. And there, within a stone's throw of the grave of that noble patriot and statesman, Joshua R. Giddings, lies the man whose name can only be eradicated from the minds of the American people with the end of time.—Cleveland Leader.

New York, March 16.—The Cuban patriots in this city refuse to take their defeat on the Island quietly, and are diligent in devising ways and means of renewing the war in Cuba. New York, March 15.—The Telegraph's Washington special says: The agitation of the question of President Hayes' title has been put permanently at rest by the recent declaration of Mr. Hewitt on that subject, and Mr. Blackburn, of Kentucky, who has been credited with intending to stir up the matter, confirms Mr. Hewitt's statement. He says that Mr. Hayes' right to the Presidency will never be disturbed, and he knows of no movement to disturb it.

He says there is a movement on foot for the very thorough and complete investigation of the manner in which Mr. Hayes was elected. This investigation is certainly coming, and a good many Republicans will be glad to see it started, and will do what they can to help it along.

Philadelphia, March 16.—A new instrument invented by Prof. Edison, has been exhibited here. It is called the aiophone. It is an instrument into which words can be articulated, and they gather such force as to be heard for a number of miles with great distinctness. It is in reality a talking fog-horn. By its aid, captains of vessels meeting at sea can converse easily while three or four miles apart. Signal stations could warn vessels coming on a dangerous coast to keep off, and it is adapted to all the uses to which such instruments as fog-horns can now be applied.

Mr. Adams, Edison's agent, will leave New York on Saturday next for London, a company of English merchants having offered Edison £60,000 if the invention can be successfully applied to the local telegraph wires in London.

Nashville, March 17.—The mass meeting held yesterday at Clarksville, the principal tobacco market of Tennessee, adopted a resolution, that the State is neither a pauper nor a bankrupt, and that the Legislature should promptly settle the State debt at fifty cents. Discussions of State finances are waxing warm. It is a prominent bone of contention on the canvass just opening.

Memphis, March 17.—The Peabody Hotel was almost totally destroyed by fire to-night. There was great loss of baggage, though almost everything else was saved. All the occupants were gotten out in safety.

Baltimore, March 17.—The letter carriers at the Baltimore post-office received their bi-weekly pay yesterday in gold.

New York, March 17.—The temperance revival and blue ribbon movement, which has been gaining ground for some days, received an additional impetus this evening at the meeting held at Tammany Hall, which had been engaged for the purpose. The large hall was crowded; the Hon. W. E. Dodge presided. Chief Justice Davis made a long speech, in the course of which he stated that the city and State had cause to congratulate itself on the defeat of the Daly bill. Rev. W. A. Affleck, of Manchester, England, was among the speakers.

Our First Conference in China.

BY BISHOP WILEY.

[[illegible] Zion's Herald.]

Doubtless your readers will be [illegible] to hear something of the [illegible] Methodist Conference in China. [illegible] last General Conference au[thorized] [illegible] the formation of our mis[sion] [illegible] in and about the city of [illegible] into an Annual Confer[ence] [illegible] is the capital city of [illegible] and is about mid[illegible] and Shanghai, [illegible] the walls [illegible] imme[nse] [illegible] as many [illegible] situated in [illegible] hemmed in on all [illegible] picturesque [illegible] valley [illegible] Min. The [illegible] though not so [illegible] the richest [illegible] products is [illegible] groves of [illegible] is made, and the tallow and camphor trees. Our Church opened our missionary work in this province in 1847, at which time scarcely any foreigners had visited the city, and there was no foreign trade. The wonderful progress that has been made, is indicated by the fact that it is already one of the most important centers of trade; and in just thirty years from the coming of the first missionaries, we are called upon to organize an annual Conference.

We arrived here on the 6th of December, and the next day went at once into mission meetings, considering many questions involved in the organization of the Conference. These meetings continued till Wednesday, the 12th, when Brothers Baldwin, Chandler and myself started on a trip up the river to Ku Cheng, distant seventy miles by the river, and then inland thirty miles by chair. It is a region of wonderful mountain scenery, and if I had time and space, I know you would be interested in a full description of this trip. At Ku Cheng we had something of a district conference, and on Sunday had a grand day. The trip occupied a week, and we got back in time for the opening sermon of the Conference, on Wednesday evening, the 19th, by Brother Chandler.

On Thursday morning, the 20th, we opened the Conference by transferring the missionaries, five elders, five deacons, and five probationers from home Conferences, making a conference of twenty members, to which we afterwards added fifteen on trial. We then proceeded with the regular questions, just as in a home Conference, and if it had not been for the strange language and dress, I could hardly have noticed any difference, so well prepared were these native preachers for all the business of a Conference. You would have been surprised to see with what accuracy and good order everything went forward. I cannot but be impressed with the great blessing that has come to Foochow in the native leaders which God has raised up for the work here. The Hu family is really remarkable. The old father of all is gone to his reward, but Hu Po Mi, and Hu Yong Mi, and Hu Sing Mi, are still here—mighty men of God. Hu King Mi is one of our best local preachers—the future Vincent in the Sunday-school work here; and Hu Po Mi and Hu Yong Mi have each a son following in their steps. Hu Po Mi is the St. Peter of the Conference, and Hu Yong Mi is the St. John, and Siu Sek Ong is the St. James, and I assure you this is no inapt or unworthy comparison; and uniting with them Si Yu Mi and Yek Ing Kwang (our other two Presiding Elders) they will present no unworthy comparison with any five elders at home.

There is nothing that so impressed me with the reality, strength and permanency of the work here, as the character and appearance of the men whom God has raised up as native preachers. At the head stand the Presiding Elders, staid, thoughtful, pious, experienced men; behind these are the five newly-made Elders, younger men, yet fine-looking, educated in the Chinese sense, pious, earnest, devoted to their work; behind these again the five deacons, another class which will be fully qualified by a few years of experience, to come forward to leadership; then behind these, fifteen probationers, all having had experience in preaching, and all promising men; and then beyond these I see still a class of bright, pious, hopeful young men, students in the Theological School, who are hastening to take their places in the young Conference; and then outside of all these about forty local preachers, of very fair ability, many of whom we are using as "supplies."

I am simply amazed at what has taken place in this Fukien province since I left it twenty-four years ago. Then nothing had been done but preliminary work. Not a soul had been converted. Now our work extends through five districts, reaching nearly two hundred miles to the north and west, and almost as far to the south and east. We have about seventy native preachers; an Annual Conference of twenty members and fifteen probationers; and forty-six circuits, averaging fully four preaching places to each, making about one hundred and eighty-four points at which the Gospel is preached. I confess I would feel alarmed at the very magnitude of this work, if I did not see the most satisfactory evidence of its genuineness and thoroughness in every respect. Of the sincere and profound piety, the genuineness and devotion of these native preachers and people, no one can have any reasonable doubt. To this hour they have nothing to gain, but much to lose, in becoming Christians; and in this very year some of them have been called to endure sore trials and persecutions.

The afternoons were given to "anniversaries" on subjects of the greatest interest here—the Sabbath, opium, Sunday-schools, and self-support; and the evenings to prayer meetings and preaching. Our "cabinet" work was done as systematically and carefully as in a home Conference. The preachers are strongly attached to our system, and believe that to our methods, under God's blessing, they greatly owe their wonderful success. The Sabbath was a grand day—prayer-meeting, love-feast, Chinese preaching, English preaching, ordinations, etc. Our closing day was Christmas. After the final business we had a Christmas sermon from Bro. Baldwin; then the baptism of three of the mission children; then the Lord's Supper, conducted by Hu Po Mi; then the parting hymn, and prayer by Hu Yong Mi; then the parting words, and then the reading of the appointments by Sia Sek Ong; and with the doxology and benediction, the first session of the Foochow Annual Conference was closed. It was throughout and in all its bearings, a memorable occasion. It is the beginning of great things in China. We can easily look forward from this high ground, and see in the not very distant future a coming family of Conferences in China. It will not be long till a like organization will be called for in our other two great centers—Peking and Kiu Kiang. May God increase the faith and zeal of the Church in this great work!

Foochow, Jan. 5, 1878.

New Publications.

TO THE EAST BY WAY OF THE WEST,

By the late Bishop E. M. Marvin, D.D. Published by Bryan, Brand & Co., St. Louis. Price $2.00. Sold by subscription, or sent post-paid on receipt of price by the publishers.

Speaking of this book the St. Louis Evangelist says: This volume of 606 pages is remarkable for its interest and value. It is scarcely three months since its appearance and already ten thousand copies have been sold. We have read it with great interest and profit. The author's style is pleasing; his descriptions are easy and natural and yet graphic. He embarks at San Francisco and carries the reader with him to Japan, China, India and Palestine, giving a few glances at Constantinople and Rome, two places which are just now occupying the attention of the world.

It would seem as though the reading public would be surfeited with accounts of foreign travel; but this volume is not a rehash of others. It is fresh—a description of what a discerning man saw in his journey around the world. In addition to a vast variety of information upon almost every subject, the author gives a full account of the mission work of his Church and that of other denominations. In this he shows his fine Christian spirit.

In the appendix is a biographical sermon by Bishop H. N. McIntyre, D.D., giving a brief account of the life, labors and death of Bishop Marvin.

HISTORY AND GEOGRAPHY OF LOUISIANA.—This is a primary text-book for the public schools by Prof. John Dimitry and published by A. S. Barnes & Co., New York, Chicago and New Orleans. It was adopted by the present State Board of Education as a text book in the Louisiana schools, before it was published, which indicates the faith our democratic State officers had in the political sentiments, as well as intellectual capacity of the author. The author has sought while treating of the late civil war, to give the facts, while not throwing a slur upon any of the actors. The author says; "The restored Union means peace and prosperity to Louisiana and to her sister Southern States." On the whole Prof. Dimitry has done his work well.

NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.—The March April number of the North American Review is the best that has appeared under its new management. The table of contents begins with an article by Gen. J. A. Garfield, on the reduction of our army. English and American Universities are compared by President Eliot, of Harvard. The remaining articles are as follows: Stonewall Jackson and the Valley Campaign, by Gen. Richard Taylor; The Death-struggle of the Republican Party, by George W. Julian, of Indiana; The Position of the Jews in America, by Rabbi Gustav Gottheil; The Political Alliance of the South with the West, by John F. Morgan, United States Senator from Alabama; The Doctrine of Eternal Punishment, by the Rev. Noah Porter, D.D., LL. D., President of Yale College; the Rev. O. B. Frothingham, the Very Rev. Thomas S. Preston, V.G., the Rev. Henry W. Bellows, D.D., the Rev. William R. Williams, D.D., the Rev. Thomas J. Sawyer, D.D.; Contemporary Literature.

Died.

At Durant, Miss., March 7th, John Harvey, formerly of New Orleans.

The deceased was comparatively a stranger among us, having recently come here. I visited him in his sickness and talked and prayed with him. He was seeking peace with God, that he might be prepared for Heaven. He said he was born and raised in New Orleans.

H. HESLUP.

SOME OF PRENTICE'S SAYINS.

A recent writer produces from the files of the Louisville Journal some of George D. Prentice's witticisms which are not dependent on time and circumstances, as most of them naturally were, for their point and force. Following are a few of them:

"To keep your friends, treat them kindly; to kill them, treat them often."

"Men should not think too much of themselves, and yet a man should be careful not to forget himself."

"A dinner to which a man is not invited generally sits hardest in his stomach."

"There are many men whose tongues might govern multitudes, if they could govern their tongues."

"The doctors ought to escape calumny. No man living has a right to speak ill of them."

"The working of a corkscrew is about the only thing 'best achieved by indirection.'"

Why should doctors be less liable than others to be sick on the ocean?—Because they are more used to see sickness.

Where is the best place for reflection?—In a mirror.

What tree bears the most fruit to market?—The axle-tree.

Special Notices.

Among the Dead Failures

Of the past, how many bogus nostrums may be numbered! Beginning their careers with a tremendous flourish of trumpets, blazoned for a time in the public prints and on flaming posters, soon, but not too soon, were they relegated to the limbo of things lost on earth. But Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a living and thriving remedy. It goes on, curing and to cure. Neither underhand nor open competition affect it. On the contrary, contrast with inferior rival preparations only increases its popularity. It has been repeatedly imitated, but without success. Counterfeits of it have been surreptitiously introduced, but have fallen flat. Everywhere it entrenches itself in the confidence of the people; and well it may, for it is a thoroughly reliable invigorant of the feeble, banishes dyspepsia and constipation, braces the nerves, cures rheumatic ailments and kidney complaints, and eradicates and prevents intermittent and remittent fevers.

BE KIND AT HOME.

Be kind in thy household,
Be cheery and bright;
There's a beauty in kindness
That beams like the light.
Be patient and loving,
Whatever may come;
For the sake of the dear ones
Be kind in thy home.

To the wife of thy bosom,
Oft encumbered with care,
Be tender and thoughtful
Each burden to share;
Be generous and noble,
With sympathy meet,
And hallow with kindness
A union so sweet.

Be kind to the children,
Nor check the fresh love
That would make them as angels,
Glad gifts from above.
Their young hearts are tender,
And tears may quick come;
Provoke not, by ill tempers,
The dear ones at home.

To all in the household,
To greatest and least,
To the persons that serve thee,
To toil-weary beast,
Be forbearing and gentle,
Be cheery and bright;
There's beauty in kindness
That beams like the light.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

The Class-Leader.

His Work, and How to Do It,
With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.

BY [illegible], A. M.,
Author of "[illegible] of Sorrows."

12mo. ....$1.50.

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

DR. PIERCE'S STANDARD REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.

IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a vulnerable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Tonic.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples, and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver, or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth st., Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease itching piles, and consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the Ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered, with night sweats, burning fever pains and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.

Dr. Swayne—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs; in short it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me at the factory.

man comes to understand that passage he is infallibly converted. Love is not an attribute. You say God is merciful, God is just; but justice and mercy do not express the whole of God. Light is not yellow or red, but white. White is a combination of all the colors; so love is a combination of all the attributes of God.

Look at this thought of the love of God.

1. Observe its greatness.

Take this passage from John iii: 16, "For God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son." In the bright sunshine of that text what a place for a sinner! The invalid sits so the sun can shine through the window upon him. He bathes in the sunlight. The text is a window through which streams the health-giving light from God. I remember the story of a little girl in Luther's time, a printer's daughter. She had been taught that God was just, watching to be revenged unless propitiated. One day she picked from the floor a scrap of paper; she read on it the words, "God so loved the world that He gave"— . At that word "gave" the bit of paper had been torn. She thought of those words, and her whole nature was changed. Her mother asked her one day why she was so changed, so happy. She took from her bosom the scrap of paper. "That has done it," she said. The mother read the words. "But it don't say what He gave." Said the little girl, "I don't know what He gave. If he so loved the world as to give anything, I won't be afraid of Him any more." But we, brethren, can read the whole of that text. We know what was that gift. Oh, its vastness!

2. But we turn from that passage, it is so general. "The world" is so big. It is my sin, my great throbbing anxiety that troubles me. We read further, "that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." We enter through that word whosoever, and find Christ a personal Savior. This whole love of God is not divided as it were commercially, so [illegible] for each individual. I sometimes hear with a shudder persons say that a drop of the blood of the sacrifice is enough to save a man. No, it takes the whole of the love of God to save each man. Nor do I rob my brethren by claiming the whole of the love of God. Mothers, fathers, know how it is that each child is loved with the whole of the heart.

3. This love is not based on any [illegible] in us. Hence our great sin [illegible] is no hindrance to it. I [illegible] a little girl who often says to [illegible] "I love you, papa; I love you because I do." [illegible] it is with the great heart of [illegible]

4. Now is there any peculiarity in the [illegible] or nature of any [illegible] that hinders this love. In Ephesians iii. the Ephesians are urged [illegible] "rooted and grounded in love." [illegible] whose love? Their love? No, [illegible] Read the concluding [illegible] chapter. This love [illegible]," and yet Paul [illegible] us comprehend it. [illegible] wonder! Paul seems to [illegible] at the thought of [illegible] of this personal love [illegible]

[illegible] did this love begin? [illegible] tell us that God [illegible] with an everlasting love. [illegible] troubled about foreordin- [illegible] comforted in knowing [illegible] was not an after- [illegible] way back in the [illegible] had planned it all out.

[illegible] long will this love endure? Human love breaks down, [illegible] so with Divine love. Having [illegible] His own, He loved them [illegible] How He loved His dis- [illegible] did not say "and go tell [illegible]," but Peter who [illegible] Tell him that I am [illegible] see him." What [illegible] confidence in that of [illegible] 38, "I am persuaded [illegible] nor life," [illegible] in the whole [illegible] spiritual creation [illegible] the world to [illegible] from the love [illegible] Be assured [illegible] God loves. [illegible]

Prayer.

The following is a sketch of a sermon preached by Rev. George Mueller in the Canal Street Presbyterian Church on Thursday evening last.

Matt. 7: 7-8. Ask and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.

In introducing this subject Mr. Mueller said that Jesus Christ knew that his children would have to live in the midst of conflicts in this world, and he knew all about the trials and afflictions and services through which they would have to pass. He knew that they had no strength of themselves, and would need help. Hence the exceeding rich, and broad and precious promise of the text, covering every possible condition and want. If it had been left to us we could not have framed a more complete and precious promise. With this promise before us we have only to take God at his word as if it had been written for us personally.

But to rightly understand this promise we must compare scripture with scripture. One scripture explains another, expressing conditions and relations which otherwise we would not catch or understand. We turn to James 4: 3, and read, "Ye ask, and ye receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts." Here is prayer that is never answered. Why? Because it is prayer for something to be consumed in selfish lusts. By selfish lusts is meant anything that tends to pamper our self-conceit, or ambition or worldliness, in short anything that is not for God's glory.

To ask amiss is not to be wholly free from sin. No man is ever free from the weakness and imperfections of sin in this life. Prayer is for the weak and afflicted ones. To ask amiss is to ask for that which is for our own rather than for God's glory. God's love is not a foolish love but is a holy love. The first essential element of prayer then is; We must pray only for that which glorifies God.

In the second place, we must wholly renounce all merit in ourselves. All men deserve but one thing, and that is hell and punishment. Although Mr. Mueller had been serving God fifty-four years and four months, still his only desert, he said, was hell and punishment. Only one being ever lived on earth who could claim God's blessing on the ground of personal merit, and that was Christ. He was saved on earth and glorified in heaven because he merited all possible salvation. Man can only be saved on the ground of Christ's merit. Prayer, charity, and all else that man can do, cannot save. Christ's merit alone saves. We must hide in Christ; we must trust alone in Christ. As we cannot be saved only in Christ so we must not trust in ourselves when we pray to God. We must approach the throne of grace in the name of the Lord Jesus. John 14: 13-14 reads; "And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye will ask anything in my name, I will do it." But we must lead pure lives if our prayers are to be answered. In Psalms 66; 18 are read "If I regard iniquity in my heart the Lord will not hear me." Here is an important text. Our hearts must not harbor sin.

In the third place. We must have faith in the power and willingness of God to answer prayer. We may ask for that which would be for God's glory, and we may not trust in our own merits, but still not have our prayers answered, by not believing that God is able and willing to answer. One asks, "Can God answer prayer?" The answer is yes, and the proof of his power to do so is the resurrection of Christ. But another asks, "Is God willing?" The answer is yes, and the proof is in the gift of Jesus Christ. Romans 8: 32. "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?"

In the fourth place; we must pray believing that we receive; and, patiently wait God's good time to answer. In Mark 11: 24, Jesus says: "What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." We must believe that God [illegible] is willing and does answer prayers. But one says, "I cannot [illegible]" Then just tell that to God. [illegible] be "Lord I believe, [illegible] unbelief." God is [illegible] and he will hear and sympathize with such a prayer and belief.

Notice this: the text says not a word about time, or circumstances, when or where the answer will come. When we fulfill the three first conditions of prayer then we must patiently wait on God. But one asks: "Is not one request enough?" Yes in reason, but not in scripture. Christ prayed three times in the garden. Paul prayed three times for the removal of the thorn in the flesh, and would have prayed three hundred times had not the answer come. "My grace is sufficient." We must remember we are but human creatures and what God could do at once, and would be glad to do, might not be best for us. A blessing delayed is doubly sweet when it does come; waiting strengthens faith: by waiting on God in faith we glorify Him and our souls may not be prepared for the blessing, and by waiting it is made ready. Mr. Mueller gave his own experience. He had had many thousand instantaneous answers to prayer, but yet for the answers to many prayers he had to wait days and sometimes months, and in other cases years. He and a friend began in November 1844 to pray for the conversion of five persons. The first one was converted after eighteen months of prayer, the second after six more years of daily prayer, and the third after ten more years of daily prayer. The other two are yet unconverted, although it will be thirty-four years in November since he and his friend began praying for them. Parents should not be discouraged in praying for their children. In another case he received word within six weeks, in 1866, of the conversion of six persons for whom he had been praying many years. Mr. Mueller said he prayed without the shadow of a doubt. Once he asked God for a thing which he knew was for His glory. He prayed many times each day for that blessing. But he had to wait four years before God answered him. In another case he prayed during sixteen years at least fifteen thousand times before God answered him. In still another case he prayed fully twenty thousand times, during eleven years, before God answered. But the waiting did him good.

Christians should associate themselves together in little praying bands, and pray for specific things, such as the conversion of their children, for God's blessing on ministers, etc.

We should treasure up instances where God has answered our prayers and keep a little memorandum book and write on one side what we ask for, and on the other side how God has answered. All Christians have more or less answers to prayer and they should recall them and thank God for them and thus strengthen their faith and increase their confidence and joy in the Lord.

Tide Marks.

REV. JAMES MITCHELL.

The tidal wave breaks on the shore,
And sweeps along the strand;
Thy foot-print made in passing o'er
Is blotted from the sand.

Nor can a Prince forbid its rise,
Or Canute stay its forward swell;
Onward and upward still it hies,
Celestial powers alone compel.

So sacred truth and holy light,
In waves celestial sweep along;
Floating the bark of stranded right,
Submerging every print of wrong.

Then let the swell of living truth,
O'erflow this land where errors dwell;
Renew the old with bounding youth,
And clothe with bloom both hill and dell.

Atlanta is becoming a large and attractive city, and possibly may become one worthy of the new age on which the nations have entered, but that is by no means a clear point as yet. True, its press is asking for Georgia a portion of the Northern emigration that is now turning Southward. This is good so far as it goes, but I fear it is still expected that Northern men must leave their political and ethical views of a Northern type behind them, or they will be thrust into the niches cut for all carpet-baggers, Northern preachers and teachers, as preaching, teaching, political talking and speaking must be according to a given standard in the interest of the "Solid South," or society and business will be closed against them.

I have been in Georgia long enough to see this, so if our Northern friends are ready to make such a surrender they can come on—they will find plenty of northern people in Atlanta, who have brought their principles to a good Southern market, who, by reversing the advice of the wise man, "buy the truth and sell it not," make fortunes in that kind of commerce. I have no disposition to quarrel with that class of persons. Let them follow their instincts; there will always be enough nobled-souled men of both Northern and Southern birth to "hold the fort" for Christ, and build up the interest of a free church; and Christ will reward such with honor in the end. Nay, I will go further, I, to some extent, respect the timidity and the fears of these Northern new-comers and emigrants, knowing that the tidal wave of truth will correct it in time; but I further know they are not the material out of which God constructed the keel and timbers of the old ship of Zion at the first—and that their ashes will slumber by and by in some forgotten place. My prayer is that they may find an ample subsistence, enjoy it in peace—a calm as unbroken as that of the oyster under ocean wave in the deep blue sea. It is only the old gentile song of subsistence, "What shall we eat, what shall we drink, and wherewithal shall we be clothed."

Another tide mark: Bishop Haven has been with us for a few weeks, and is evidently improving in health; but the point worth of note is I did not hear an unkind criticism from any one. His visit has been acceptable and useful. He has looked into all the interests of the Church, and I think imparted new life. He called several meetings of the Trustees of the University, and placed the new Board in running order. A number of us went with him to survey the lands of the institution, some 400 acres or more, with fine elevated knolls and ridges which overlook the city. A colored college, with University powers, will be one of the institutions of this new city and age.

The Bishop made the acquaintance of "Bob," a large black horse I brought with me from Virginia. He rode him in this review of the lands, and several times subsequently. He made a fine appearance on that horse, and I have no doubt but that kind of exercise is good for him. He rather tired Bob's patience one day, for on returning to the stable with a thick dry coat of perspiration that disclosed the the character of the ride, I asked Bob what was the matter. He gave me to understand, by his peculiar horse talk, that the Bishop had been trying his mettle.

Whilst dining with the Bishop one day, I had the pleasure of meeting one of his friends, Bishop Fallows of the Reformed Episcopal Church, a minister of ability once connected with our Church in the Northwest—now full of that peculiar vigor and hopefulness that all new departures in reform display. He and his associates fill a place in Christ's field where they were much needed to check the dangerous ritualistic tendency of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which had become little more in many places than a recruiting office for Rome; but with faith in Christ they will gather more from the unchurched by the power of the Gospel, than from the old Episcopal organization. We can bid them God-speed.

The Turkish Empire is drawing to its close. How long it will linger no one can tell. I have been for years asking a Methodist Mission to Egypt and Jerusalem, or some part of Bible-lands, but all in vain; men in position pass lightly on the reflections of their brethren, no matter the nature of the subject, or its claims.

I may be mistaken in the advocacy of a mission to Bible-lands. It was once supposed I was in regard to the Roman Mission, and I was blamed for urging it and echoing the words of Dr. Elliott. The passing wave of time has vindicated that position. And it is likely to do so in this case as well. Bulgaria and adjoining eastern fields, have been selected as the best and only fields under Turkish rule, on which to bestow attention. I have not been blind to one or two things—the falling water-spout does not sweep our mountain sides more clear of all planted thereon than the long foreseen struggle around "New Rome" have swept away the tens of thousands we have planted there—whilst the prayers of the writer have been passed as of no moment, and Bible lands as unworthy of regard, although the Angel of the Covenant has filled his word with expressions of regard for the scene of his earthly pilgrimage, and the Christian world all along the ages has stood in sympathy with that world, and God has wonderfully blessed the efforts made by the Church therein in these latter years.

Egypt should be occupied as the key to Northern Africa, and the door to the Asiatic lands on the Red Sea, and we should plant ourselves in the Holy City at once. Bishop Haven agrees to this view, how many more of the Board do I cannot tell. I hope all will agree and give us a plan of a mission at once. It need not be an expensive one. Plant the Word and if it is of God it will grow. I do not see why ministers in Africa or Asia should be better cared for there, than we are in the South where we toil along from year to year at the rate of $300 or $400 per annum, and many good men for the work get less than that.

But the question of money should not be the question. Is it right to try? That's the question; God will provide the means. As the present revolution sweeps along in the East I will return to this subject again.

Mr. Mansfield in Reply to Dr. Hargrove.

The following article was written by Dr. E. D. Mansfield in reply to Dr. Hargrove's published statements respecting pauperism in the South and the North. We produce it by request:

The Rev. R. S. Rust, D. D., Secretary of the Methodist Freedmen's Aid Society, seems not to have pleased some gentlemen of the Methodist Church South. He and Bishop Bowman actually represented the great body of the late slaves in the South as ignorant and depraved, and this as the consequence of slavery. If so they need the aid and instruction of all Christian people who can give it. The report also says these people live in communities unable or unwilling to relieve them. This is not pleasant to some people, so the Rev. R. K. Hargrove of Nashville, comes out with an elaborate document to show that there is a larger proportion of whites at the North who are paupers and degraded. Mr. Hargrove admits that slavery is destroyed, and there are not many people who wish to restore it. But he aims to prove that the negro is a good deal better for being in a state of almost total ignorance, and that this is a state of society which tends to prevent poverty, and, on the whole, not one to be much lamented. I want to show how statistics can be perverted by one who does not examine, or does not understand, their meaning. Mr. Hargrove appeals to the ninth Census of the United States, and gives this table with comments:

"On page 568 of the 'Ninth Census of the United States' is a table showing the paupers supported, and the criminals actually in prison in each State on June 1, 1870. The figures show this comparative result:

	In late slave-holding States.	In former free States
Total paupers to total population	1 in 703	1 in 428
Native white paupers to native population	1 in 758	1 in 580
Colored paupers to colored population	1 in 655	1 in 139
Total criminals to total population	1 in 1,227	1 in 1,137
Native white criminals to native white pop.	1 in 2,158	1 in 1,596
Colored criminals to colored population	1 in 716	1 in 200

Thus the official report of the Government shows that pauperism and crime are less prevalent, both in fact and in proportion to population, at the South than at the North with all classes of native citizens. Respecting the native whites, the figures show a decided advantage in favor of the late slaveholding States; while among the colored race, according to numbers, the Northern States have nearly four times as many criminals and nearly five times as many paupers as the Southern States. In other words, the official report shows the native whites South to be in physical comforts and moral character about 25 per cent in advance of the same class North, while the condition of the negro, North, is more deplorable, four or five fold, than of the same class in the Southern States."

Statistics are a two edged sword, very apt to cut the hands of those who do not understand them. The appeal is to the ninth Census, and, therefore, we must abide by it, however erroneous it may be. When Mr. Hargrove saw Illinois, with the great city of Chicago and 900,000 more people than Indiana, put down as having 1,300 less number of paupers, he might have been put upon his guard, but he is not the first dabbler in statistics who has stumbled by the way. He does not define what is a "pauper," nor compare rural with rural or civic with civic population, nor exclude the foreign born. No statistician will pretend that a comparison can be made safely in numbers, unless those numbers represent like quantities under equal circumstances. To do this I will endeavor to supply this omission.

First. What is a "pauper?" Mr. Walker defines what the Census means by a "pauper." It is only those who are in asylums, almshouses, or infirmaries. If, therefore, a State should have made no provision for almshouses and infirmaries (and several of the Southern States, Texas, for example, have made very little), it will be represented in the Census tables as having almost no paupers, while another State—Maryland, for example, will appear, even with less population, as having a large proportion. Texas has 200 and Maryland 1,612. Thus it appears that the more humane, civilized and care-taking a State is, the more paupers it will appear to have, and the more inferior in condition! Such is the ridiculous conclusion to which Mr. Hargrove's mode of comparison leads! The apparent greater proportion which the old free States are represented to have is made by the paupers in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts—States, half of whose population is in great cities, filled with the foreign born, who left Europe in an impoverished condition. In those States a broad humanity, much beyond what the world has heretofore seen, has provided asylums, almshouses and infirmaries for every condition of the poor. Hence the Census-taker has there found the greater number of paupers, because there humanity has been most developed.

There are people, and those, too, of great intelligence, who think this fact one of the greatest evidences of a high and generous Christianity. But the Rev. Mr. Hargrove does not think so. He concludes that those humane and enlightened people are twenty-five per cent worse in condition than such States as Alabama, Mississippi and Texas.

Second. But let us proceed and see whether Mr. Hargrove's statistical sword does not cut a good deal deeper in the South than it does in the North—whether Old Virginia and South Carolina will thank him for his interference. Ohio has an infirmary in every county, and almshouses in every city. She has more loose population than the entire South put together, and three hundred thousand foreign-born people. This, according to Rev. Hargrove's facts, has a disadvantage in his mode of comparison, yet we will risk Ohio even in that comparison. Here it is:

	Population (1870).	Paupers.	Ratio.
Ohio	2,665,260	3,684	1 in 794
Georgia	1,184,109	1,816	1 in 652
North Carolina	1,071,361	1,653	1 in 648
Virginia	1,225,163	3,280	1 in 371
South Carolina	705,606	2,671	1 in 311

Thus we see that Ohio, even by the census, has fewer paupers than Georgia and North Carolina, and only half of the proportion in Virginia and South Carolina.

Third. Let us now see how unfortunate is the condition of the oldest and best of the Southern States, and how far inferior they are to Texas and Africa. Thus:

Paupers in Africa	0
Paupers in Texas	1 in 4,052
Paupers in Alabama	1 in 1,452
Paupers in North Carolina	1 in 648
Paupers in Virginia	1 in 371

Here we have a complete demonstration that, judged by the "pauper" standard, Africa is in the best condition, Texas next, and Virginia with its intelligence, high tone, and Christianity, in the worst and most miserable condition! Thus is the proposition of the Rev. Mr. Hargrove reduced to a simple absurdity. Before the war, when four millions of blacks were in slavery, the case for the South was still stronger, for the slaves had no paupers, and what a blessed condition they were in!

Fourth. Let us see what the proportion of the "native" whites in the South and North is. More than half the paupers and criminals in the Northern States are foreign born—in the South but very few. Exclude the foreign born, both North and South, and make the comparison with native born persons, and how will the South appear? We advise the Rev. Mr. Hargrove not to inquire; and furthermore, we advise him not to inquire into the condition of Southern penitentiaries and poor-houses. We know well how many good and humane people there are in the South, but it is impossible for them in any brief time to repair the wrongs and ravages which slavery produced in a large part of their population. Denials are useless. Jealousies are worse than useless. If any man in Europe or America, in the North or the South, has any time or talent to bestow on humanity, let him endeavor to build up the ruins which have been made, to repair the waste places, to open the prison-house to the captive, to restore something of the grace and beauty which once belonged to fallen man. And who among the captive and fallen have more claims upon American men than Africo-Americans?

The use of the postal card in the United States is still increasing. The orders for the last quarter amounted to fifty-three millions, or at a rate of 212 million a year.

A Clappertown (Pa.) girl, who was kind to a sick woman on the cars, four years ago, and wouldn't take anything for her trouble, has just received $90,000, the stranger, who had taken her name, and said, "You will be paid some day," having left her all her money.

The money in the Sub-Treasury at New York, of which there is about $100,000,000 in coin now deposited there, is undergoing its periodical count. Twenty-five men and six women are engaged in the business, and will probably get through in about fifteen days.

In Washington, D. C., the sale of drinks has fallen off one-sixth since the temperance agitation began. No less than sixty saloons have closed for want of patronage, and every day witnesses some popular bar-room succumb. Mr. Murphy has secured 13,000 names to the temperance pledge.

The Greenbackers of Texas held a convention in Austin, on Tuesday, adopted a series of resolutions expressive of their views, and appointed a committee to call a State nominating convention. They are said to desire a union with the Grangers and the Republicans to run a candidate for Governor against the Democrats next fall.

About 25,000 colored people in the South have taken stock in this Association, and the design is to purchase a steamship as soon as possible, to expedite the emigration and to facilitate the anticipated commerce.

The novel spectacle of selling a negro to the highest bidder was witnessed in the streets of Hickman, on Saturday last. Mr. James Barksdale was the auctioneer, and as the negro man stood on the block, and the auctioneer's voice rose and fell, crying the bids, it revived reminiscences of old and bygone days. The colored people crowded around in anxious expectancy, and, strange to say, every one seemed to approve the sale. The negro sold was one John Cooper, who had been previously tried and convicted as a vagrant, and the verdict of the jury was, that he should be sold into servitude for six months, as the law provides and directs.—*Hickman (Ky.) Marshall Herald: A party of five masked men rode up to the house of one Parson Foster, living about one mile above Alvarado, on last Friday night, and throwing down six-shooters on the gentleman, demanded all the filthy lucre he had about the premises. The parson, under the circumstances, did as any one else would do, and "anted up," the sum amounting to about $300. During the controversy one of the robbers' mask fell from his face, disclosing to the astonished parson's gaze the face of the deputy sheriff of Johnson county. After throughly searching the house for more gains, the robbers mounted their horses and left at full gallop. The parson immediately mounted one of his horses, reported the circumstances at Alvarado. A posse of citizens were soon in hot pursuit of the daring band, and after several miles chase succeeded in capturing two of them—Amos Powell, a well known citizen of Alvarado, and Sam Parker, duputy sheriff of that county. George Mueller.

This distinguished Christian from Bristol, England, has been in our city for some days and has spoken in several of the churches. We heard his sermon on Prayer, and give a sketch of his thoughts elsewhere. We also heard him last Monday night giving an account of the Institution of which he was the founder in 1834, and of which he has since been Director. Mr. Mueller is now seventy-two years old but is active and efficient. He has the German accent in his speech, and speaks in a plain and earnest manner, impressing all with his sincere piety. His wife accompanies him and usually sits on the platform near him while he speaks. She has a good matronly face and is evidently a woman of strong character and completely harmonizes with her husband in his views and work. Mr. Mueller is a thoroughly educated man, being master of six languages. He is a man of great caution and exact business habits, and of marked executive ability. He was a wild and frivolous university boy until he was nineteen and a half years old, when he went to prayer-meeting where a few trades people met, and was converted. Out of nine hundred students in the university who studied for the ministry only three were converted and he made the fourth. He first went to England and labored as a missionary among the Jews, but had no success. He became pastor of a small church at Teignmouth, England, by the sea side. He was then led to Bristol, and being greatly distressed about the children uncared for in the streets he, in 1834, determined to start his Institution. He had no money or rich friends. For several years he had trusted God implicitly for the supply of all his temporal wants, and he concluded that as taking care of poor children was God's work if he would only trust God He would give him all he needed to care for the poor children. So he asked God for a house, for helpers, and for $5000.00. His plan was, to establish day and Sunday schools; help the poor and aid in missionary operations. He laid down two principles to govern him. First, he would not choose any rich noble to be the patron of his schools, but would make God his patron and so published everywhere and instead of asking men for money, he would ask God for every [illegible] he wanted. Second, he [illegible] all settled he [illegible] and read Ps. 81:10. "I am the Lord thy God which brought thee out of the land of Egypt: open thy mouth wide and I will fill it." He determined to open his mouth wide and prayed for a house, helpers and money. The next day he received twenty-four cents and was of good courage. Then came pieces of furniture and then money until he had enough to rent a house and begin. He appointed a place to receive applications for orphans, but the first day [illegible] came. He then prayed for orphans and the next day one came and soon the house was full, and [illegible] by [illegible] food and all things [illegible] in answer to prayer. [illegible] four years Mr. Mueller [illegible] strictly to his principle [illegible] just what he wants [illegible] and waits until it comes, [illegible] never been confounded. [illegible] received and [illegible] over $4,[illegible]. He has [illegible] in which [illegible] year by year, [illegible]. Besides [illegible] day schools in [illegible] youth, thirty-[illegible] and six adult [illegible] over 10,000 [illegible] In his [illegible] Mueller helps [illegible] missionaries. In [illegible] department [illegible] quantities of the [illegible] given away [illegible] The yearly [illegible] Mr. Mueller's [illegible] All this he [illegible] needed, without [illegible] to prayer. [illegible] work is [illegible] eyes of the [illegible] insists [illegible] result [illegible] should in [illegible] He [illegible] God, [illegible] little; late and dinner had to be delayed half an hour to give time to cook the meat.

There is wonderful philosophy, power and comfort in this life of trust, illustrated in the life of Geo. Mueller, and the result would be glorious if Christians everywhere, to the extent of their knowledge and capacity, would commit all their ways to the Lord. There would be growth and triumph for the individual and for the Church.

The Supreme Court and Gen. Anderson.

We learned of the decision of the Supreme Court of Louisiana reversing the rulings of Judge Whitaker and ordering the release of Gen. T. C. Anderson, just as we were going to press last week. We had but time to note the fact. The text of the opinions of the Judges is now before us, and has already been generally commented upon by the daily papers throughout the country. Aside from the legal questions involved, the acquittal of the accused, for such is the practical effect of the decision, has been received with expressions of approbation on the one side and condemnation and disgust on the other; the political friends of the prisoner applaud; his opponents denounce the Court. We are sorry to observe and to be compelled to admit this, but it is a disgraceful fact which we cannot pass over. That the course of justice and the liberty of a citizen should depend upon the ascendency of any party or faction is a sad commentary upon our boasted civilization.

This timely decision of the Supreme Court of the State, which will be hereafter marked as an effort to undo a great wrong, will not, however, remove the disgrace which Louisiana has suffered by this political persecution, characterized by the element of bad faith and juggling. But we have heretofore expressed ourselves quite plainly in regard to the original prosecution.

This trial has been instructive. It has shown, for instance, that the political party now in the ascendancy in this State is very much disorganized or else utterly faithless. A promise was made by that party, in the form of solemn legislative act, not to persecute for political offenses—a promise that we should think, would bind the whole party. This legislative promise was, and was well understood to be [illegible] agreement between the Nicholls government and the President's Commissioners. But those who advocated this prosecution, loudly insisted that they were not parties to a bargain and not bound by it. Is it disorganization or bad faith?

Well informed persons in this city were entirely confident that Gen. Anderson would be released, notwithstanding the verdict of the petit jury and the unanimous and somewhat violent demand of the daily press that the verdict should not be disturbed. When a pardon did not issue at once, it became apparent to such observers that a decision favorable to Gen. Anderson was expected from the Supreme Court. Here is this decision: Gen. Anderson is to be discharged, the other members of the Returning Board will be free, and the State Government of Louisiana, at least, is relieved of the imputation of bad faith in connection with the contract whereby it was permitted to legally exist.

But while this is all conclusive and very satisfactory so far as Gen. Anderson is concerned, there is much more in the action of the Supreme Court than the curt and somewhat unceremonious condemnation of Judge Whitaker and the Attorney General by the Chief Justice. There is a most important question of law decided in this case which vitally affects the title of President Hays. The decision may [illegible] and may have been intended to be far-reaching in its consequences. We can only simply summarize the point.

The Returning Board claims that under the Louisiana election law they had the power to take evidences of violence, intimidation and fraud and to throw out polls and parishes where such illegal practices were proven. The law gave this Board that power when a certificate of such fraud, intimidation, or violence should be found annexed to the returns. In the bulldozed parishes, so-called, the Commissioners at the polls did not, and, as is claimed, did not dare to annex such certificates. But the parish [illegible] who were authorized to consolidate the Commissioners' [illegible] annexed such certificates [illegible] consolidated returns [illegible] they [illegible] lawyers [illegible] the [illegible] the polls, and [illegible] consolidated returns of the parish Supervisors. And, as a corollary, since the law required a certificate as a prerequisite to the taking of evidence, as the certificates were not annexed to the Commissioners' returns, therefore no evidence could be taken. But the Returning Board ruled otherwise. They made the canvass from the consolidated returns and admitted evidence of violence and intimidation upon the certificates of Supervisors.

Gen. Anderson was accused of having uttered as true a forged Supervisors' return. But the Court say that this instrument has no efficacy or value as evidence of the result of the election, and that it was therefore no crime to forge, utter it, or publish as true when forged or altered.

The effect of this decision is to hold that everything done by the Wells and Anderson Returning Board looking to the promulgation of the result of the election was void. The title of President Hayes rests upon these returns, and we are presented with the singular circumstance of a decision of the highest Court in the State of the illegality and absolute nulity of these returns. It was said at Washington during the Court that the Courts of the State were alone competent to pass upon this question. Here the Supreme Court has decided. Qui animo?

Our Schools in the South.

We publish elsewhere the names and locations of the institutions of learning of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States. The following are under the direction and are supported almost wholly by the Freedmen's Aid Society, under the immediate direction of Rev. Dr. R. S. Rust: Central Tennessee College, at Nashville, Tennessee: Shaw University, Holly Springs, Miss.: Claflin University, Orangeburgh, S. C.: Clark University, Atlanta, Ga.: New Orleans University, New Orleans, La.: Wiley University, Marshall, Texas: Haven Normal School, Waynesborough, Ga.: Rust Biblical and Normal Institute, Huntsville, Ala.: Walden Seminary, Little Rock, Ark.: La Teche Seminary, La Teche, La.: Bennett Seminary, Greensborough, N. C.: Richmond Normal School, Richmond, Va.: Cookman Institute Jacksonville, Fla.: Centenary Biblical Institute, Baltimore, Md. In these schools are over 1500 students. The property of these schools aggregate a large amount. Besides these schools supported by the Freedmen's Aid Society there are several which are supporting themselves, and which are attended by white students.

Of this class the first and most important is East Tennessee University, located at Athens, Tenn. Athens is a pretty town of 1500 people, and the people are made up largely of the educated classes. Our College gives a thorough course and has a theological department. There are five professors and two tutors and two hundred students. There is a good property free of debt worth $15,000. Rev. J. F. Spence, A.M., is the President and to his energy and talent the institution is indebted for its freedom from debt, and present success.

Holston Seminary is located at New Market, Tenn., twenty-five miles from Knoxville, and is under the patronage of the Holston Conference. Rev. Ralf Pierce, a son-in-law of Bishop Peck, and for nine years a missionary to India, is principal. There are two assistant teachers and over one hundred students. The property is old Holston College, which has, in former years, graduated some of the leading men in Tennessee. The building is a plain, substantial brick. No debts. The location of this school is good, being in the midst of a large membership. The circuit including New Market is six hundred strong.

Tullahoma Collegiate Institute, at Tullahoma, Tenn., is in the middle of the State, and is in charge of Rev. Thomas C. Carter, a graduate of Asbury University and is a native Tennessean. The property is good, with no debts. Number of students one hundred and fifty.

Hollow Rock Seminary, at Hollow Rock, Tenn., has fifty students under the charge of Prof. Chandler. The buildings do not belong to us, but the school is wholly under the patronage of the Holston Conference.

Dickson Academy, at Dickson, Tenn., has thirty-five students, under the charge of Rev. James F. Turner. The building is frame, and out of debt.

Ellijay Seminary, at Elijay, Ga., is located ten miles from the celebrated copper mines of that State, and although now struggling with debt, is doing good work and will succeed.

Candler College, near Asheville in North Carolina, is a Collegiate Institute, Rev. Carroll S. Long, Principal. Bro. Candler, a prominent [illegible] of our Church of [illegible], gave the entire property. The attendance is fifty, and the school is growing rapidly in favor.

Andrews Institute, Rev. James P. Blakeman, principal, is located near Collinsville, Ala., and has eighty students, and under the patronage and control of the Central Alabama Conference. The buildings are not yet complete.

It will be seen that only one of this last group of Institutes is called University and the rest are Seminaries, etc. This is right and indicates the true policy of grading the schools. Let every Conference have as many Seminaries as it can support and let a group of Conferences or States have one University.

In all our Institutions of learning in the South there are over two thousand students and a splendid lot of property. Such facts as these indicate the permanent character of the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South and are a sure prophecy of the growth in the future.

That Southern Methodist Claim.

The Methodist Church South puts in a claim of $450,000 for the use of their publishing building at Nashville during the war by Federal forces. We do not understand that either the buildings or presses were destroyed. The printing materials were used. The United States Senate Committee have reported in favor of granting $150,000.

The ground upon which this claim is asked is that the Methodist Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as a Church, took no part in the rebellion, and therefoer the Church property if injured or used should be paid for.

The claim is that the Methodist Church South did not as a Church support the Confederacy. The only possible ground for this assertion is a merely technical one, viz: that the General Conference, the law-making body of that Church, never did formally declare allegiance to the Confederacy. But if it did not do this, it did, indirectly, everything that could be done to express exactly that allegiance. Its Annual Conference expelled members because they were not loyal to the Confederacy, and the General Conference did not in any way disapprove of it; and besides, approved the administration of its Bishops whose advice and directing influence expelled those men. This technical point is a poor basis to build on, and if the Methodist Church South persists in pressing it as the ground for receiving a large amount of money from the United States Treasury, it will bring upon itself, we predict, the contempt of the world. If there ever was a notorious fact it was that the Southern Methodist ministers and churches throughout the South were persistent and brave defenders of the Confederacy. And now for those ministers and churches to ask for half a million dollars because as a Church they did not support the Confederacy is to seek by a mere play of words to deceive the nation and the world. But such a deception is impossible. The Church South may get $150,000 because the Government is largely in the hands of ex-Confederates, but we predict that the very politicians who vote to give it, will chuckle over the fact that a great Church can be so easily made party to the raid upon the United States Treasury now being inaugurated.

But the Methodist Church South did formally endorse the Confederacy. Her Annual Conferences are the administrators of her laws. When an Annual Conference, for example, makes loyalty to the Confederacy a test of membership, and that action is sanctioned by the Presiding Bishop, and then the administration of that Bishop is approved by the General Conference, the govering body for the whole Church, then the action of that single Annual Conference comes to be the action of the whole Church. This is what was done in several cases during the war. We quote one of them. The Holston (Tennessee) Conference met at Athens, October 15, 1862; Bishop Early presiding. A committee was appointed consisting of John M. McTeer chairman, James S. Kenedy, W. H. Bates, A. G. Worley and Carroll Long, whose business it was to examine into the political status of every "suspicious character" in the Conference. Before that Commission nine were expelled, and against seven the only charge was disloyalty to the Confederacy. The Commission made a lengthy report in which it said:

> And now that the Abolitionists and Black Republicans of the North and out of the Northern churches, have inaugurated, and without just provocation, causedly and wickedly a terrible and relentless warfare of invasion, plunder, and wholesale confiscation against all our rights of person, property and conscience, by an utter and base prostitution of all the sacred sanctions of constitutional liberty, with the repeatedly avowed object of subjugation or extermination, the people called Southern Methodists could not so far forget their past history, or become so blinded to their providential destiny, as not to perceive, with the clearness of a sunbeam, that the success of the Federal Government, in any form and under any circumstances, as at present related to this terrible controversy, could only eventuate in the utter destruction of Southern Methodism as well as true republican liberty.
> They feel constrained, furthermore, to say, for the sake of not only themselves and this Conference, but for the sake of all the people of our various charges that no member of this body is held obnoxious to complaints or allegations because of former or present opinions touching the abstract political questions of secession and revolution, and that such a representation of the acts of this body would be as false as malicious. But now that these questions have assumed a concrete form, and under the inspiration of Abolition fanaticism have kindled the fires of the most brutal and ruthless war ever known in the history of man, involving every interest, political and religious, held to be most sacred and absolutely vital to the present and future weal of our people, it is the deliberate and religious conviction of your committee that no patriot, no Christian, and, last of all, no Christian minister who claims to be a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and a citizen of the Confederate States of America, and who is presumed to be even partially acquainted with the merits of this unhappy controversy, can throw the weight of his opinions, words, or acts into the scales of our enemies against us with moral impunity, or with a conscience void of offense toward God and his fellow countrymen.

We have no disposition to bring up unpleasant things of the past, but our self respect as an American citizen compells us to expose the false pretenses of any who, after doing everything in their power to destroy this Government, now asks that the expenses of their treasonable onslaught be paid by the Government.

Our Cincinnati Letter.

BY CHARLES HENRY.

Matters are progressing finely here. The Churches are waging a fierce warfare upon the hosts of Satan and storming the citadel of iniquity. The Kentucky Conference meeting at Covington, just across the Ohio river, is having an interesting session. The anniversaries thus far have been unusually attractive. The prominent feature of the Freedmen's Anniversary was the new departure in the introduction of a colored speaker. Rev. Dr. Rust, after speaking some thirty minutes, giving a wonderful portrayal of the nature and achievements of the Freedmen's Aid Society in his characteristically happy manner, introduced Rev. Dr. Taylor, once a slave, now a graduate of the Central Tennessee College, and Pastor of Union Chapel, Cincinnati, Ohio. Bro. Taylor very gracefully and aptly acknowledged the compliment, and made a stirring appeal for his poor people. His language was chaste, his illustrations classic and pertinent, and his general appearance that of a scholar and Christian gentleman. The audience gave him undivided attention and at intervals responded with hearty amens and prolonged applause. The Freemen's Aid Society may well exult in the work it is accomplishing. Such samples as Bro. Taylor are all over the country, and to the Freedmen's Aid Society, under the leadership of Dr. Rust, is all the credit due. Let the benefaction to this grand enterprise of our Church be increased and the work pushed vigorously forward. At the Preachers' Meeting, for several weeks past, the subject of the "Resurrection" has been under discussion, from which much interest and profit have been evolved. Dr. Curry eloquently set forth his peculiar views. Dr. Weakley and others dissented. The trusty steel of these valiant "Soldiers of the Cross" flashed fire as they battled for what they conceived the pure Gospel truth. Rev. Dr. Rust planted himself squarely and unequivocally upon the Scriptural statements. He would not dabble in metaphysics and sciences, but rest securely upon the "Thus saith the Lord." "Let God be true and every man a liar."

Last night the Ohio Wesleyan University had its reunion and banquet at Hotel Emery. The bill of fare was superb. The toasts were enthusiastically received and eloquently responded to in the following order:

Our Alma Mater, by Prof. Samuel W. Williams.
The President, by Rev. Dr. C. H. Payne.
The Board of Trustees, by Rev. Dr. R. S. Rust.
The Public Schools, J. P. Patterson, Esq.
The Law, by Chas. Evans, Esq.
The Ministry, by Rev. M. A. Richards.
The Medical Department of the O. W. University, by Rev. Dr. W. B. Davis.
The Press, by Rev. Dr. F. S. Hoyt.
The Ladies, by L. C. Black, Esq.

Cincinnati is all aglow with excitement and enterprises. Building operations are being conducted on an extensive scale. There are indications of a revival of trade. God is blessing us very abundantly. Methodism comes to the front in every good work. The Book Concern hums and whizzes with activity and prosperity. We are lifting high the Banner of the Cross and the "World for Christ" is our motto.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. W. McDonald, State Line, Miss.: "Our recent quarterly meeting was full of blessings to us. Two persons were converted, four united with the Church, and the members were greatly revived."

Rev. L. H. Kennedy, Hazlehurst, Miss.: "At a meeting just closed there were two conversions, seven united with the Church, and several wanderers from the fold were reclaimed."

Rev. L. Boon, Marion, Miss.: "We have just closed a meeting in which five persons joined the Church. We have four Sunday-schools on this work, all doing well."

Rev. M. Dale, Pastor of Wesley Chapel of this city reports that the Sunday-school of that Church is now in a very prosperous condition. The average attendance numbers two hundred. The plan is to interest, instruct, and make the school a spiritual blessing to all who attend. Besides the ordinary clases, infant, primary, testament and bible, there are numerous special classes; one taught by the pastor composed exclusively of preachers and exhorters; three adult classes in which some of the oldest church members are found, and a normal class is soon to be organized for the training of teachers. The visit of Dr. Ford, and the holding of the Sunday-school Convention, had a very marked effect for good upon the school. The zeal and enthusiasm aroused in teachers and scholars exerts such an influence outside as will fill our house to overflowing.

General News Items.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Liberia, the Washington colored men say, is a Southern snare and delusion; they propose to go West.

During the past nine months 1798 persons, mostly from Ohio and Indiana, have settled in Tennessee, and principally in East and Middle Tennessee, but few of them coming to the Western District of the State.

Full returns from the New Hampshire election give Prescott, the Republican candidate, 1514 majority over McKean, Democrat, and elect Prescott Governor by 828 plurality. The vote was unusually large, exceeding that cast at the last Presidential election.

The deepest water found in the Mississippi river by the coast survey is a short distance below Bonnet Carre crevasse, where they found forty fathoms, or 240 feet. It is no doubt the deepest place in the river. At New Orleans, where it appears so deep, there is less than half so much.

A Confederate monument in the soldiers' cemetery at Lynchburg, Va., was struck by lightning during a recent storm and so badly broken that there is danger of the whole falling. The two top blocks of marble, representing the States of Maryland and Texas, and the eagle surmounting them were knocked to pieces.

Secretary Sherman says the balance of trade in our favor during the past three years amounts to $414.064.666. This means that within this period the people of the United States have sold over $400,000,000 more to the world than they have purchased. This is a most gratifying showing.

CHARLESTON, S. C. March 22.—The Liberian ship Azor was consecrated here to-day in the presence of 5000 colored people by Bishop Brown, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church. Several addresses were made, all breathing a missionary spirit. Politics were not discussed.

The bill passed by the Mississippi Legislature a few days before adjournment, in aid of the Ship Island, Ripley and Kentucky Railroad, donates a large body of land held by the State to assist in its construction, and provides for the employment of convicts along the line of the road. The act requires the company to begin the work of construction at both ends of the road within six months.

About four hundred German immigrants, with their wives and families, have just arrived in Taylor county, Texas, from Ohio. They have bought an even hundred thousand acres of land at a dollar and a half an acre, cash down, and have an abundance of capital and improved agricultural implements with which to commence farming operations at once.

A Texas camel-breeder, speaking of the rearing of the "ships of the desert," says: They are no more trouble to raise than horses or cattle. The colts for the first three or four days are rather tender and require close attention, but after that take their chances with the herd. They feed on cactus and brush, eschewing all grasses that cattle and horses eat, if the favorite cactus can be had. The price at which they are sold, the ease with which they are raised, their extreme docility, and the adaptibility of our climate to their nature, would seem to indicate that camel-raising is a profitable business in Texas. Mr. Lanlear says there is one camel in the herd that has traveled 150 miles between sun and sun, and that most any well-broke camel is good for more than 100 miles a day.

Death of Rev. H. R. Parmenter.

Bishop Haven, in Zion's Herald, gives the following concerning the life and death of this brother who, for several years has been a leading and much beloved minister of our Church in Georgia:

Rev. H. R. Parmenter died at Newnan, Georgia, on Monday evening, March 4th, aged fifty-three years and four months. He had been sick for some time of consumption. His last sickness was about four months. He suffered much in his last weeks, especially from nervous excitement, an unusual accompaniment of his chief disease. He died peacefully, rejoicing in the support of the Gospel he had preached.

Bro. Parmenter is well-known in the New England Conference. He was born in New York city, but was brought up in Worcester. He joined the New England Conference in 1852, and served acceptably in Woburn, North Reading, Gloucester, Newburyport and Hubbardston. He then took a superannuated relation, and remained out of the work for nine years. He re-entered the work in 1871, and was stationed at West Brookfield. His health was too feeble to stand the rigors of the New England climate, and he was transferred to the Georgia Conference in 1873. He was stationed three years at La Grange, and was one year Presiding Elder of the La Grange District. The labors were such that he was compelled to leave that district after one year's service. He was sent to Newnan where he was not able to do any effective work.

His funeral was held at his church in Newnan on Tuesday the 5th. Rev. Mr. Glinn, of the M. E. Church South, preached a sermon on "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." Rev. Mr. Purks, of the same Church, and Rev. Mr. Stacy of the Presbyterian Church, also took part in the exercise. Rev. Mr. Standing, his predecessor in the station took charge of the exercises and gave an address. The body was carried to Atlanta, where the funeral services were attended in Loyd Street the next day, under the charge of Dr. Fuller. His Presiding Elder, Rev. Mr. Fisher, made a very feeling address, as did also Bro. Standing. The writer spoke of his acquaintance with him in their old Conference, and of the value of his work in this field. Rev. James Mitchell led in prayer. He is buried close beside his brother in the Conference, and his fellow-laborer here, Rev. Dr. Cobleigh, from whom he received his license to preach.

It was a beautiful, sunny, summer day, when the crowd of mourners gathered about his grave. He has come far to die, but will prove that this seed of the Lord cast into the ground, will bring forth much fruit. He was much beloved here. He had been in labors most abundant. The people for whom he laid down his life esteemed him very highly in love for his work's sake. The large congregation at Newnan and Atlanta testified to this regard. His widow, left alone in the world, will receive much sympathy in her old home, as well as where he died. He rests from his labors, but his works will long and blessedly follow.

Rev. Thomas J. Abbott.

The death of this brother occurred at his home in South Lawrence, Mass., Thursday night, March 7th, 1878. He will be remembered by our readers as an occasional correspondent of the SOUTHWESTERN. He was a good man, and his sudden death will cause wide spread sorrow. Zion's Herald gives the following particulars:

We announce with sincere sorrow the sudden death of Rev Thos. J. Abbott, of South Lawrence. He preached on Sabbath, the 3d. On Monday a malignant pustule developed upon his nose; no alarm, however, was felt until Thursday, when its fatal character was fully disclosed. Brother Abbott was delirious from this time until his death, Thursday night. He leaves a wife and three children; a daughter now quite an invalid. Brother Abbott was an earnest, devoted and holy minister of the Gospel, fond of his work and zealous in its execution. He united with the New England Conference in 1858, and was stationed at Brookfield. He had a succession of good appointments. In 1873 he was transferred to Centenary Church, Charleston, S. C., where he remained for three years, laboring with great zeal and devotion for the good of his own flock and for the benefit of the Southern freedmen generally. He has been enjoying a very successful pastorate at South Lawrence, and his sudden death fills the membership with grief. A good man, an excellent minister, an earnest laborer in every true reform, and a hearty friend has thus been suddenly, but safely, removed from toil to rest. May his departure be sanctified to the instruction of all his surviving brethren!

APRIL 7, 1878.—JOSIAH'S EARLY PIETY.
SCRIPTURE—2 Chron. 34: 1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."—Eccl. 12: 1.

TOPIC.—Zeal for God.
(Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.)

Seeking After God (1-3). Josiah began to seek God "while he was yet young." Manasseh did not begin until he was old. How easy it was for Josiah to find God—how hard it was for Manasseh! was scourged into repentance—Josiah sought God voluntarily. The one responded to the first inward invitations of the Spirit—the other would not hearken unto them, and, so, had to listen to the more imperative voice of God's judgments. The one gave the unfolding bud—the other nothing but the withered and empty husk of his life to the Lord. How happy was the one life—how unutterably sad was the other! "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."

The next thing worthy of notice is that he began to work for God while he still was young. He did not wait until he was older, nor until other people had set him the example, or urged him to go forward. But, when he was only twenty years old, he began to purge the city and the land from its abominations. Those work best for God who begin to work the earliest for him. [illegible] convert puts off laboring [illegible] it is pretty sure [illegible] the vast array of [illegible] who are the sure and [illegible] church. Is it hard [illegible] young man [illegible] arrayed against [illegible] did ever a [illegible] God under [illegible]? [illegible] the power of a king [illegible] the arm [illegible] up to [illegible] the [illegible] service of [illegible] young men [illegible] anything [illegible] he had to [illegible] though [illegible] it is [illegible] king [illegible] Judah.

long remain in ignorance of it; for, as he halted before one of the sepulchers desiring to know what was the title that had caught his eye, he was informed by the men of the city to whom the story had come by tradition, that it was the sepulcher of the man of God which came from Judah, and proclaimed these things that thou hast done against the altar of Bethel." Told in the presence of the still smoking altars, and by the grave of the prophet who had given utterance to the prediction, how powerfully this story must have affected the men who repeated it, and, especially the king who heard, and who had so signally just fulfilled it to the letter. Reverently they left the bones of the man of God in their resting place, together with those of the prophet from Samaria, whose earnest injunction to his son had been that they might be laid beside those of the prophet from Judah, "for," he said, "the sayings which he cried shall surely come to pass." 1 K. 13: 22.

Repairing God's Temple (8).—There are three distinct periods in that part of the life of Josiah now under consideration:—the time when he began to seek the Lord; the time when he began to purge the land; and the time when he began to repair the house of the Lord. These acts happened in the sixteenth, twentieth, and twenty-sixth years of his life respectively. The record does not say when he found the Lord, but from the fact that he entered upon the task of destroying idolatry four years after he began to seek him, it is to be presumed that he had some assurance that he had secured acceptance with him. But how little his experience then was to be compared with that fuller knowledge of God which he acquired when he was made acquainted with the book of the law that was discovered while the temple was being repaired! Every convert soon after he finds the Lord should also find the book of the law.

His method of reform was a little singular. We should have thought that it would have been better that judgment should have begun at the house of God. Instead of this, he commenced outside of it. He set out to remove the abominations throughout the country while the temple was still reeking with impurity!

He began that way, but, as we have learned in the first part of the lesson, he finally purged the temple before he thoroughly purified the land. Not infrequently we have that same mistake repeated now. There can be no real revival throughout the land that does not commence in the house of God.

Roman Morality under Roman Catholic Domination.

The illustrations of the corrupting influence of modern Roman Catholic supremacy crowd upon our attention from every direction. We have just now before us some curious reliable statistical facts reported in a recent number of El Solfeo, an [illegible] journal of prominence. These statistics show that in 1870—that is, before Rome was the capital of the kingdom of Italy—there were in the Eternal City (for a population of 205,000 inhabitants) [illegible] cardinals, clergy, among cardinals, bishops, prelates, and curas; [illegible] monks, and 2,117 nuns; in all [illegible] religious of both sexes. The number of births reached in the same year to 4,378, of which 1,215 were legitimate, and 3,163 illegitimate; the illegitimates, therefore, being in the proportion of 75.25 per cent. of the total of births. Comparing Rome with other capitals of Europe, it results that, for every 100 legitimate births, there are illegitimate—in London, 4; in Paris, [illegible]; in Brussels, 9; in Rome, 148. [illegible] in regard to crime, did the [illegible] occupy a favorable [illegible] they were annexed [illegible] King Victor Emanuel. [illegible] corresponding to [illegible] years of the Pontifical [illegible] show that there was [illegible] one murder in England [illegible] 187,000 inhabitants; in [illegible] one for every 166,000; in [illegible] for every 100,000; in [illegible] for every 4,113; in [illegible] every 2,750; and in [illegible] the Pope, one for every [illegible] are sufficiently [illegible] Y. Hell.

From an article on future punishment, in the Editor's Portfolio of the Sunday Magazine, for April, we take the following:

Then, there is a sort of spirit of communism in the community extending itself to spiritual things. People cannot bear that there shall be distinctions either in this world or in the next. The leveling spirit does in theology what it does in politics; it obfuscates the intellect that would discriminate; it dulls the sensibilities that would feel; and it deadens the conscience. On the tremendous theme of the awful hereafter—awful, whatever may be a man's condition in eternity—men stand in the corner of the streets and joke, as men did joke in Paris standing about the guillotine and on the bank of the river of blood. Manifestly these men are not in earnest. My spiritual condition, and that of the millions of my fellow-men, cannot be a subject for discussion in the drawing-room in the intervals of light conversation, or of petty jests with my partner in the intervals of a dance.

Men are not interested in hell. They are simply interested in amusing themselves with a new sensation, and, having no deep feeling upon the subject, they would fain stir up the clergy, to know what they think. Of what importance is it what a man's opinion is? Dr. This, Professor That, Rev. Mr. So-and-so, give their "opinions," and they are paraded in the public prints with great headings.

How thoroughly ridiculous all this is! The important question is, What does Almighty God teach us in the Bible in regard to our hereafter? Each man must answer that for himself after solemn, prayerful study of the Word of God.

No one can know anything about eternity, so as to tell it to us, except God. We know on that subject only what God has revealed, and what we are able to comprehend.

We see no good of the present trifling with the subject, unless there shall come a reaction in which men shall feel their want of sense, their want of sensibility, their want of conscience, in indulging the spirit which now prevails through general society. If a sudden opening of their eyes to the folly and wickedness of their present wit should lead them into manly, honest and sober thoughts on the most important themes, then, out of this evil, good may come; but if this be not the result, we see nothing to be gained by these discussions.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following rule as expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.

3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

Among the Dead Failures

Of the past, how many bogus nostrums may be numbered! Beginning their careers with a tremendous flourish of trumpets, blazoned for a time in the public prints and on flaming posters, soon, but not too soon, were they relegated to the limbo of things lost on earth. But Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a living and thriving remedy. It goes on, curing and to cure. Neither underhand nor open competition affect it. On the contrary, contrast with inferior rival preparations only increases its popularity. It has been repeatedly imitated, but without success. Counterfeits of it have been surreptitiously introduced, but have fallen flat. Everywhere it entrenches itself in the confidence of the people; and well it may, for it is a thoroughly reliable invigorant of the feeble, banishes dyspepsia and constipation, braces the nerves, cures rheumatic ailments and kidney complaints, and eradicates and prevents intermittent and remittent fevers. mar7-4t.

Charming Pictures.—To introduce their goods, J. L. Patten & Co., 162 William street, N. Y., will send a package of Decalcomanie Pictures with illustrated catalogue, to every reader of this paper who will send eight cents (stamps taken) for mailing expenses; these pictures are highly colored, beautiful, and are easily transferred to any object so as to imitate the most beautiful painting.

Storrs Harrison & Co., Painesville, Ohio, offer in another column a very attractive list of plants at surprisingly low prices. The firm have always been found attentive to business, and their plants are first class and just as represented. They are worthy of patronage.

A Time-saving and Labor-saving Book of of Great Value to Preachers and Bible Scholars.

JUST PUBLISHED,

HOMOLETICAL INDEX:

A HAND-BOOK OF TEXTS, THEMES, AND AUTHORS FOR THE USE OF PREACHERS AND BIBLE SCHOLARS GENERALLY,

Embracing Twenty Thousand Citations of Scripture Texts, and of Discourses founded thereon, under a Twofold Arrangement:

I. TEXTUAL.

In which all the principal Texts of Scripture, together with the various Themes they have suggested, are quoted and set forth to the order of the Sacred Canon, from Genesis to Revelation: to which is added a list of passages cited from the Old Testament in the New.

II. TOPICAL.

In which Bible Themes, with reference to Texts and Authors, are classified and Arranged in Alphabetical Order, forming at once a Key to Homiletical Literature in general, and a complete Topical Index of the Scriptures on a New Plan.—With valuable Appendices.

By J. H. PETTINGILL, A. M.

With an Introduction by GEO. E. DAY, D.D., Professor of Theology, Yale College.

THE HOMILETICAL INDEX is undenominational, citing and referring to the published discourses and writings of the best preachers and commentators of all ages and of every name.

It is a work of great research, unique in its character, and so admirably arranged as to bring within the compass of 330 octavo pages the cream of hundreds of volumes, and to transform every Bible scholar's library, and our large public libraries, into one complete Homiletical Commentary that can be easily handled, while it refers him, at once, to what any one of some thousands of leading divines have said or written upon any particular passage of Scripture.

Its object and plan are very heartily commended by many of our representative men of different denominations, who have had the opportunity of inspecting, in advance, specimen pages. Four Appendices, containing much valuable matter, have since been added, and it is believed that the whole volume, now complete, will fully justify their favorable anticipation.

One octavo volume, of 330 pages, price, $3.00. Interleaved edition, for the convenience of those who may wish to enter new works as they are published, and their own discourses, 50 cents additional. For sale by booksellers generally. Sent postage-paid, to any address on receipt of the price. Address

HELP!
FOR THE WEAK, NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED!

The afflicted can now be restored to perfect health and bodily energy, at home, without the use of medicine of any kind.

PULVERMACHER'S
ELECTRIC BELTS
AND BANDS,

For self-application to any part of the body, meet every requirement.

The most learned physicians and scientific men of Europe and this country indorse them.

These noted Curative appliances have now stood the test for upward of thirty years, and are protected by Letters-Patent in all the principal countries of the world. They were decreed the only Award of Merit for Electric Appliances at the great World's Exhibitions—Paris, Philadelphia, and elsewhere—and have been found the most valuable, safe simple, and efficient known treatment for the cure of disease.

READER, ARE YOU AFFLICTED?

and wish to recover the same degree of health, strength, and energy as experienced in former years? Do any of the following symptoms or class of symptoms meet your diseased condition? Are you suffering from ill-health in any of its many and multifarious forms, consequent upon a lingering, nervous, chronic or functional disease? Do you feel nervous, debilitated, fretful, timid, and lack the power of will and action? Are you subject to loss of memory, have spells of fainting, fullness of blood in the head, feel listless, moping, unfit for business or pleasure, and subject to fits of melancholy? Are your kidneys, stomach, or blood, in a disordered condition? Do you suffer from rheumatism, neuralgia or aches and pains? Have you been indiscreet in early years and find yourself harassed with a multitude of gloomy symptoms? Are you timid, nervous, and forgetful, and your mind continually dwelling on the subject? Have you lost confidence in yourself and energy for business pursuits? Are you subject to any of the following symptoms: Restless nights, broken sleep, nightmare, dreams, palpitation of the heart, bashfulness, confusion of ideas, aversion to society, dizziness in the head, dimness of sight, pimples and blotches on the face and back, and other despondent symptoms? Thousands of young men, the middle aged, and even the old, suffer from nervous and physical debility. Thousands of females, too, are broken down in health and spirits from disorders peculiar to their sex, and who, from false modesty or neglect prolong their sufferings. Why, then, further neglect a subject so productive of health and happiness when there is at hand a means of restoration?

PULVERMACHER'S
ELECTRIC BELTS AND BANDS

'Poor Puff!' said Dot. 'She's got all wetted.' And she didn't seem to think of herself being wet or anything but all right, anyway. And so we three floated there, as fine as if we were doing it a-purpose, till the boat came. And Dot was wrapped up in a big coat, and I took an oar to keep warm, and the kitten and the life buoy wer'n't left in the water either. When we got on the ship again, the cap'n's wife—well, you saw and heard what she said. That took me aback more than the being overboard did. That wasn't anything.—N. Y. Independent.

APPEARANCE.

When a man begins to go down hill he is apt to betray the fact by his exterior appearances; he wears a long face, allows his clothes to look shabby, and looks like one bereft of hope or prospects. Now, this is very poor policy; the sympathy of friends is not gained by wearing a dirty shirt; and unless a man acts as though he had some confidence in himself, he must not expect to inspire it in others. And so with the external appearance of everything. Neatness of appearance does not end with man's credit, but often enhances the value of articles which he may have for sale. This is especially true upon the farm, and we will venture to say that the farmer who attends to the exterior of things in general, such as clean stables and animals, clean yards and buildings, and fences in good repair, will obtain five to ten per cent. more for the products of his farm than one who neglects such simple matters.

If any one doubts the effect of external appearance upon values in market or elsewhere, let him try sending butter to market in an old weather-beaten firkin, no matter how good the butter or clean the vessel may be inside. If this does not satisfy, try some stained or dirty eggs, or half-plucked poultry. Producing a good article is one thing and selling it to advantage is quite another; and the good salesman generally makes the most money of the two. The importance of a fair exterior can hardly be over-estimated. This principle is potent in any branch of trade, and in every branch of society; therefore it is too important to be overlooked or passed unheeded.

KNOWING PEOPLE.

There are always some people in every community who imagine themselves, to use a common phrase, "very smart," and they are generally all the busybody kind. One of these can do more harm in a town or neighborhood than a dozen good people can set at rights. No minister ever comes into a place but these smart ones can pick any amount of flaws in his every-day walk, or his sermons are always too long or too short, too soft or too hard, or "he can't preach," and a hundred other imaginary imperfections which the less pretentious never think of mentioning. But these knowing ones [illegible] here; for no enterprise was ever started but what is entirely contrary to their views. Other people never build a pig-pen, a smoke-house, [illegible] a barn, a dwelling, a school-house, or a church to suit these babblers; and no newspaper was ever run according to [illegible] ideas of the business, and [illegible] want have anything to do with it, and I'll keep everybody else from [illegible]

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

The Class-Leader.
His Work, and How to Do It.
With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.
BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,
Author of "Garden of Sorrows."
12mo.....................$1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical heads. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

Natural Selection.

Investigators of natural science have demonstrated beyond controversy, that throughout the animal kingdom the "survival of the fittest" is the only law that vouchsafes thrift and perpetuity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of man? An inferior cannot supersede a superior article. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million dollars per annum, while the amount exported foots up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

AN OPEN LETTER.
IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

ROCKPORT, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR;—Having read in your paper reports of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am induced to tell "what I know about catarrh," and I fancy the "snuff" and "inhaling-tube" makers (mere dollar-grabbers) would be glad if they could emblazon a similar cure in the papers. For 26 years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became completely closed. "Snuff," "dust," "ashes," "inhaling-tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the so-called catarrh snuff, until I became a valuable tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered or what a miserable being I was. My head ached over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed for many successive days, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time lasted continuously for 168 hours. All sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, body shrunken and weakened, nervous system shattered, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting seven-eighths of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me of my suffering. A favorable notice in your paper of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy induced me to purchase a package, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, which applies the remedy by hydrostatic pressure, the only way compatible with common sense. Well, Mr. Editor, it did not cure me in three-fourths of a second, nor in one hour or month, but in less than eight minutes I was relieved, and in three months entirely cured, and have remained so for over sixteen months. While using the Catarrh Remedy, I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify my blood and strengthen my stomach. I also kept my liver active and bowels regular by the use of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets. If my experience will induce other sufferers to seek the same means of relief, this letter will have answered its purpose.

Yours truly, S. D. REMICK.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Alterative, or Blood-cleansing.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Pectoral.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is a Cholagogue, or Liver Stimulant.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
Is Tonic.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By reason of its Alterative properties, cures Diseases of the Blood and Skin, as Scrofula, or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores, Blotches, Pimples, and Eruptions. By virtue of its Pectoral properties, it cures Bronchial, Throat and Lung Affections, Incipient Consumption, Lingering coughs, and Chronic Laryngitis. Its Cholagogue properties render it an unequaled remedy for Biliousness, Torpid Liver, or "Liver Complaint;" and its Tonic Properties make it equally efficacious in curing Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and Dyspepsia.

Where the skin is sallow and covered with blotches and pimples, or where there are scrofulous swellings and affections, a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery will effect an entire cure. If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint," only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect cures, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy.

NO ROOM FOR JESUS.

O, [illegible] crowded so full,
[illegible]

[illegible]

at their evening party. It is the old human heart with the same conditions, the same longings, hopes and sorrows; the same sins and shame. And this has led us to see that we are brother to all who live.

The gospel taught Paul this lesson. The history of this ship; its long voyage, the passengers and crew; the wreck and the escape of every man on board in answer to his prayers, teach us a lesson we would do well to ponder. The observing mind may draw much food for its nurture.

Here is a ship; well officered and manned: all told she carried two hundred and fifty souls. During the voyage a storm swept across the bosom of that sea and that ship was tossed about for two weeks. These were weeks of terror to that band of human beings. There was one man on board whose mind took on two shapes of action—intellectual and emotional; his mind took in the peril and his heart was stirred in behalf of all. Jesus came to teach men how to love each other and weep. Paul learned this and went to pray for them. Prayed when no officer—not one knew where they were; it was dark and the storm still swept on—but God knew where they were and who was on board. His eyes were in every place. He sent his angel, who said, as he stood at his side, "Fear not Paul, thou must be brought before Ceasar: and lo, God hath given thee all them that sail with thee."

It is our purpose to present to you the claims of three millions of brothers—men called sailors. This piece of maratine history shows the interest of both God and Paul in this ship and its crew.

God's interest in ships can be traced far back. It is recorded in Gen. [illegible] Noah built the first ship but God drew the plan. His purpose in the text, as stated by the angel was to save these souls. So His purpose in planning the ship which Noah built was to save [illegible] from [illegible] A [illegible] in the moral [illegible] Love had been trampled down as elephants in the east trample down the wild rice—either the church or the world must be destroyed. One of the great laws which thought and observation have discovered is that "a body set in motion unless resisted, rolls on forever." Sin had been set in motion and rolled on until God saw His church must perish or the world, [illegible] He built the ship to save the church.

Christ selected fishermen who [illegible] to apostleship; four at least [illegible] seafaring men. It was [illegible] of peril to some of His [illegible] when the vessel might [illegible] been shivered by the blast, [illegible] a God He stood up and uttered [illegible] sentence and saved his [illegible] and their vessel, "Peace [illegible]." Note now the considerations that demand our interest. [illegible] obligations to the sailor should [illegible] our heartiest interest in his welfare.

[illegible] that hour when the great [illegible] to the Gentiles was carried [illegible] ship from Malta on his [illegible] to Rome until now, both [illegible] and the church owe a [illegible] the sailor. Long ages [illegible] Ezekiel (27 chapt) [illegible] description of Tyre as she "sat in the [illegible] of the seas." The eyes of [illegible] saw the splendor from afar, [illegible] that her glory was due [illegible] white winged fleets. Car[illegible] so Venice, [illegible] by the sea, through [illegible] commerce. The world owes [illegible] as much as any one arm [illegible]

[illegible] you turn to the map of Europe [illegible] an island rising out [illegible]; that island is insignificant [illegible] say, "It blotted [illegible] miss it." Yet that [illegible] most powerful on the [illegible]. There is more of [illegible] greatness [illegible] there than [illegible] sea. Eng[illegible] to her com[illegible]. All the rest [illegible] does not equal [illegible] her commerce or [illegible] should [illegible]

From the day America was discovered until now seamen have had a large share in the growth and greatness of this Western world. If you study the history of our own Government from the first vessel bearing emigrants to our shores, or when Paul Jones and his men gained renown for our native land, or Commodore Perry, who in the war of 1812 vindicated our cause so nobly on Lake Erie, it will be learned that our obligation to the hardy sons of the sea is such that we, as a people, should cancel.

Look at the bravery of the sailor. History has recorded no more heroic deeds than those performed by these hardy sons of the wave. Leonidas and his companions are honored in all lands to which their story has gone; but there have been as brave deeds and as noble sacrifices by the men of the sea as of this three hundred. Whose heart is not moved at the dying words of a noble sailor who, standing firmly at his post amid the tempest while the ship was almost foundering clinging to the wheel to prevent her going over, at last, crushed and dying, was asked why he did not let go, answered with almost the last grasp, "Three hundred lives are worth more than one, sir."

We owe such men the sympathy and power of the gospel. Sailors need Christianity because it alone can unfold the forces of moral power in the realm of goodness. We all carry dangerous elements in our hearts. Good old Vinet says, "A reprobate is frequently concealed in an honest man, and he often needs only a circumstance to make him a felon." John Foster gives us the same thought in a different garb when he says, "It needs only a little civilization to make one of them look down from a tower, and the other look up through a grate." The sailor is exposed to extraordinary temptation. He touches all lands, and is of necessity thrown with the vile and cruel. Those who seek him, as a rule, consider him a being to be plundered; and without the internal supports and power of the gospel to aid in resisting these circumstances, he sinks under the evil and passes prematurely to the grave, friendless and pennyless often. His condition has elicited the attention of many governments within a few years past, and much has been done to make his life less of a slavery. While the nations along the seas owe him much they have done less for him than other classes. We plead for him, as a man, for his physical betterment, but for his soul we plead more earnestly. A noble sailor once upon a time won the admiration of great multitudes. He had saved many lives of passengers from a wrecked steamer, and for such heroism a costly medal was awarded him; but during the next voyage he died and the medal was transferred to other hands. He needed more than a medal: something which he could carry with him, a quality of soul which the gospel alone imparts. He needs the Bread of Life. The word of God is in your hands; it is the sword of the spirit, and should be not only given to the sailor, but you must teach him its use. As told in the old story books of the past, King Arthur sat in his boat on the lake, one beautiful summer day, and soon he discovered an arm rising out of the water bearing a sword which it placed in the King's hand, and with it he afterwards achieved his great renown. So you may place this in the hand of the sons of the deep, and they will be enabled to overcome the influences which swamp them—not on the sea but the shore. The time has been when the sailor could say, "No man cares for my soul." But God put it into the mind of the Church and about the year 1818 a society was organized in London to support a floating chapel for seamen. But in 1812 a society was organized in Boston for the religious and moral improvement of seamen—this was the first organization, of its nature, in the world. And a remarkable fact is, that in 1824 a similar society was organized in New Orleans, La. Here in our own city, in 1828, the American Seamen's Friend Society was brought into existence. Its influence is felt in almost every section of the world where ships go. However much remains to be done [illegible] this multitude. The lessons [illegible] out of this text have governed [illegible] organization from the beginning. The necessity of human ef[illegible] its founders knew God prom[illegible] and, but that end [illegible] by available [illegible] on board [illegible] afterward [illegible] the sailors remained and managed the ship they could not be saved. Co-operation is God's method.

The object of this organization is to save the sailor and then use him as an instrument in saving others. If you make the sailor a Christian you set in motion forces which will be felt to the extremes of the earth. He becomes a missionary and tells his story of Christ's love to men who never heard that Christianity has a heart. Men are well versed in the fact that Christianity has a theory, and that there has been a church, and doctrines and grandeur, but few have yet learned that it has a heart of tenderness and love. When he learns this he is half won. These Bethels tell this story, and he enters often to be saved. A sailor's conversion almost invariably carries power with it. Men look upon the average sailor as reckless, as past hope. Yet he has a tender spot in his heart, if you only search for it you may reach it. Only lead him to the Savior, and the world will say, "What a change!" When he, who was perhaps a blasphemer, or a drunkard, becomes a man of prayer, his life becomes a power at once.

Throw them a rope, push out a plank, furnish them a hand launch, a life-boat, and let them have a chance. Give them an equal chance with others.

They need much sympathy, much help—something they must have or perish. Strange as it may sound, when a man turns away from evil, he is often more helpless than while he was in it. Take a drunkard who determines to reform, he is obliged to forego his old company, while the people toward whom he is coming give him no sympathy, no social life. So there is often a time when a man has left evil when he is in more danger than ever before. In his effort to reform he has gone out of both sides! He must find a word of cheer somewhere. You owe him sympathy. He needs it as much as any one. He sails into port a stranger. How is he met? Perhaps the first one to grasp his hand is a villain, called a land shark—one who plies him with honied words, only to lead him into sin. Give him assistance, if not personal get represented by proxy. Send the Chaplain; open the Bethel, and let him feel that he has half a chance. This may be the board on which he may float into heaven. When you pray remember the sailor. He is somebody's child. Far away, some stricken mother wonders, "where is my boy?" He left home, perhaps, without her blessing; and it is a sad thing for any child to pass the threshhold of his home without the parents' blessing. However, in his long absence, no night passes that her prayer does not reach God's ears for the wanderer on the sea.

We attend many services in the sanctuaries of our city, but who ever hears a prayer for the sailor? The condemned man is remembered; the drunkard is held up to God's thought, the sick, the dying, all classes, but the sailor!

This Society is doing much for his salvation. It furnishes libraries for ships to carry across the waters; it furnishes Bethels; it sends out chaplains to greet them with a welcome, and tell of the great salvation. This Society has furnished many a plank on which the sailor has floated into the port of Heaven. It has not been a great while since a dying sailor, in our Charity Hospital, sent me a message, "Let me receive the sacrament before I die." And there, while some were playing cards, and others smiling, and others groaning in their agony, this sailor partook of the holy symbols with as much joy as though that ward was crowded with angels of God. Paul prayed and God gave him for whom he plead.

An Appropriate Answer.

A Universalist preacher had an appointment to preach in a school-house in a Quaker neighborhood in eastern Ohio, and had the undivided attention of his audience while he endeavored to show them that there was no such personal existence as punishment, but that all are punished for their sins in their life—that there will be no day of judgment, and all will go to heaven when they die. He thought he had made a fine impression, and was anxious to preach again for them, and said he would be pleased to make another appointment if they desired it, and gave an opportunity for some one to speak, but all were silent. At last an old gentleman rose and said:

"Frind, if thou hast taught us the truth, we don't need thee any more: and if thou hast taught us a lie, we we don't want thee any more."

He never preached there again.

A Scottish Sermon.

There was a revival in Kilkaldy, in Scotland. A minister dreamed that he went down to the realms of darkness. There was a great conclave of evil spirits. Belzebub sat upon the throne. The question was: "How shall we counteract the influence of the Spirit of God in Kirkaldy."

"Who will go?"

"I will go," said one.

"And what will you tell them?"

"I will tell them there is no God."

"Tell a Scotchman there is no God? The Scotchman has the Bible. He has his eyes open. Avaunt! Who will go?"

"I will go," said another evil spirit.

"What will you tell them?"

"I will tell them there is no Hell."

"What! tell a Scotchman that the God of the Universe has not got a prison? A Scotchman that reads his Bible? A Scotchman that knows that all the most dreadful discriptions in the New Testament of a place of future punishment are from the lips of the Lord Jesus Christ himself? They will laugh at you. Avaunt! Who will go?"

"I will go."

"And what will you tell them?"

"I will tell them that Jesus Christ was not divine."

"What tell a Scotchman that Jesus Christ was not divine? A Scotchman that knows that the whole Gospel of John was written to prove the divinity of the Lord Jesus Christ? Go to America, if you will and teach such doctrines; but you cannot do it successfully in Scotland. Avaunt! Who will go?"

"I will go."

"And what will you tell them?"

"I will tell them there is a God. I will tell them he has a moral government administered by laws. I will tell them there is no law without a penalty. I will tell them that they have all broken that law—that law given in love and mercy. I will tell them they are all justly exposed to the terrible penalty of that law. I will tell them that Jesus Christ was divine; that he died on the cross to save sinners from the everlasting penalty, and the penalty that would be visited upon them in this place forever. I will tell them that Jesus suffered agonies untold for them. I will tell them how he suffered in Gethsemane. I will tell them that in Pilate's hall he was buffeted and scourged and spit upon. I will tell them that on the cross he endured the hidings of his Father's face for them. I will tell them that on Cavalry's cross he bore their sins in his own body on the tree, that they might be saved from Hell, saved from sin and sorrow on earth, saved forever in heaven. I will tell every anxious, weeping sinner in Kirkaldy that the moment he goes and believes in Jesus the Holy Spirit will change his heart, and he will be converted and turned from going down to death and Hell. I will tell them that Jesus stands ready to receive them; that the Holy Spirit stands ready to receive them; that the Holy Spirit stand ready at any time to work that great, that saving change upon them. Yes, in a word" said the evil spirit addressing Beelzebub, "I will tell them anything that any evangelical minister would tell a company of anxious inquirers almost persuaded to become Christians. But," said he—and ah! he said it with a Satanic laugh, with a knowing leer—"I will whisper in the ear of every weeping sinner in Kirkaldy, 'There is time enough yet.' I will walk up and down those aisles, and whenever I see a tear dropped, wherever I see a labored sigh, O! I will bend over and say, 'Sinner that is all right, that is all true what your minister says. It is all neccessary; you should be converted before you die. But there is time enough yet; time enough yet.'"

Beelzebub cried: "Away! away! away! Thou art the one. Fly away to Kirkaldy. Whisper in the ear of every weeping sinner: 'Time enough yet. Time enough yet.'"

O! that is what the Devil is doing here to-night. While for nearly two hours I have been, with aching head and weary frame, saying, "Turn ye, why will ye die?', while I have been telling you that delays are dangerous, there has been another preacher here. I am your friend but he is your enemy. He wants to drag you down to the pit. And he it is that is whispering, "Time enough yet." O! who is the preacher you will listen to? Will you heed the words of your common enemy, or will you heed the words of your friend? Yea, will you heed the words of your Heavenly Father, who with paternal accents and in tenderness cries, "Turn ye—I have given my Son to die for you!"

The Quicksand.

Victor Hugo gives the following impressive discription of a death in the quicksand off a certain coast of Brittany. He says:

"It sometimes happens that a man, traveler or fisherman, walking on the beach at low tide, far from the bank, suddenly notices that for several minutes he has been walking with some difficulty. The strand beneath his feet is like pitch; his soles stick to it; it is sand no longer—it is glue.

"The beach is perfectly dry, but at every step he takes, as soon as he lifts his foot, the print which he leaves fills with water. The eye, however, has noticed no change; the immense strand is smooth and tranquil; all the sand has the same appearance; nothing distinguishes the surface which is solid from that which is no longer so; the joyous little cloud of sandflies continue to leap tumultuously over the wayfarer's feet. The man pursues his way, goes forward, inclines to the land, endeavors to get near the upland. He is not anxious. Anxious about what? Only he feels somehow as if the weight of his feet increases with every step he takes. Suddenly he sins in.

"He sinks in two or three inches. Decidedly he is not on the right road; he stops to take his bearings. All at once he looks at his feet. They have disapeared. The sand covers them. He draws them out of the sand; he will retrace his steps; he turns back; he sinks in deeper. The sand comes up to his ankles; he pulls himself out and then throws himself to the left; the sand is half-leg deep. He throws himself to the right; the same sand comes to his shins. Then he recognizes with unspeakable terror that he is caught in the quicksand, and that he has beneath him the terrible medium in which man can no more walk than the fish can swim. He throws off his load if he has one, lightens himself like a ship in distress; it is already too late; the sand is above his knees. He calls, he waves his hat or his handkerchief; the sand gains on him more and more. If the beach is deserted, if the land is too far off, if there is no help in sight, it is all over.

"He is condemned to that appalling burial, long, infallible, implacable, and impossible to slacken or to hasten, which endures for hours, which seizes you erect, free and in full health, and which draws you by the feet, which at every effort that you attempt, at every shout you utter, drags you a little deeper, sinking you slowly into the earth while you look upon the sea, the birds flying and singing, the sunshine and the sky. The victim attempts to sit down, to lie down, to creep; every movement he makes inters him; he straightens up, he sinks in, he feels that he is being swallowed. He howls, implores, cries to the clouds, despairs.

"Behold him waist deep in the sand. The sand reaches his breast; he is now only a bust. He raises his arms, utters furious groans, clutches the beach with his nails, would hold by that straw, leans upon his elbow, to pull himself out of this soft sheath; sobs frenziedly; the sand rises. The sand reaches his shoulders; the sand reaches his neck; the mouth cries, the sand fills it; silence! The eyes still gaze, the sand shuts them; night! Now the forehead decreases, a little hair flutters above the sand; a hand comes to the surface of the beach, moves, and shakes and disappears. It is the earth-drowing man. The earth filled with the ocean becomes a trap. It presents itself like a plain, and opens like a wave."

Each in His Own Way.

All great works are done by serving God with what we have in hand. Moses was keeping sheep in Midian; God sent him to save Israel, but he shrank from the undertaking. We sympathize with Jethro's herdsman, alone and a stranger, owning not a lamb that he watched. He had nothing but his shepherd's rod, cut out of a thicket; the more crabstick with which he guided his sheep. Any day he might throw it away and cut a better one. And God said:

"What is that in thine hand? With this rod, with this stick, thou shalt save Israel." And so it proved.

"What is that thou hast in thy hand, stranger?"

"An ox goad, with which I urge my lazy beasts."

Used for God, and Shamgar's ox-goad defeats the Philistines.

"What is that in thine hand, David?"

"My sling, with which I keep the wolves from the sheep."

Yet with that sling he slew Goliath, whom an army dared not meet.

"What is that in thine hand, disciple?"

"Nothing but five barley loaves and two little fishes."

"Bring them to me; give them to God." And the multitude was fed.

"What is that in thine hand, poor widow."

"Only two mites."

Give them to God, and behold, the fame of your riches fills the world.

"What hast thou, weeping woman?"

"An alabaster-box of ointment."

Give it to God. Break it; pour it upon the Savior's head, and its sweet perfume is fragrance in the Church until now.

"What hast thou, Dorcas?"

"My needle."

Use it for God, and those coats and garments keep multiplying, and are clothing the naked still.

You are a manufacturer, or a merchant, or a mechanic, or a man of leisure, or a student, or a sewing woman. God wants each of you to serve him where you are. You have your business, use it for God; order it in a godly manner; do not allow wickedness in it; give godly wages; preach Jesus to your clerks—not by a long face, but by being like him and doing good; use your profits for God—feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, visiting the sick, comforting the wretched, spreading the gospel far and wide. What a field you have to glorify God in just where you are! If you have nothing, use your tools for him. He can glorify himself with them as easily as he could with a shepherd's stick, an ox-goad, a sling, or two mites.

A poor girl, who had nothing but a sewing-machine, used it to aid a feeble Church; all her earnings, above her needs, were given toward building a house of worship, and in a year she paid more than others a hundred times richer than she. So you can do if you will. Think of the widow and her two mites, the woman with the alabaster box, and Dorcas and her garments! You may do as much, and have a great reward.—Bible Student.

Prove It.

It is not very difficult for a person to be sunny-tempered when everything is going prosperously with him. When a man has made a handsome sum of money, and all the signs are favorable for his making the same amount to-morrow, how good-natured he can be! When the hour comes to close the store, he takes his hat from the peg, draws on his gloves, and starts for his home feeling kindly towards everybody. He buys a paper of the newsboy, snaps him a dime, and hurries along without waiting for the return change, chuckling to himself as if he had perpetrated a first-class joke. When he comes to his house he smiles at the servant, kisses his wife—or ought to—bounces the baby, and fills the entire household with a sense of his own supreme satisfaction. How easy it is to be good natured under such circumstances! What saints we all are when we have all we want!

But times change. The business sky looks darker and becomes black with ominous clouds. Under our feet run rumblings and the premonitory unsteadiness which always precedes a financial earthquake. The commercial atmosphere is motionless and oppressive; everybody senses danger. Buyers are timid; sellers are suspicions. The current of trade shrinks. Goods remain unsold; paper on which you had relied goes to protest; household expenses begin to crowd; small bills accumulate; duns grow imperative. Ah, now is the time, friend, when good nature in you is a virtue; yes, a grace, and a grace so white that it shall be seen in the highest heaven and noted there. Now is the time for you to show what stuff you are really made of. Now is the time, if you are a gentleman, to prove it. If you love your wife, now is the time to show it; if you have faith in something nobler, higher, sweeter, than this world and its possessions, let that faith be manifest in your conduct everywhere. Don't take a gloomy face, and a surley voice, and a sour temper to your household. That household has its own cares, and troubles, and clouds enough in its own sky. Tell your wife your difficulties; but in such a brave, gentle and loving way as, instead of oppressing her spirits, will cause them rather, to rise buoyantly at the thought that she is fully trusted by you and may be able to help you.—Golden Rule.

According to the Louisville Courier-Journal, the papers of interior Texas "fairly teem with accounts of murders, and homicides have grown so common that it requires some very extraordinary circumstance or other in connection with them to awaken any sort of enthusiasm on the part of the reporters." WASHINGTON, March 31.—The United States Steamer Plymouth, whose voyage up the Mississippi to Natchez in 1876 was so pleasantly greeted by the people in that section, will proceed to New Orleans in May to ascend the river as far as practicable on the June rise, perhaps to St. Louis. If the vessel succeeds in getting so far up the river, it will be the first full rigged ship ever seen at St. Louis.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Although the Commerce Committee has resolved on secrecy, there is reason to believe that in the forthcoming river and harbor bill the Mississippi river will receive about four times as much as was given it in last year's bill. The committee in the first place went over the estimates and made up a bill on the basis of 40 per cent of the estimates. Since then the committee has added $300,000 to the Mississippi river above Cairo, $200,000 of which is for the river above Keokuk.

Miss Vinnie Ream is giving the finishing stroke to her model for the Farragut Square. The statute is to be of heroic size, and represents the sturdy Admiral as he stood upon the deck of the Hartford steaming up past the forts on the memorable morning of the seige of New Orleans. He is represented in naval cap and uniform, sword and belt, one foot resting upon a pulley block and coil of rope, while in his hands a large marine glass is in the act of being raised to his eye. The model when completed will be shipped to Chicopee, Mass., where the artist will superintend the casting. The Government pays $20,000 for the statue.

NEW YORK, March 26.—Judge Blatchford, of the United States District Court, gave a decision to-day in the suit of the United States against ex-Governor Samuel J. Tilden to recover some $150,000 income tax alleged to be due the government by the defendant. The suit, it will be remembered, was brought in the United States District Court when Mr. Tilden was Democratic candidate for President and it is alleged the suit was only brought for political purposes. Counsel for Mr. Tilden set aside the demurrer and the case was argued at great length. Judge Blatchford's decision is quite lengthy and cites innumerable authorities. The principles are the same as in the United States Supreme Court's decision in the Dollar Savings Bank case and the Rhode Island case lately decided by the Supreme Court. He sustained the defendant's demurrer to the first count in complaint on the ground that in the years covered by this count Mr. Tilden has made a return of his income and paid the tax in such return. In the other eleven counts in the complaint he sustains the plaintiffs, the United States, in their demurrer to the answer of the defense, holding virtually that the government was not bound by the action of the United States assessor as its agent, and that Mr. Tilden was required to make himself a return of his income, which he had not done.

The case is now to proceed to trial by jury on the amount of income of Mr. Tilden during the years in which he made no return himself. In three years Mr. Tilden allowed the United States assessor to make returns, and paid the tax on such return, together with the penalty [illegible] five per cent; but this the [illegible] holds was not sufficient, as will [illegible] seen by the decision above. It [illegible] more than probable that Mr. Ti[illegible] counsel will appeal the case to [illegible] United States Supreme Court.

Praise the Lord.

Shakespeare it was who said:

"The soul that hath no music in it
And is not moved by concord of sweet sounds
Is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils."

Sing to a Britton "God save the Queen," and his eyes will moisten with the recollections of his native land.

What words will stir the heart of a Scotchman like those of Burns.

The Marseillaise hymn calls up the Frenchman from his lethargy.

Do you wish to make the pulse of an American beat quicker, then sing to him the "Star Spangled Banner," or "Hail Columbia."

And this has been true in all the ages. Roll back the tide of the centuries to their remotest periods and the power of music has ever been the same. How nobly does the "Sweet Singer of Israel" carry us to the rivers of Babylon. What a magical power there was in the harp and the instruments of many strings. David was not less a musician than a king.

"The harp the monarch minstrel swept
Oft softened men of iron mould,
No ear so dull, no soul so cold
That felt not, that fired not to the tone
Till David's lyre grew mightier that his throne."

Religious song is a beautiful part of our worship—of all worship.

"Borne on the swelling notes our souls aspire
While solemn airs improve the sacred fire
And angels lean from heaven to hear."

Among the Jews it was imposing in its grandeur, as we learn in the 23d chapter of 1st Chronicles. Not less than four thousand singers and musicians were appointed from among the Levites under two hundred and eighth-eight principal leaders. These were arranged in twenty-four companies who officiated weekly, by regular rotation, in the temple. One portion of these chanted or sung, while the others played on the instruments.

Here were found the masters of Jewish song, Asaph, Heman and Jeduthun.

The Pagan nations in all ages have celebrated the worship of their idol gods in the temples with songs of praise.

Not only did Christ sing at the last supper but the apostles after him sang much. Paul and Silas, lacerated by cruel scourgings prayed and sang praises to God in the prison at midnight.

The records of the ages of persecution tell us of the martyrs who went to heaven from the stake and flame, [illegible] songs of praise. The early [illegible] were great singers. die. They will be sung by the masses to the end of time, and will do more to preserve in the popular mind the idea of God and of his creative power than all the writings of Paley or Butler.

How soothingly and tenderly do the words of Cooper come to us in the time of deep trouble:

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform,
He plants his footsteps in the sea
And rides upon the storm."

The soul pants after a divine life, a holy life—then how sweet the words:

"O, for a closer walk with God—
A calm and heavenly frame
A light to shine upon the road
That leads me to the Lamb."

There are times when the soul is filled with praise. How fittingly do the words of Bishop Kent come to our minds. No stanza in any language is sung so much as that.

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
Praise Him all creatures here below
Praise Him above ye heavenly host,
Praise Father, Son and Holy Ghost."

The hymns of the Wesleys are rich in the experimental, the practical; in that they differ from those of Watts, who wrote majestically. Wesley was not less theological but more tender, touching. Watts had just the mind and heart to write—

"The Lord Jehovah reigns,
His throne is built on high
The garments he assumes
Are light and majesty,
His glories shine with beams so bright
No mortal eye could bear the sight."

Wesley breaks out in singing:

"O joyful sound of gospel grace
Christ shall in me appear,
I, even I, shall see his face
I shall be holy here.

The glorious crown of righteousness
To me reached out I view,
Conqueror through him I soon shall sieze
And wear it as my due."

We do not mean to say Watts was not a Christian, but he did not cherish the fond hope which filled a Wesley's heart. That good man looks up towards the shining gates and sings;

"Could we but climb where Moses stood
And view the landscape o'er,
Not Jordan's waves nor death's cold flood
Should fright us from the shore."

While Wesley breaks out singing from a heart full of spiritual hope;

"The promised land from Pisgah's top
I now exault to see,
My hope is full (O, glorious hope,)
Of immortality.

Thus did Watts pant to know what Wesley enjoyed—the one hoped and expected—the other possessed and shouted that experience with a heart full of love and a soul on fire. Sing praises all ye people!

The Temperance Reform.

We have endeavured to look this temperance question fairly in the face, to look at it from every attainable standpoint, and the only conclusion gained is this: there is no real safety but in total abstinence. The motto of every man and woman should be "touch not, taste not, handle not."

Temperance, as a word, we know, primarily means moderation, and moderation means a little now and then. But we discover that alcohol is too strong and human nature is too weak to be trusted with even a little. We frankly admit there is not sufficient poison in a single glass to kill anybody, but we must not forget that human nature is a piece of such complicated machinery that the finite mind cannot comprehend it. The tastes are so fine, the sensibilities are so acute, the springs are so subtle that the slightest touch may cause motion, and once in motion the vibration will go on and on with ever augmenting force toward utter ruin, and nothing short of omnipotent power can check the progress.

We know that a great many strongly contend that a man can drink occasionally, and be none the worse, that a little does not harm, that moderation is possible. But then, we ask, where is the benefit to be derived? And who can tell how much better the drunkard might have been without it? And where is the man, young or old, who knows when he takes the first glass that he is just of that peculiar organization; that temptation in that direction will not overpower him. Of course they all think they know, but thinking and knowing are very different things.

Science tells us that the brain is what is first affected by strong drink. Then it follows that the more brain a man has the more there is to be affected, and the less brain the less effect. Young men, you to whom God has given clear bright intellects and well balanced minds, beware! Although at first it may only touch the brain in its wave of influence, in the end, alas! from the crown of the head to the sole of the foot, physically, mentally, morally, it blasts and withers as with the smiting of death.

Ah, dear friends, human hearts are weak—it will not do to trifle.

[illegible] such frightful mein
[illegible] to be seen;
[illegible] with her face,
[illegible] then embrace."

[illegible] claim to be [illegible] who avow [illegible] and [illegible] sick. No [illegible] remedy whisky is their panacea. It is good for diseases chronic and acute, good for rheumatism, neuralga, or consumption, good for headache, sideache, toothache and heartache; good for fevers, good for chills, in short, a remedy for all the ills to which this mortal flesh is heir. We do not question that it may sometimes be used with propriety, but there is one serious difficulty in the way of that use. Few know just how much to take, and just when and where to take it. Then we have seen men take a dose or two and become suddenly so weak as hardly to be able to stand up, and to all human appearance the effect of the so-called remedy was worse than the disease; better have almost any disease, with your senses, than a drunkard. No, strong drink as a medicine is all a sham. If the system is chilled and needs a stimulus use more simple remedies, such as bathing in warm water, hot teas, with ginger or pepper, black or cayenne. These will not make a drunkard of you. These are much more economical, fewer doses will be required, and the beauty of the treatment is that you won't stay sick so long after you get well as when you rely on alcohol.

Medicine, like everything else, is all right in its place, but very many are literally doctored to death, when all they need is proper care. It is sad, but true, that there are men who are Church members, professedly the followers of Him who in His dying agonies refused the vinegar and gall offered him to produce stupefaction, because he would not die senseless, there are such professedly Christian men who drink whisky. Shame! Oh, shame on such a Christian! And some of these are very cunning, and suppose the act is hid. That cannot be. Sin's monstrous head will be lifted high. The hideous form, like Banquo's ghost, will not down. And if these could be concealed, there is one eye which does not sleep, into whose dread presence we are marching in the measured and solemn tread of life.

Paul did say to Timothy, "Use a little wine for thy stomach's sake and for thine oft infirmity," but that only proves that Paul and Timothy were both temperance men, for Paul says, "a little wine" you may use as a medicine. Timothy surely was not in the habit of drinking, as so many of our young men are, or he would not have needed such advice. Besides, the apostle said use "a little wine." The harmless, innocent grape juice, not the brandy, gin, ale, beer, bitters, and all sorts of slops made up of dirty water, colored with burned sugar, logwood, and seasoned with tartaric acid, strychnine, sugar of lead, concocted in vats which seethe in dark and unwholesome places where the very atmosphere is made poisonous with stench, and heavy and thick with mephitic odors.

Let every preacher in the land lift his voice against this destroyer. It is the curse of curses—the very concentration of all that is bad in human life and human society.

What Shall the End Be.

The world trembles under the tread of gathored and gathering armies. It seems at this writing that we are on the eve of a terrible crash of arms between two of the principal nations of the world, Russia and England. The carnage will be frightful—the waste of treasure awful if the programme is carried out. Russia is flushed with her recent victory over Turkey, and will fight with increased vim and experience on that account. On the other hand, England has the mastery of the sea and the longest purse. It will be a battle between giants. And then other nations, more or less interested from policy or ambition, may become involved. Who can tell where the end will be!

But the saddest feature of the whole matter is that the principals are Christians. In the pulpits of both these lands thousands of ministers constantly declare the gospel of peace as the boon of heaven to man. What a commentary on the practical Christianity of the world, that the most skillful and prolonged diplomacy has failed to settle the disturbing questions. But then this is not chargable to Christiantty, but in spite of it. It only shows that we are a long way from the millinium. It only tells us how much we yet have to do. With the Lord one day is as a thousand years and a thousand years as one day. The time will come when peace will reign on earth, and the words of the prophet will be fulfilled, when "the sword shall be beaten into the plowshare and the spear into the pruning hook." But that day is in the distance. In these lands and in all lands the men who make history are not always men of God. Nations, like individuals, are fond of power and are ambitious. Nations, like individuals, are selfish and so wars are born out of badness.

But at the same time let us not forget that good may come in some way. Cannon balls kill men, it is true, but at the same time they knock down the walls of prejudice and destroy the gates which have too strongly confined the races within old and narrow areas. The battering in of these walls and gates lets in the rest of the world and with it goes the gospel. Grand armies herald God's missionaries with open bibles. The church is built; the sermon is preached, the prayer offered, the hymn sung where these things could not have been if some force had not opened the way. The hope is that these wars will result in the complete evangilization of European Turkey, as one of the certain results.

The Release of Gen. Anderson.

The Supreme Court refused the application for a new trial, and at noon on last Monday Gen. Anderson was set at liberty, and he at once entered upon his duties as Deputy Collector of Customs.

In refusing the motion for a new trial, Chief Justice Manning in stating the unanimous opinion of the Court, gave a full discussion of all the points in the case. The Court reiterates its judgment and proves conclusively that the proceedure before the lower court was illegal, because the information against Gen. Anderson did not conform to the law, and because the document on which he was tried was not a legal document, lacking the necessary certification.

Enough is said in the decision to indicate clearly what the decision of the court would be on the merits of the Returning Board case, if brought before it. But as a legal document the decision is very able and in the case in hand is unanswerable. The court gave particular attention to every prominent point made by Attorney General Ogden in his argument, and the severe handling he received will, we suspect, lead him hereafter to accept as final a unanimous decision of this Supreme Court.

We give the concluding paragraphs of the decision:

If this court had yielded to the impassioned and justifiable zeal of the prosecuting officer, or had been swayed by the feeling, natural and spontaneous among all good men, of detestation of a great crime against free government, and the rights of the people and by reason thereof, had permitted its judgment to be clouded by passion or warped by love of applause, or to be influenced by any consideration other than its duty with sedulous care to ascertain the law and with firm purpose to apply it, it would be unworthy of the high place it holds in the government of the State. It would argue a deplorable state of public morals if it could be confidently assumed beforehand in a case such as this what the decision of a court would be from the known political affiliation or antipathies of its members. It would be a public calamity, the extent of which could not be measured, if a court should prevent the escape of an accused person by torturing the well settled principles of law, applied through long years to criminal prosecutions with unvarying uniformity, and bend them to the accomplishment of partisan desires.

Rather let it be known of all men that a court can consider neither expediency nor policy; that it cannot shape its judgment either to realize the hopes of friends or to quiet the fears of foes; and that judges may abhor a malefactor and yet refuse to condemn him contrary to the law.

It is therefore ordered that a rehearing is refused, and that our judgment in this case remain undisturbed.

New Orleans Seamen's Friend Society.

This vigorous organization is doing a good work for the Lord. The chaplain, Rev. L. H. Pease, has been for several years at his post and commands the respect of all who know him for his devotion to his work. A large reading room is maintained on Esplanade street, and several religious and temperance meetings are held each week which are largely attended. A good Sunday School is maintained. Services are conducted in English and Scandinavian.

This Society is auxiliary to the American Seamen's Friend Society of New York, which Society employs the chaplain. The anniversary of the New Orleans Society was held in Carondelet Street M. E. Church, South, and we publish the excellent sermon by the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. Mathews. The following constitute the New Orleans Board of Management: Col. Wm Wright, U. S. Shipping Commissioner, President; Dr. C. C. Lyons, 1st Vice President; Hon. Rufus Waples, 2d Vice President; Rev. L. H. Pease, Secretary; C. H. Shute, Esq., Treasurer; Gen. Cyrus Bussey; H. B. M. Consul, A. de Grenier de Fonltague; Rev. J. C. Hartzell, B. D.; Rev. J. H. McCarty, D. D.; Rev. J. Mathews, D.D.; Messrs. Thomas A. Adams, T. J. Woodward, John Nelson and Ed. C. Palmer.

One dollar and fifty cents pay for the SOUTHWESTERN for the balance of the year.

New Orleans University.

The second term of the present scholastic year closed on Friday, the 22d ult., with one hundred students in attendance, and an average daily attendance during the term of over eighty. The past term has been especially successful. The students have been generally attentive to their duties and everything has moved along in its accustomed channel. Dr. McCarty has made the Theological Department interesting and prosperous.

A medical class has been organized during the past term, and it is becoming a special feature in the institution. The lectures are peculiarly suited to beginners in this most import branch of science. Dr. Newman, the Dean of the Medical Faculty, is indefatigable in his efforts, and with the aid and co-operation of his able fellow professors we expect to see, before long, this department of the University occupying the position that shall justly provoke the highest encomiums from the profession everywhere. Each professor is master of the branch on which he lectures, and if the students do not make thorough progress the fault will rest upon themselves.

Needed apparatus and suitable rooms for experiments and dissections we hope to procure in proper er time.

The third and last term of the present year opened on the 1st inst. It will be a term of unusual interest, because at its close we expect to graduate the first class of the University. It is a class of which the friends of the institution may well feel proud, and we expect speedily to see each member assuming high and responsible positions in society. Three of the four are anticipating a life of usefulness in the Master's vineyard. May their paths be bright. J. S. B.

From Houma, La.

We have just closed our first quarterly meeting, amidst a glorious outpouring of the Holy Spirit. The Houma Church, under the pastorate of Rev. A. E. P. Albert, who is very much beloved by all, is enjoying quite an extensive revival. Twenty-five precious souls have been converted, and fifty-three mourning friends surrounded the altar last night (March 24th) imploring the prayers of the church. Seventy-six persons partook of the Lord's supper; after which forty-five others joined on probation. The Sabbath-school, which numbered only thirteen scholars when Bro. Albert came here, has now an average attendance of one hundred and seven.

The choir, with sister Robinson at the organ and Mr. Pollard as musical conductor, is certainly a credit to the church. We were very agreeably surprised to note their attainments.

We bespeak much success for Methodism here. As I contemplate what I have heard and seen here, I am moved to say with the Psalmist: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me bless His holy name." Yours in Christ

E. WILLIAMS,
Presiding Elder.

Shaw University.

Dear Southwestern:—A gracious revival of religion is now in progress in our Church here. Already there has been nearly a score of conversions. Many of the students of the Shaw University are among the number. Very many more are still earnestly seeking a purification of the heart and a knowledge of sins forgiven.

The weather here for the past few weeks has been as favorable for farmers as could be asked. No heavy rains or cold winds, but warm sunshine with occasional showers. There is promise of an abundance of fruit of nearly every variety. W. W. H.

Our First Party

For Donley Co. Colony left Sherman on Feb. 10th. Seven heavily loaded wagons, some of them with 4500 pounds, containing supplies and general merchandise, seed, tools, plows, cultivators, etc., and hauled by 20 teams of mules and oxen.

Rev. W. A. Allen, J. W. Reckerd and J. H. Parks, our surveyor, have general command. Eleven others (including two ladies and one four months old baby), mostly young and vigorous men, compose the company. They drive 15 to 20 miles per day and will soon be on the ground and have the plows running. They carry large tents for immediate use. Another party will go (D. V.) about May 1st under less embarrassments from bad roads and weather. This is the best place for the purchase of outfits and our friends can have the benefit of best wholesale rates. L. H. CARHART, Hollow Rock Seminary, Tenn.

MR. EDITOR: There is no Hollow Rock Seminary, but there is a West Tennessee Seminary, located at Hollow Rock. The buildings do belong to us, and the school is under the patronage of the Central Tennessee Conference—not the Holston, as you have it. There is an indebtedness of about $600 on the Seminary. It is a chartered institution. It is the best arranged and neatest school building within our Conference bounds, well furnished and well located. The grounds embrace four acres. There is a small frame building to the right of the main building, erected last year, used as a music hall. All the institution needs is a principal to lead in the faculty. Bro. Chandler, only temporarily fills the chair.

Americans---not Negroes.

Rev. Dr. Tanner, editor of the Recorder, organ of the African M. E. Church wants the colored people to talk less about being negroes and more about being Americans. The suggestion is a good one, and coming from a leading man in the African Methodist Church has special weight.

The "black man's Church" argument is a very popular one in the mouths of African ministers in this region. We wish all such would heed the words of Dr. Tanner. He says;

"That we are colored, everybody knows. There is no use for us to go tooting it in the ear of the great public. The said great public is about tired of it; and it is time for us to be. There is no element of strength in it; nor any weakness. It is simply a fact and of no more importance than the color of the hair. To expect to make it some mighty power is nonsense. It has its use. The best thing to be done now is to bury it. We African Methodists have squeezed all the sweet out of the orange they think they have in hand. Another rallying cry must be given the people. They must be plainly told that there is no virtue in being white; no condemnation in being colored. Neither will save. They have need to know, as Wardsworth has it, only by the soul are peoples to be great and free."

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. H. Hardy, Okolona, Miss., "We have had seven recent accessions to the church. Amid strong opposition we press forward, trusting in the Lord."

Rev. B. F. Perny, Pass Christian, Miss., "We have commenced a meeting in which much spiritual interested is manifested. One person has professed conversion and two have united with the church. We recently baptised a lady who was over one hundred years old."

Rev. J. Gaston, Hansboro, Miss., "I have just completed my first round on this work. There have been in all the various appointments nine conversions and twenty accessions to the church. The prospects for the future are encouraging."

Rev. Isaac Hayward, Baton Rouge, La., "We have just held our quarterly meeting on The Plains work. There were fifty four communicants at the Lord's table. The pastor, Rev. Quall, has received twelve members into the church this year. He is much beloved by the people and is doing a good work."

Rev. Lewie Lane, Huntsville circuit, Texas, "A two days meeting just held, proved a great blessing to us. Our membership were greatly revived and encouraged. Six persons were received in full connection and five on probation and three backsliders reclaimed."

Rev. A. M. Gregory, Waco, Tex., "We are in the midst of one of the most gracious revivals ever known here. Meetings have been in progress but one week, and there have been twenty-five conversions and a hundred seekers are inquiring the way of salvation. Lord save the people is our prayer. May the Master direct and bless us."

Rev. Stephen Duncan, Clinton Street Church, New Orleans, writes that the first quarter of his year's work closes with an advance in all the interests of his church. The church has been blest with a good revival. Eight were converted. Two backsliders reclaimed. One had been received into full connection and nine on probation. The Sunday-school is large and interesting, and the congregations have improved.

Jas. W. Hudson, Monroe, La., "Our last quarterly services, commencing March 16th, were conducted by Rev. Jos. Dutch. He preached twice on the Sabbath to large congregations and with great power. The Spirit moved the hearts of the people. The meetings have been continued, and to this time (20th) there have been eighteen accessions to the church, and many are at the altar for prayers at each service. The attendance at Sunday-school on Sabbath morning was very large and an interesting address was delivered by one of the teachers, Mr. James Cook on "The Observance of the Sabbath."

Rev. Thomas Ward, Shelbyville, Tenn., "We are in the midst of a very gracious revival here in Scott's Chapel, which commenced Feb. 17. Up to this time sixteen persons have professed faith in Christ and there have been eighteen additions to church. The meeting still goes on and many seekers are found at the altar. May we have a yet more abundant baptism of the Spirit—our trust is in the Lord. The converts, with one or two exceptions, were members of our Sunday-school."

A big job of bridge building has just been done by the Pennsylvania railroad, which replaced its burned bridge over the Raritan river of New Brunswick, N. J., with a new structure over 1000 feet long in 126 hours; 500 men were employed, and it cost $20,000.

NEW YORK, March 26.—It is reported that England is making large purchases of horses in the West and Southwest for cavalry service in the English army. LONDON, April 1.—The Queen's proclamation was submitted to Parliament to-day. Her Majesty says that in consequence of the condition of Eastern affair and the intrests of the empire in the present great emergency, the military reserves are ordered to be called out for permanent service.

The proclamation further says that the necessity of taking steps for the maintenance of peace in connection with Eastern affairs and the protection of the interests of the empire constitute a great emergency within the meaning of the act of Parliament.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Mr Stephens, of Georgia, introduced in the House today the following bill:

The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed and required to raise, to keep and maintain the amount of coin and bullion in the treasury at or above $100,000,000, and when it exceeds that amount he shall redeem the present outstanding United States legal tender notes, when presented in sums of $1000 and upwards, with coin of full legal standard, but when the metal in the treasury sinks below $50,000,000, such redemption shall cease, and he shall exchange the present issue of four per centum bonds at par for such notes as may be presented until the metal in the treasury rises over $100,000,000, when he shall resume the redemption in coin, and thus continue to redeem in coin or bonds, as the state of the metal fund in the treasury may require. Under the act the Secretary of the Treasury shall also change the plates for printing United States legal tender notes so that they shall bear simply the inscription that they are exchangeable in bonds.

Abraham Lincoln's Integrity.

The death of Mr. Denton, of Delaware county, Iowa, recalls a story which he used to tell. In the early days of the Illinois Central Railway the line was not fenced, and one day two cows belonging to a Methodist clergyman were killed. Being sued for damages, the company resolved to make a test case of it. The President of the road directed Mr. Denton to take $500 in gold and go to Springfield and retain Abraham Lincoln, whom he knew well, for the company. Mr. Lincoln replied to his request, "I am sorry you did not come yesterday, Nick, for I have been retained by the preacher and his friends." Denton explained fully the importance of the case to the company, and then, pulling two buckskin bags filled with gold out of his pockets, he put them down on the table before the lawyer, with a startling clink saying: "Mr. Lincoln, the President of the company authorized me to hand you $500 to take our case." Mr. Lincoln jumped to his feet, flushed with anger. "Nick Denton," he said, "I have given my promise to that preacher and his friends, and the Illinois Central has not money enough to buy me away from his side. I don't know that I shall get a dollar from him, but I'll do my best to make your company pay for those cows." Denton said that he never felt so mean and so small in his life as he did at that moment. And in 1860, though a Democrat, he used to say, during the presidential campaign, that Lincoln was the noblest man in America.—Chicago Tribune.

April 14, 1878.—THE SCRIPTURES FOUND AND SEARCHED.

SCRIPTURE.—Chron. 34: 14-28.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me.—John 5: 39.

TOPIC.—Condemned by the law.

[Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.]

The Law Found (14-17).—Nothing could better indicate the neglect of every thing that related to the temple and its service than the losing of the book of the law which should have been its most carefully guarded treasure. How came it to be lost? The answer is speculative. Perhaps some faithful servitor of Jehovah, during the severe persecution carried on by Manasseh, hid the sacred roll in some secret place in the temple. It is a supposition altogether likely; for it has always been true that when men would not allow the servants of God to live, they, also, would not allow the book of God to retain its place in the sanctuary or in the homes of the people. If, as is probable, this happened in the first half of the reign of that monarch, and the hand that hid it was soon forever [illegible] have remained [illegible] years in its place of concealment. During all that time, if this be true, the priests must have [illegible] tradition for their [illegible] ducting the services of [illegible] in teaching the people.

[illegible] Read (18).—Shaphan appears to have attached very little [illegible] to the discovery of the [illegible] reported his report concerning the progress of the work [illegible] anything about the [illegible] evidently, was more in[illegible] than in the musty [illegible]

It is noticeable [illegible] speak of it as "The [illegible] but simply as "a [illegible] began to read [illegible] of [illegible] though he [illegible] without its [illegible]

Lord concerning the words he had just heard.

The reading of the law was a revelation to him of the reason why Judah was reduced to its then deplorable condition, and of the fact that there were worse things yet in store for it, if they could not be averted. Pestilence, fever, the sword, blasting and mildew, famine, and captivity so terrible that they would say, in the morning, "would God it were even," and in the evening "would God it were morning,"—these were the unusual weapons in the hands of God. The neglect and the loss of the book, had in no way hindered the operation of the curses. The fact is in written in nature as well as in the book of the law, that the nation that acts contrary to the commands of God shall perish. The book but makes the law legible and renders it unnecessary to find out by bitter experience, 1st what his commands are, and 2d, what is the penalty of transgressing them. And the condition of Judah without the Scriptures well illustrates the danger there is to a nation of ignoring this book of the law. Any man is untrustworthy and even dangerous, whose principles are not those of this book. Any community is an unsafe place to live in from which it is banished. And any nation that discards it will soon have in it those elements of discord and of corruption that are the prophets of its fail. The last thing that we can afford to have taken out of the public school is the Bible. Though church and state may, and ought to be, divorced, yet the state and religion ought ever to be wedded.

Present Sympathy.

Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness, speak approving, cheering words while their ears hear them and while their hearts can be thrilled by them. The things you mean to say when they are gone, say before they go. The flowers you mean to send for their coffins, send to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them. If my friends have alabaster-boxes laid away, full of perfumes of sympathy and affection, which they intend to break over my dead body, I would rather they would bring them out in my weary hours, and open them, that I may be refreshed and cheered by them while I need them. I would rather have a coffin without a eulogy than a life without the [illegible] love and sympathy. [illegible] learn to anoint our friends beforehand for their burial. Post[illegible] kindness does not cheer the [illegible] spirit. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over the weary days.

V. FOURTH YEAR.—Review of the whole Course. Written Sermon.

TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons, Vol. II. Porter's Compendium of Methodism.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.

3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS, Secretary.

Tortures that need not be Endured.

People suffer a great deal of pain unnecessarily. Among tortures that need not be endured are those inflicted by the rheumatism and the gout, since the acrid element in the blood which produces them by contact with the sensative coverings of the muscles and joints may be eleminated by the use of that matchless depurent, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, before the inflamatory symptoms are developed to any great extent. When it is considered what excruciating tortures rheumatism inflicts, and what a tendancy it has, when fully developed to at[illegible] the advisibility of an early [illegible] a reliable antidote becomes at [illegible] apparent. The rheumatic virus is expelled from the blood by the increased action of the kidneys—which act as strainers—produced by the Bitters, and the sufferer will find if he uses this supreme defensive agent, that he will be protected against a return of the agonizing complaint. Dyspepsia, fever and ague, liver and bowel complaints and other maladies, are also cured by this admirable remedy. apr.4 4t.

Embracing Twenty Thousand Citations of Scripture Texts, and of Discourses founded thereon, under a Twofold Arrangement:
I. TEXTUAL.
In which all the principal Texts of Scripture, together with the various Themes they have suggested, are quoted and set forth in the order of the Sacred Canon, from Genesis to Revelation; to which is added a list of passages cited from the Old Testament in the New.

In which Bible Themes, with reference to Texts and Authors, are classified and Arranged in Alphabetical Order, forming at once a Key to Homiletical Literature in general, and a complete Topical Index of the Scriptures on a New Plan.—With valuable Appendices.
By J. H. PETTINGILL, A. M.
With an Introduction by GEO. E. DAY, D.D., Professor of Theology, Yale College.
THE HOMILETICAL INDEX is undenominational, citing and referring to the published discourses and writings of the best preachers and commentators of all ages and of every name.
It is a work of great research, unique in its character, and so admirably arranged as to bring within the compass of 320 octavo pages the cream of hundreds of volumes, and to transform every Bible scholar's library, and our large public libraries, into one complete Homiletical Commentary that can be easily handled, while it refers him, at once, to what any one of some thousands of leading divines have said or written upon any particular passage of Scripture.
Its object and plan are very heartily commended by many of our representative men of different denominations, who have had the opportunity of inspecting, in advance, specimen pages. Four Appendices, containing much valuable matter, have since been added, and it is believed that the whole volume, now complete, will fully justify their favorable anticipation.
